Steel Frame Houses With Large Drip Pans Under Angle Eaves

← Eave and drip pan at post.

← Eave and drip pan between posts.

The condensation drip pans are made of heavy galvanized steel,  $1\frac{1}{4}$  inches wide and  $1\frac{1}{4}$  inches deep. Large, so that they do not fill up with dirt and run over. Each length is set loose. They can be readily taken out and cleaned, if necessary. The drip pan is held in place by a separate casting at each post. The casting has a  $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch galvanized drip pipe threaded into it every third post. Carries all condensation down to the ground and is large enough so as not to fill up.

Remember when they used to think narrow greenhouses with lots of air were best for carnations?

Now the best stock is grown in houses 36 feet wide and wider.

Since we designed our new pipe frame construction with bolted through galvanized steel fittings, it has been possible to build semi-iron houses up to fifty feet and wider, with safety, and they surely grow good stock.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

MEMORIAL DAY NUMBER

How Our Number Two Is the Same And How It Differs From Our Number One Construction

The Number Two is a full iron house that we can sell you for the same price as a Semi-Iron.

When we say the Number Two Construction is a full iron frame, we say it because that's the only thing you can say and tell the truth.

POSTS

It has exactly the same guaranteed Wrought iron posts used in the Number One, and is imbedded in concrete the same way.

RAFTERS

The rafters are steel of the same high grade, and are spaced 8 ft. 4 ins. apart instead of 12 ft. 6 ins. as in the Number One.

GUSSET PLATE

The gusset plates that join the steel rafter to the Wrought iron are double, one on each side of the post and rafter, just as in the Number One. It only differs in being cast iron and having the rafter cap clasp and eave plate supporting lug cast right on it, making a solid one-piece casting, having ample strength, besides looking mighty neat.

EAVE PLATE

It's the same galvanized steel angle.

ROOF BAR CLASPS

PURLINS

All purlins are angle steel fastened to the rafter with steel angle knees.

COLUMNS

CYPRESS

We put only one grade of cypress in all our houses, whether commercial or private, and that grade is the best grade.

HARDWARE

All vent hinges are galvanized, have brass pins and six screw holes.

GLASS

There are six lights of glass between each rafter, instead of nine, as in Number One Construction. In both, 16x24 is used.

THE DIFFERENCE

So you see that practically the only difference between the two constructions is the eave gusset plate and the number of lights between rafters. Of course houses of the Number One in widths wider than 40 feet have trussing between the columns. In either construction, however, only two columns and no trussing is used up to and including the 40 foot width.

WIDTHS

The Number Two is made in eight widths—11, 18, 25, 28, 33, 35, 39, 40.

So why put up a Semi-Iron or pipe frame house, when we can sell you this full iron frame Number Two Construction for the same money?

May is Planting Time

For Hardy Lilies in Open Ground or in the Greenhouse

(Ideal for the Perennial Border)

Complete Cultural Directions for the asking

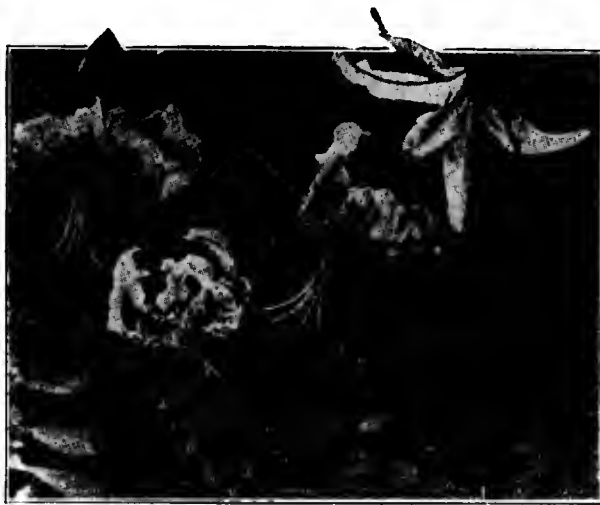

Recommend them to your customers for garden planting—they will, no doubt, prove a “growing advertisement” for your store. L. Rubrum is hardy and thrives from year to year.

(Extract from Florists' Exchange, Issue April 22, 1922)
By FRITZ BAHR

RUBRUM LILIES

“Did you ever plant too many? For the average florist it means just this: He can get along without rubrum Lilies, even not miss them. On the other hand, those who once get into the habit of using them usually find them such a profitable and at the same time easily handled crop that they try each year to do all possible to prolong the flowering period, which with the help of cold storage bulbs is not hard to do. Every florist with a retail trade should grow rubrum Lilies. There is nothing finer for decorative work, for the corsage or the floral design. A plant grown in a pot makes a showy plant, and if not sold as such will frequently furnish you with flowers for three weeks from the time the first flower is ready to be cut until the last bud begins to open. The further away you are located from the larger cut flower markets, the more valuable are rubrum Lilies in your own establishment, the more necessary it is for you to try and have a few plants to cut from. To plant cold storage bulbs now into 5-in. or 6-in. pots is about all the work you will have with them, outside of watering. They will grow almost anywhere in or outdoors, and bloom in late Summer. Try this for a change: Plant in 6-in. pots now; let the plants come along in a cool house. About May 15 take them outdoors and plant pot and all in a bed or coldframe, deep enough to cover the top of the pot about 4 in. When in flower use the individual blossoms, or if you plant out leave them out all Winter. Every plant will flower again the next year and better than before.”

Mr. Bahr is a “live” florist-grower in Highland Park, Ill., and a recognized authority on matters horticultural.

FLOWERS FITLY HONOR FALLEN

Tradition, supported by human sentiment, has established a holiday, which, of all the holidays in the year, is most favorable for the expansion of the florists' business, through the creation of new customers by instilling in the public the desire to honor the nation's brave.

ASTER business was beyond expectations, Mothers' day was an unbounded success, and Memorial day, the last of the trio of lucrative spring holidays, offers opportunity for profits as generous as its two predecessors afforded. At Memorial day it is the florist's mission to bring to the minds of prospective customers the fact that reverence is due the heroes of the six wars in which our country has been engaged during its life, and due our forefathers who endured suffering and hardship in order that we might enjoy to a fuller extent and make more useful the life that has been given us. It is the florist's opportunity to make clear that monuments and books are evidences and records with which to acquaint posterity with the deeds of heroism and valor of men of yesteryear, but that flowers are representative of our feelings and emotions today.

Competition with candy and other commodities, strong at other holidays, is naturally eliminated at Memorial day, as the appeal is entirely to sentiment. This is the day when citizens of the United States in all walks of life pause in the turmoil of business to do reverence to the nation's dead. There is but a single thought in the mind of the nation on this day, and that is to find some fitting and appropriate way of honoring the departed.

Appeal to Sentiment.

What more fitting time is there for the florist to come forward with his wares and to expand his business by increasing his hold on his old customers and by adding new ones? To expand one's business, it is necessary to create a larger market for one's goods; in order to create a larger market, one must make additional customers. And why not take full advantage of a time when possible buyers are thinking along our line to bring them into the fold and make permanent customers of them? At Memorial day is an appropriate time to make our appeal, because at that time the people whom we wish to make permanent customers are

Cover them over with beautiful flowers;
Deck them with garlands, these brothers of ours;
Lying so silent, by night and by day,
Sleeping the years of their manhood away;
Years they had marked for the joys of the brave;
Years they must waste in the sloth of the grave.
All the bright laurels that promised to bloom
Fell to the earth when they went to the tomb.
So in our minds we will name them once more,
So in our hearts we will cover them o'er;
Roses and lilies and violets blue
Bloom in our hearts for the brave and the true.
Cover them over—yes, cover them over—
Parent, and husband, and brother and lover;
Crown in your hearts these dead heroes of ours,
And cover them over with beautiful flowers.

—Will Carleton.

in an impressionable state of mind.

A profitable method of attracting the eye of the new customer is to make a special offer in the thing most fitting for the special occasion and advertise it as such. Memorial day wreaths make an excellent special offer at this time. The materials are not expensive, the time consumed in decorating the wreaths is not great, and they can be put up ahead of the regular Memorial day rush, so that the offer can be made reasonable enough to appeal to a wide circle of trade. One excellent point about such wreaths is that they will remain in good condition for a longer period of time than will flowers and can be easily placed upon graves.

The price of the special offering should be made high enough to be compatible with good workmanship, as quality will be remembered long after the price is forgotten, and unless your appeal carries a special feature the object aimed at will not be accomplished. To push a leader which is not up in quality will be more harmful to your future business than the added price may be. First impressions are lasting, and if they are not favorable, there is seldom a chance to correct them.

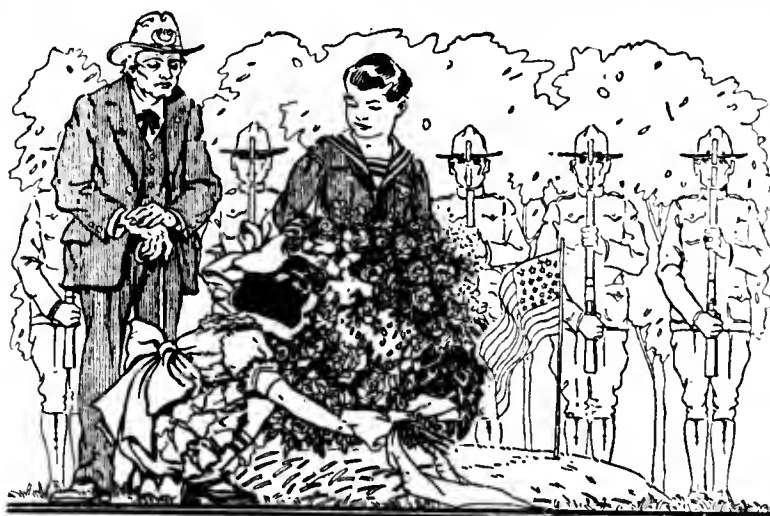

This year the florist has the entire field for Memorial day, since there will be few garden flowers at that time, and he can almost make his special offer to suit his business.

Memorial day should not be referred to in advertising copy as "the old soldiers' day." It is no longer that; it is far more than that now. What constitutes an appropriate messenger of sentiment should be given a prominent place in your advertising. The noted philosopher and essayist, Ralph Waldo Emerson, said that flowers are appropriate gifts for all occasions. They are even more than that; they are the embodiment and representatives of life, with all of its enthusiastic pulsations, love and tenderness; they convey the thought intended when all others fail.

Planning Campaign.

An advertising campaign for Memorial day must, of necessity, be carried out more or less in accordance with the needs of the individual business, as advertising which would be appropriate for one business may be entirely unsuited to any other. If you are contemplating a special offer for the occasion, it would be well to look into the field of supply before making your decision, and select the field where the supply is most abundant. In this way you will insure yourself against a shortage.

where the daily paper of the town reaches all of the citizens, this daily paper is your best means of advertising, but if, on the other hand, your location is in a residence district of a large city, a good folder or circular letter, announcing the special offer you are making, will bring best results, because the advertising rates in metropolitan papers are too high for a small florist. This is true because the area from which he has to draw is so limited that only a small proportion of the readers of the paper are his possible customers.

Having selected an offer and arranged for the materials, make all arrangements for making up the offer and for deliveries. A delivery schedule worked out beforehand will be of great help when the rush of orders comes; the same should be done in your make-up work. In this way you will minimize confusion to a great extent and you will make it possible for your employees to render better and more prompt service. In this way you will impress your customers. People respond readily to good service and appreciate prompt action.

What Others Have Done.

A few of the advertisements which have been successful in pulling business at Memorial day are reproduced here. The Allied Florists' Association ran an excellent advertisement in the Chicago Tribune in 1921. The advertisement depicted a grave and a young couple placing wreaths and plants on the grave, and included the well known verse by Will Carleton that appears on the preceding page. A second advertisement, shown on page 27, was run by the same association in the Chicago Tribune in 1920; it shows a line of young, stalwart soldiers at "Present Arms" before a grave of a departed war veteran. An old Civil war veteran is standing near the grave, while a young girl is placing a wreath on the grave. The few words on the bottom of the advertisement call attention to the significance of Memorial day, the abundance of flowers at the time, the moderate prices and the fact that flowers can be delivered to any part of the country by telegraph. The advertisement from a Milwaukee paper, reproduced on this page, was another coöperative piece of publicity which symbolized the sentiment of the day to get attention.

The advertisement on page 29, run in the Chicago Tribune by A. Lange, whose store is in the heart of the Loop, is a good illustration of how a city florist may advertise successfully in newspapers. This advertisement, as will be seen from the cut, calls attention to wreaths and clusters of favorite flowers to deck the graves of fallen ones. A special offer is made of wreaths of magnolia leaves and galax, adorned with a cluster of roses, also of wreaths of cape flowers in many varieties, from $3 to $25. Peonies and carnations are advertised, with the prices per dozen. Boxes of mixed flowers as low as $2 each are offered.

The advertising of prices of flowers and plants for Memorial day in the newspapers of a smaller community is illustrated by last year's insertion by the L. Turner Sons, Kenosha, Wis. This firm also made up a folder which was mailed to many of its customers with good results.

MAKERS OF MEMORIAL DAY.

Origin of Observance.

Since shortly after the Civil war, when our country was torn asunder over the question of slavery, May 30, north of the Mason and Dixon line, has been a special flower day. This at first was a day set apart on which the Grand Army of the Republic decorated the graves of comrades who had fallen in battle. While it was a day that in the beginning did not mean much to the florists' industry, yet these old veterans were faithful each year in its celebration; it was their custom to gather flowers, mostly through donations, to strew the graves of those of their comrades who had made the supreme sacrifice; many pilgrimages were also made to the woods and fields, and wild flowers were gathered for memorial purpose. But, as time passed and, with it, these old veterans, a new and busier generation took up this work of love. They found it more convenient and less expensive to go to the florist and buy flowers than to spend the time in either gathering donations or going into the country for the flowers.

The Three Ways.

Since May 30 has been set apart as the day on which the whole nation stops to pay tribute to the memory of her sons who laid down their lives on the altar of its defense, there have been just three ways in which the memory of these men has been perpetuated, and the rising generation has taught the lesson that no man ever sacrificed his life in the nation's cause and was forgotten.

One of these methods is by oratory. In this the greater part of the people must stand by and listen. There is a small part of the 110,000,000 souls that make up this nation who are gifted with speech, who have the eloquence to stand before an audience of their countrymen and tell of the deeds of these fallen heroes. I have heard men speak on such occasions so you would feel that the battle of Bull Run was being fought in your presence. Under such circumstances the speaker often becomes the object of hero worship.

Then another way is by erecting great shafts of granite, with the record of a division, a regiment, or perhaps an individual who had accomplished some specially hazardous task or through his ability as a leader of men had gained distinction, inscribed upon it. But is this method not as cold as the marble that is used for the purpose? The shaft becomes one of the sights of the city and a memorial to the sculptor who designed it.

But now we come to the human way, the way in which the most humble citizens of the nation can take an active part. And as they strew the graves of men who have laid down their lives in the nation's wars, such thoughts as this will possess their very being: "These are the men, unknown though they were in life to me, who laid down their lives that this country might be a better place for me in which to live, and it is my duty to play my part and be such a citizen of this republic as will be worthy of this sacrifice." This is the real meaning of Memorial day. But enough for the founding and meaning of the day.

Veterans of Three Wars.

Since Memorial day first came into being, there have been two wars, the Spanish-American war and the recent great World war. Each has added its toll of heroes who have laid down their lives that the Stars and Stripes might float over a free and untrammelled people. Just as the soldiers of the Grand Army of the Republic determined that the deeds accomplished by their comrades of the Civil war should never fade from the memory of the American people, just so determined are the veterans of the Spanish-American war and the members of the American Legion and the War Mothers of America that the valor of the men who died in this cause should be perpetuated, not in flowery speeches, not in shafts of marble alone, but in the fleshy tablets of the hearts of the American people. This is the reason why May 30, 1921, was the largest flower day in the history of the business for that occasion.

Our nation is not yet 150 years old, and yet today we are decorating the graves of the heroes of six wars. Who would dare to prophesy what another century will bring forth?

Florists' Service.

Now, this article is not written from a patriotic standpoint, but with the idea of arousing the florists of this country to one of the greatest opportunities that ever knocked at their door. Memorial day will last as long as the nation. What is the florists' duty in the matter? In these days we hear much about the florist's commercializing such occasions as Mothers' day and Memorial day. Flowers must be had for both of these occasions; is there anything wrong in the florist telling the public he has flowers and that he is in business to provide flowers for just such occasions? Commercialism is not an epithet to be ashamed of. Could anyone take offense at the florist for making suggestions for the use of flowers on these occasions? There is not a retail industry in this country that does not advertise its wares at Christmas, and nothing is thought of it. Is there any more disrespect in the florist advertising Mothers' day or Memorial day than the birth of our Savior, or Good Friday, or Easter, the anniversary of His death and resurrection? It is the plain duty of the florist to pay no attention to this petty carping, but by intelligent and systematic publicity make Memorial day one of the greatest flower days of the year. Push the day; devise new ways to use flowers on this day, and you will be doing the nation a service by keeping the memory of its fallen heroes fresh in the minds of the people.

WREATHS FOR EVERY PURSE.

A Prevailing Appeal.

Sometimes—Memorial day is one of the times—the American public acts for purely sentimental reasons, but not often. Generally the practical sense, which is innate, appeals. And whenever the sentimental can be combined with the practical to a common end the result is magical. This explains in part the success and popularity of the wreath for Memorial day purposes.

The wreath is neat; it is emblematic; it is dignified; it is easily portable, and it is convenient to arrange on a grave in a cemetery where the water hydrants are at a distance, the pails are leaky and all the people about, it seems, are at that hydrant at the same time in a fine pool of mud. And wreaths are substantial. This is the public's point of view and it insures demand.

And the supply is as flexible as you want to make it, while every wreath can be given its own individuality. This is a powerful selling point. The clever florist can take a 16-inch circle of galax, magnolia or other prepared foliage, assemble some roses, carnations, or other flowers, add some ribbon, and the job is done. And the price of the wreath can be regulated by the material used, of course.

A Past and Future.

One might say that the modern-day wreath in the florists' business is a product of evolution. In the beginning the wreath was made "from the bottom up"; that is, the florist did everything from constructing the base to tying in the cut flowers and fern, or whatever was used. All this, of course, took time, and limited the output. Then followed the galax wreath, product of Boston, it is said, and competition spurred on business. This was followed by the magnolia wreath, which soon became so popular that trainloads were consumed every Memorial day. And the florist really began to produce. The evolution is still in progress.

Getting back to present-day conditions, it can be said that the most of those who now do a big business in Memorial day wreaths started in a small way and worked gradually up. By study of their experience one finds that it is foolhardy to start in too "big" at first. Of course, it is true that if the wreaths do not sell so well as expected they can be kept in a cool and not too dry place, to be used at a later time for funerals, etc.

Doubtless, the average florist carries several wreaths of magnolia leaves in stock at all times, in readiness to make up for sudden calls. And perhaps he makes three or four 18-inch wreaths from a basket of the leaves. This would make the wreaths good and full. But by making the wreaths not quite so great in circumference and with the leaves not overlapped so much, one can get five, six or even seven 16-inch wreaths from the same basket of stock. Most florists, however, buy their wreaths ready-made. For Memorial day sale the 16-inch wreath is about right for average use.

Fitting the Purse.

From a study of a number of advertisements on wreaths for Memorial day, it is found that the average price is low, except where something special and a great deal out of the ordinary is handled. But, as intimated before, the ingenious florist can make them up for any price. For instance, a wreath can be made on wire or rattan, much like the Christmas wreath of holly. Made up in a 15-inch size, these can be trimmed with a little ribbon and a few flowers of any kind on hand, and so made "to fit the purse."

Even though the magnolia wreath came in to take preference over the galax wreath for Memorial day, nevertheless the peony has remained "the" flower for wreath use for this occasion. In making a wreath with peonies, care must be taken not to make too heavy an effect. Sprenger, rightly used, will lighten the effect and valley will add a telling touch. Color can be introduced by a little chiffon, a few ficus and pandanus leaves, or something of the kind.

Ribbon, rightly used, is always advantageous.

The business in wreaths can be speeded up by a little advertising during the week preceding Memorial day. A good idea is to run in a local paper a picture of a well made wreath, with a little description and the price featured prominently, as a number of florists did last year. Under the picture of the wreath put something like this: "Wreath as shown in cut, about sixteen inches in diameter, $—, including box for shipping. A large selection of everlasting wreaths, either with or without clusters of flowers." Such an advertisement will bring in business.

BELGIAN GLASS INDUSTRY.

The first three months of 1922 produced a considerable degree of uncertainty in the Belgian glass industry, particularly because of price reductions by American window glass manufacturers, as well as on account of rising prices of certain suitable raw materials following the increased activity of the last quarter of 1921. When the American producers announced a reduction in price of nearly twenty-five per cent, numerous cancellations of orders resulted. In an effort to reduce their prices accordingly, the Belgian glass manufacturers immediately announced a wage cut, since price reductions on raw materials and fuel were difficult to obtain.

In consequence of the decrease in demand, furnaces which were to have been relighted have been left idle. Since increased stocks have been reported, perhaps more will be extinguished. At the present prices quoted by competitors of other countries, the demand for Belgian glass is slack.

FOR HOME PLANTING.

Without exception the seedsmen of Manhattan are enjoying a banner counter trade, most of which is cash, which means much at this time. Several give credit for much of this enthusiasm to the City Gardens Club of New York, which is trying to beautify the city through the planting of flowers and shrubbery. The planting list distributed by this organization is a most practical one and worthy of wide circulation. Here it is:

CURES PRIMULA POISONING.

After trying all the known remedies with no success, I believe I have discovered a cure for primula poisoning that is sure and swift. Peel an orange—one as fresh as can be had, for dried peel will not do—double the yellow side out and hold the convex side near the affected places. Squeeze the acid that spurts from the little globules of the peel over the poisoned places and rub it in well.

Repeat this every half hour three times. If your hands are affected all over, grind the peel finely in the meat grinder and rub the pulp all over the hands, letting it start to dry on. Rub it off gradually as it dries. I have nullified severe itch and inflammation by this remedy in half an hour. As primulas do not poison everybody, this remedy may not cure everybody affected, but try it, anyway.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Iola, Kan.—The wind and hail storm which visited Iola and vicinity Sunday afternoon, April 16, completely demolished the glass, as well as the frames holding it, at the Iola Greenhouses, and, according to the statement of the proprietor, A. L. Dygard, destroyed every plant on the place. Unfortunately, the insurance on the greenhouses had run out a short time before and, by an oversight, had not been renewed. The loss was complete, and since that time Mr. Dygard has had to buy flowers at wholesale in order to supply his local trade. In view of the fact that he had a mortgage of $4,000 on his real estate and a total sum of $2,386.32 outstanding as liabilities, due firms in the trade, Mr. Dygard is asking a settlement on the basis of 50 cents on the dollar. He believes that if the accounts against him can be thus settled, he will be able to get on his feet in a year's time. If, on the other hand, the mortgage is foreclosed, and the creditors press their claims, he fears the return to them will be small. One creditor, in a neighboring city, accepted this settlement after seeing the damage wrought by the storm at Iola. To other creditors Mr. Dygard has sent a statement of the situation and asking that they accept a similar settlement.

Memphis, Tenn.—W. O. King, receiver, has advertised for sale the physical assets, trade, name and good will of the Memphis Floral Co. This business has been in operation for more than fifty years. Bids will be received by W. M. Cox, clerk and master of the Chancery court of Shelby county, until noon May 20.

Fort Dodge, Ia.—C. W. Gadd, to whom E. E. Nordwall some time ago made a common law assignment of his business, has sold it to Otto A. Schroeder, of Green Bay, Wis., for the sum of $15,000. The terms are $5,000 cash, $5,800 by assuming the mortgages now on the property and the balance of $4,200 in a second mortgage. Mr. Schroeder took possession May 1. A dividend will be declared on all claims properly sworn to and filed on or before May 27. As the liabilities are in excess of $20,000, the total dividends will be, thinks Trustee Gadd, between thirty and forty per cent.

At Memorial Day the Magnolia Wreath Is the Florists' Stand-by.

QUARANTINE CONFERENCE

BARS WILL BE LET DOWN.

Promise at Close of Hearing.

Material relaxation of the present regulations surrounding the importation of orchids, bulbs and other products was promised by C. L. Marlatt, chairman of the federal horticultural board, May 15, following representations of a number of those interested that the present requirements are unfair and discriminatory. This announcement followed nine hours of charges and countercharges regarding the acts of the board, in the course of which the legality of all the orders issued under the provisions of the plant quarantine act was challenged and the Secretary of Agriculture was asked personally to cite the authority under which the orders were issued.

While the federal horticultural board was severely criticized by many who felt that its restrictions were unduly drastic, state agricultural officials and representatives of the nurserymen declared that they were 100 per cent back of the board in its enforcement of quarantine 37 and asked, if any changes were made, they be to tighten up the restrictions rather than to weaken them.

Representatives of a number of foreign governments attended the meeting to lay their cases before the board and to urge that changes be made in the regulations, under which the free entry of their more important products would be permitted, subject to such inspection and certification as might be deemed necessary.

S. A. F. Statement.

The representatives of the Society of American Florists declared that they credited the board with the best intentions and asked that they be credited with a genuine desire to cooperate with the board in carrying out its legitimate functions. They said they considered the federal horticultural board a necessary and useful body, provided it adheres to its proper legal function—that of advising the Secretary of Agriculture how to combat existing pests and plant diseases and to prevent the introduction of new or dangerous ones.

"We believe in government control of imports and in thorough inspection and certification of imported plant products when necessary," said James McIntosh, chairman of the S. A. F. tariff and legislative committee, "but we protest vigorously against quarantine 37 as administered, which operates as a blanket economic embargo."

The meeting was one of the best attended of its kind ever staged at Washington. Those attending it were greeted by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who declared that soon after he became connected with the Department of Agriculture he heard of quarantine 37 and has heard of it ever since. He appointed an advisory board consisting of Prof. J. C. Whitten, professor of horticulture of the University of California; Dr. A. F. Woods, president of the University of Maryland Agricultural College, and M. R. Cashman, president of the American Association of Nurserymen. The arguments of the various groups at interest, at the suggestion of Secretary Wallace, were presented by two speakers from each.

Marlatt Presents Long Argument.

Criticisms of the board by those present were anticipated by Chairman Marlatt in his opening remarks. He immediately launched into a defensive argument regarding the manner of procedure followed in issuing the various regulatory orders. Instead of these orders being issued without due consideration being given the interests of those affected, he declared that at least ten steps were required before an order was issued, among them being conferences with experts in the bureau of plant industry, submission of the proposed orders to the branch of the industry interested, revision where necessary in accordance with its recommendations,

After a conference attended by a greater number of the trade than have gathered at any previous hearing, a promise was won from the federal horticultural board at Washington this week that the restrictions on imports imposed by quarantine 37 would be relaxed. The board will consult committees representing the various interests concerned in arriving at the changes to be made. The tariff and legislative committee of the S. A. F. may be said to have won a hard fight.

and, finally, submission to the Secretary of Agriculture for his signature. The board should not be blamed exclusively for any of the effects of the orders, he said, because none was ever issued without being taken up with other experts in the Department of Agriculture. Dr. Marlatt emphasized the fact that the gathering was a conference and not a hearing, and he declared that the sole intention in calling the meeting was to secure the ideas of the various branches with a view to determining what changes, either additions or deletions, should be made in regulation 3 of quarantine 37.

Each of the persons present at the conference was presented with a lengthy statement prepared by Dr. Marlatt, showing in detail the action taken in regard to each of the various branches of plant products covered by a quarantine. This statement referred extensively to correspondence with persons and papers in the trade, which led up to this conference, and also attempted to explain the apparent discriminations existing under the various regulations.

J. Horace McFarland, of Harrisburg, Pa., started the ball rolling by attacking the legality of the action of the board in issuing these regulations. He declared that he could see nothing in the law itself which gave to the Department of Agriculture the authority which had been assumed by the board in announcing its list of "preferred permittees" under which certain amateurs and others were allowed to import freely, while others were prohibited from making practically any imports.

There was no intimation that the law itself was unconstitutional, and, in fact, throughout the meeting Mr. McFarland and practically everybody else emphasized their belief that this legislation is necessary, but, he said, "it is believed that a most serious mistake has been made and that quarantine 37 is basically illegal."

"The federal horticultural board should be declared the plant tariff board," according to F. R. Pierson. He declared that the orders of the board were not so effective in keeping out possible plant diseases and pests as in providing a "protective wall" around American growers, which effectively barred foreign producers from competing in this market, a sentiment which was later affirmed by the representatives of several of the foreign governments.

Inspection at Port of Entry.

Mr. McFarland was also the first speaker to discuss the actual regulations. He severely criticized the orders of the board and the method both of promulgation and enforcement. He recommended that steps be taken to relieve the present situation, one of the chief of which would be the establishment of inspection stations at a number of ports of entry where most of the plant products imported into the country are received. The most favorable sites of such stations, he said, were New York, New Orleans, Boston and Tacoma, Wash., and the establishment of such a service would eliminate the necessity of subjecting the importations to the enforced long trips to and from Washington or San Francisco, with the consequent danger of loss and damage.

The speaker also urged that only such bulbs should be excluded as are known to be carriers or possible carriers of injurious insects or diseases. At present, he pointed out, all but five classes of bulbs are barred from entry and even though, as claimed by the board, those five permitted classes comprise ninety per cent of the total bulb importations, the other ten per cent included varieties that are in considerable demand from amateur growers and scientific organizations interested in horticulture. Mr. McFarland further urged that amendments be made to the regulations to insure equal treatment to all classes of importers.

Nurserymen Support Board.

Up to this time the proceedings had been strictly of an unfavorable character from the standpoint of the board. Orlando Harrison, chairman of the legislative committee of the American Association of Nurserymen, however, announced that his association thoroughly approved quarantine 37, opposed any steps that might be taken to tend to lessen its effectiveness and, in fact, is in favor of additional restrictions being placed on foreign products. He urged, however, that certain additions be made to the permitted list to allow free entry of certain products desired by the nurserymen.

Prof. H. Harold Hume, of Glen St. Mary, Fla., was practically the only rosarian to speak in favor of an extension of regulation 3. He represented the rose stock growers of Florida and declared that the quarantine had done more to help them than anything else, pointing out that before the enactment of the original legislation we were dependent chiefly upon foreign sources of supply, while the quarantine made it necessary for the growers to propagate a great many varieties in which they had not before been interested. Prof. Hume went so far as to state that the board would be justified in finally prohibiting the importation even of Manetti rose stocks and that the growers he represented were in favor of such action being taken.

That period of the afternoon given over to the remarks of state officials was a period of much pleasure to the board, since the state agricultural organizations are solidly behind quarantine 37 and are willing that the board take any steps necessary to strengthen it. Ten states were represented at the conference and in every instance the testimony of the officials was in favor of the board. They acknowledged, however, that their approbation of the quarantine was based on the results effected in fighting citrus canker and diseases of cotton, wheat, corn and other staple crops.

Seedsman's Bitter Attack.

The most bitter attack upon the orders of the board was delivered by J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago, who declared that he had been advised by Prof. Irish, of the Missouri Botanical Gardens, that there has not been a single new insect enemy discovered anywhere in the world in the last five years. Mr. Vaughan also declared that the board's impression that its orders are meeting, if not with the approval of the general public, at least not with opposition, is unfounded, as he and practically every other retail dealer in the country is daily asked why it is suddenly impossible to secure bulbs and plants which formerly were great favorites and easily procured. The board has cut off the importation of many popular plants, entirely harmless in character, and has as well discriminated in the amounts and varieties that may be imported by various persons, he charged.

A number of other florists and nurserymen, including E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; W. A. Sperling, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., New York; Ralph H. Taylor, of California; F. L. Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., and R. E. Elliott, of the Elliott Nursery Co., Pittsburgh, also spoke.

Mr. Hill declared that he and other growers in his vicinity had attempted to grow many stocks other than Manetti, but had never had any success, due to the fact that they could not be forced in winter. He expressed the hope that at some time in the future it would be possible to grow not only Manetti, but other varieties as well, in this country. At the present time, he said, Manetti is the only variety that meets the requirements of the growers.

Great Britain's View.

The sentiments of Great Britain in regard to the quarantine were not favorable to American methods of handling the situation, according to W. G. Lobjoit, comptroller of horticulture of Great Britain. He pointed out that while the United States is making a great deal of fuss over insects and diseases imported from abroad, it must not forget that fully as many are being exported to England in shipments of apples, pears, peas, onions and other commodities, but that England was placing no obstacle in the way of a free trade in such things. He divided the various classes of parasites which had been intercepted by the board into three classes, only one of which was composed of insects found in England but not in this country. The second group was composed of what he termed "cosmopolitans," found equally in both countries. The third group consisted of parasites conveyed by shipping which had no connection with the movement of live plants.

He outlined the work which is being done by local and government authorities in England in perfecting a system of inspection and certification, and declared that the system which is being worked out will be such as adequately to protect the United States from any possibility of infestation.

"The logical carrying out of your doctrine," he told the board, "would mean that every box of pears and every barrel of apples imported into England from the United States would have to be inspected and bear a certificate showing their freedom from pests."

England, he added, is not satisfied that sufficient restrictions are being placed around importations from America. The continuance of trade between the two countries is a matter of benefit to both countries, and he suggested the broad view that it is better to deal with these problems in a reasonable manner rather than put barriers on the trade.

Holland's Close Supervision.

Dr. E. Van Slagteren, state phytopathologist for the bulb district of Holland, asserted that the Dutch bulbs could be guaranteed to be free from all diseases and insects, and he asked that they be permitted free entry into the United States. He explained the supervision which is carried on in his country, and he showed that under their methods it would be almost impossible for a dangerous bulb to come into this country.

At least a thousand plant exporters in Flanders have been driven out of business and practically ruined by the effects of the quarantine following the war, declared Charles Pinaert, president of the Belgian horticultural chamber. "The result of quarantine 37 is that we are practically cut off from horticultural intercourse with the United States," he said. "It was your florists and buyers who stimulated us to increase our business. We do not agree that you run any risk in importing any of our plants, and we cannot admit that our greenhouse soil can be the means of conveying pests or diseases."

The speaker charged that the orders of the federal horticultural board are drafted as much with a view to tariff protection for the American grower as to keep out dangerous pests and plant diseases. "If we took a leaf out of your book and imposed similar drastic regulations, what would be the result?" he asked. "Belgium imports far more from the United States than it exports to this country."

Retaliation?

Dr. Van Poeteren, of Holland, declared that if the American restrictions were adopted by every other country in the world, all trade would be practically eliminated. He requested that the importation of horticultural and agricultural products from countries which maintain a service acknowledged by the importing country as adequate be permitted by the board. He also held out the possibility of retaliation by European countries should this not be done.

Louis Sander, on behalf of the Belgian government, urged the board to give at this time the reply promised a year ago to an appeal that importations of begonias be permitted. When the case was submitted to the board, he said, a prompt reply was promised, but nothing at all has ever been received.

Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., urged the board to permit the free entry of Manetti stocks. E. G. Hill suggested that geraniums, heliotropes, chrysanthemums and other soft-wooded plants be allowed to come to Washington in their original soil and the soil washed off there, and the plants shipped out in fresh moss, thus obviating much of the loss which must otherwise occur.

On behalf of the amateurs, A. C. Burrage, of Boston, Mass., asked the removal of the discriminations now existing whereby one importer is apparently given preference over others.

Off High Perch.

Dr. Marlatt acknowledged that some justification existed for some of the charges that had been made, and announced that the board was quite willing to hold conferences with those interested regarding the suggestions that soft-wooded plants be shipped into Washington in their own soil and transported to the importer in moss, as suggested by Mr. Hill; that the discriminations in the regulations complained of by Mr. Burrage were worthy of consideration, and that the board is desirous of discussing with bulb growers and importers the question of providing a new list of prohibited and new bulbs.

Committees representing the various branches of the industry were appointed to take up with the board such questions as they were interested in. These conferences will be held over a period of time, in an effort to arrive at a clearer understanding of what can be done and to bring about a better feeling of co-operation between the board and those it must deal with.

Wind-Up of Conference.

Only a short time was required to wind up the conference May 16, the greater part of the meeting being devoted to a consideration of the recommendations made by the various branches of the industry.

The most interesting feature of the day was the showing by W. J. Jones, with Thomas Young, Boundbrook, N. J., of an orchid, which, he declared, could be brought into bloom in three and one-half years, and which he used to emphasize his statement that it was possible to propagate orchids in this country. Mr. Jones, of Louis F. Carillo & Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y., and others asked that the quarantine be continued, declaring that its imposition has resulted in the growers paying special attention to the raising of orchids in the United States and in the final success in these efforts.

A number of recommendations were made to the committee. James H. Burdett, advertising manager for Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, suggested that in publishing lists of insects discovered by the boards of inspectors, only new and dangerous ones be included, and their names given in English instead of Latin, so that the general public might know exactly what the situation was in regard to importations of pests.

L. F. Carillo urged that if the board excluded orchids, it should also exclude the cut flowers of orchids, large quantities of which are shipped in by Canadian growers in competition with American producers.

The relaxation of the regulations so as to permit the free importation of orchid hybrids was proposed by Albert C. Burrage, of Boston, president of the American Orchid Society, and Dr. Marlatt announced that he would take that question up with representatives of the organization. He also announced that the bulb growers and importers would be given a hearing at a later date regarding revision of the prohibited list of bulbs. The board will also confer with the representatives of the foreign governments regarding the importation of plant products now excluded.

James McHutchison, reporting for the Society of American Florists, announced that he had but one recommendation in addition to those included in the address he had delivered early in the proceedings; namely, to make the blanket clause cover permitted stock, and not excluded plant products. At present the blanket clause excludes everything but the products which have been designated from time to time as permitted. Importers and florists would have this amended so that everything could be imported under the blanket clause except specified products, and such products would be designated in special quarantine orders only after they had been found to be carriers of new and dangerous insects and diseases.

Dr. Marlatt, in closing the conference, announced that the board was about to leave for California and would be gone a month or more, but that, upon its return, the matters suggested would be taken up with the various committees.

STATING THE FLORISTS' CASE

S. A. F. COMMITTEE'S VIEW.

Board Wrongly Named.

It is unfortunate that this board is named the "federal horticultural board," for its functions are entomological, rather than horticultural. It is wrong that the United States customs classification of "nursery stock" is used by the board, for by including such classes of plant material as orchids, palms, forcing bulbs and plants imported exclusively by florists in the term "nursery stock," confusion is created in quite different interests. Quarantine 37 excludes a far larger volume and variety of necessary plant material from florists than from nurserymen. We urge that the consideration of "florists' stock," imported by florists, and "nursery stock," imported by nurserymen, be kept quite separate at this conference as far as practicable. In this statement we refer only to florists' stock imported by florists.

Horticulture does not recognize boundaries; plants grow naturally in localities where climatic and other conditions are most favorable; so the best varieties growing in every civilized country today were imported from some other country. Our hot summers combined with our cold winters make it necessary for this country to import more raw materials and plant products than any other, and the prosperity of our citizens creates a larger demand for the best varieties of plant life than any other country enjoys. And as the florists' industry in this country owes its enormous expansion largely to the diversified variety of plants and flowers it is able to offer the buying public, it is obvious that any restrictions on imports, especially on raw materials or plant products that cannot be commercially produced here, must be disastrous not only to horticultural trade interests, but ultimately to the United States.

Origin of Control.

To see why we need government control of imports we must go back to the year 1912 just before the plant quarantine act was passed by Congress. Large shipments of plant products as well as nursery stock were arriving from foreign countries under no federal control; some states had adequate inspection laws, properly enforced; other states had inadequate laws and lax enforcement; some states had no inspection law; so the department said that in view of that lack of uniformity in statute and enforcement and the occasional absence of any inspection, and considering the common interest, the department ought to be given authority to see that importations from districts harboring a pest new to this country or not generally distributed here was given proper inspection by federal officers.

Statement by the tariff and legislative committee of the S. A. F. at the conference of the federal horticultural board at Washington, D. C., May 15, signed by the members: James McHutchison, chairman; J. D. Elsele, F. R. Pierson, A. L. Miller, Leonard Vaughan, Henry F. Michell and William F. Gude.

That was the whole plea at that time—for inspection. The trade organizations recognized the necessity for such a law. The florists are continually fighting insect pests and plant diseases, it is part of their business, and they wanted all the help the department could give in combating the existing pests, and, of course, keeping out others. So the law was passed by Congress and gave the Secretary, through the board, wide powers. Then the quarantining orders began to come, until we now have fifty-four of them. This law did not give the board power to legislate, to prohibit imports because they happened to be horticultural imports, to build a Chinese wall around the United States in a horticultural sense, with a few small openings; in fact, it limited the issuance of quarantine orders in these four important ways: (1) The quarantine must be to prevent the introduction into the United States of insect pests and plant diseases (2) which are new to or not heretofore widely prevalent or distributed within or throughout the United States. (3) The order can only prohibit importation from a country or locality where "such diseases or insect infestation exists," and (4) the country or locality, and the class of plant products to be excluded must be specified in the order.

If Belgium has, say, a dangerous disease which is new to or not widely prevalent here affecting araucarias, this law gives power to exclude araucarias from Belgium if that is the only way to exclude the disease; it clearly does not give the department or the board the power or right to exclude nearly all plant products from every country or locality on the earth on suspicion, as quarantine 37 does.

Board Has Wandered.

We have outlined the original plan for inspection and certification as required by the department and endorsed by the trade organizations; now let us come back to the present and see how far the board has wandered from the original plan. I quote the words of the chairman of the board as printed in the florists' trade papers:

As to returning to the old, practically free entry of foreign plants, a test over a 7-year period was given to the possibility of safeguarding such plant importations by inspection and disinfection, and this test indicated the absolute inadequacy and failure of this method of excluding new pests and forced the conclusion on this department, and on the plant experts of all of our states, that the only safeguard for the future was the exclusion of all plant stock not absolutely essential to the agricultural, horticultural and forestry needs of the United States.

In other words, the chairman says that, having tried to do what the law authorizes and having failed, the board decides to do something else, something entirely without and beyond the limits of the legal authority conferred by Congress. We florists cannot agree with, or subscribe to, any proposition that it is necessary or effective to exclude important classes of plants and plant products because of the alleged inadequacy of inspection. If the board's inspectors cannot do the work effectively or lack equipment, then the department can get other inspectors and provide the necessary equipment.

Effect of Quarantine.

Now let us look for a moment at the effect of the present policy of the board as embodied in quarantine 37—and the full results are not yet visible. Belgium, that shipped approximately 32,000 packages of plants and plant products annually prior to quarantine 37 (1,934 tons in 1913), now ships less than fifty packages (three tons in 1920). One little district in Holland (Boskoop), that formerly shipped 35,000 cases annually, now ships less than 300; our entire imports of plants and plant products, excluding bulbs, from Holland in 1920 was less than three per cent of our 1916 imports. (The Holland-America line carried in 1916 81,636 cases of bulbs and 39,145 cases of nursery stock, as against 14,036 cases of bulbs and 808 cases of nursery stock in 1920. Total 120,781 for 1916 and 14,844 for 1920.) France and Japan, that formerly shipped hundreds of varieties of ornamentals, now ship none, except under special permits. Out of the thousands of varieties and classes of plant products formerly imported, we can now freely import but seven, of which five are bulbs—and these can only be imported under permit. Of the estimated 950,000 Azalea indica formerly annually imported from Belgium, only an occasional plant is now to be seen at our national flower shows. Where are our bay trees, our araucarias? Where are our new orchids and hundreds of other exotics to come from? And yet the board's chairman says that quarantine 37 is not an embargo, and points to the stock being allowed entry under special permits—which is equivalent to limiting the waters of the Potomac to what will come through a 12-inch pipe and pointing to the great volume of water that comes through the pipe.

And we are told that these restrictions and embargoes are necessary to protect the country from insect pests and plant diseases. The same argument could be used by medical enthusiasts to stop immigration to our shores to protect the country from human ills and diseases, but people would sicken and die just the same. Or the police department might shut out all immigration for fear that a criminal might occasionally come, but we would have crime just the same.

Why Pick on Florists?

We are told that many of the pests that now plague us came in on shipments of plant products, but we contend that was before we had our present system of federal and state inspection, and before the exporting nations had theirs. We admit there are pests on all plant products, on home-grown as well as on foreign-grown, on our incoming shipments of greenhouse products as well as on our outgoing shipments of wheat and other cereals, but so long as these pests are not new or dangerous we should expect only the same degree of reasonable freedom from other nations' products as they expect from ours. Of florists' imports fully ninety-eight per cent come from inspected establishments and ninety-five per cent go direct into greenhouses; so the risk of importing new or dangerous pests with such shipments is practically nil.

But if the board considers such drastic remedies necessary, why not apply them to similar products not used by florists? Why discriminate against florists? Why exclude nearly all varieties of flowering bulbs without also excluding onions and all other bulbs not used by florists? Quarantine 37 places no restrictions whatsoever on the importation of field, vegetable or flower seeds; so why regulate and restrict the importation of palm seeds used by florists without also regulating the importation of all other seeds, representing ninety-eight per cent of total seed imports? Why exclude a few valuable orchid plants when the same ship brings in 40,000 bunches of bananas collected in the same forest? And why exclude, even on special permits, living plants which require a little soil to protect the roots while allowing shiploads of soil or earth arriving as ships' ballast to be dumped on our shores?

Economic Views Differ.

The florists' trade is heartily in accord with this board in carrying out the purpose for which it was created, but when the board gets into economic or tariff fields no two florists think alike, for no two are affected alike, and some florists, and nurserymen, too, undoubtedly are benefited by the exclusion of plant products which compete with what they produce. As in all trades, there are selfish men in ours; a florist who grows only one variety of narcissus is benefited by the exclusion of all other varieties of narcissus, and indeed of all other bulbs, while a florist who grows only geraniums or bedding plants is benefited by the exclusion of all plant products—but does such exclusion benefit the United States, or even the majority of florists? Every bit of comment that is favorable to quarantine 37 we have heard or read from trade members treats only of the economic protection it gives them from competition; not one commends it for the protection it was designed to give from pests. This seems conclusive to us that quarantine 37 is considered an economic measure; we contend that economic protection is not included in the functions of this board—that it is purely a tariff proposition.

Hundreds of varieties excluded by quarantine 37 are not being commercially produced in this country, while the cost of production of other hundreds will prevent their quantity sale when produced. Home production should be encouraged and protected in every legitimate way, but by the tariff, not by this board. The tariff bill now before the Senate provides duties more than double those now in effect, which will give home production all the protection it needs, especially when it is considered that prices in Europe are approximately three times what they were prior to quarantine 37, and it will be many years before an adequate supply of necessities is again available. Summarizing our deductions, we submit to the Department of Agriculture these recommendations:

1. We recommend that quarantine 37 be withdrawn; it is indefensible even as an economic measure. This will end the iniquitous system of "special permits," which is unfair, un-American and discriminatory, since the board not only decides which variety may be imported and in what quantity, but by which firms or individuals. We submit that no firm should be permitted to import the same stock that another firm is not permitted to import—we need not comment on the abuses that can grow up under such a system. If there are any varieties of plants in quarantine 37 which carry a real risk of introducing a "dangerous pest new or not widely prevalent" in this country, the danger can be met effectively by specific quarantines, as the law intended.

James McHutchison.

(Chairman of the S. A. F. Committee on Tariff and Legislation.)

2. We further recommend the establishment at entry ports, especially at New York to begin with, of an inspection station where all imports of plants and plant products (excluding bulbs and seeds) will get adequate inspection. The cost of this station and its maintenance will represent but a small fraction of what quarantine 37 costs the country in loss of customs duties on excluded products each season.

3. We recommend that the board make accessible, to persons legitimately interested, information with regard to the special permits that have been issued since quarantine 37 was promulgated, stating the class or variety of plant products, the quantity, the name of the importer and the country of origin. Secrecy in such matters invites charges of discrimination and favoritism in the issuance of special permits.

4. Should the board contemplate quarantining additional items after withdrawing quarantine 37, it is urged that the notice of hearing state precisely (not vaguely) which variety or varieties it is proposed to quarantine, and from which country or locality, so that the trade may have a chance to present its views in accordance with the intent of the law.

There is no doubt that with a little good will and coöperation on the part of the board, these recommendations can be made the basis for regulations covering the importation of plant products that will give adequate protection against the introduction of new or dangerous plant pests without prohibiting the importation of necessary plant materials. This country cannot give a guarantee of absolute freedom from pests for our outgoing shipments and we should not demand it on our incoming shipments.

The florists want a tariff high enough to discourage importation of all but the new and expensive varieties of gladioli, freesias, ficus, hydrangeas, dwarf roses and all other classes of plant products that can be commercially produced in this country, but we cannot ask this board to coöperate with us on tariff matters, even though this committee is also the tariff committee; so our recommendations on economic protection have gone to Congress, as we feel that it is not the function of this board to decide such matters.

In this statement we refer only to greenhouse products or plant materials used by florists, carefully refraining from referring to "nursery stock" (as the term is understood in trade circles), as we leave recommendations on that subject entirely to the nurserymen.

News from Abroad

EUROPEANS DISCUSS EMBARGO.

Some leading members of the horticultural trades of the principal countries of Europe have gathered annually the last four years to discuss trade matters of international importance. The Federation Horticole Professionnelle Internationale, as is its title in the organization's official language, French, was instituted at Paris in 1919, met at Ghent in 1920, at London in 1921 and The Hague in 1922. This last meeting took place April 20 to April 22, when delegates were present from Great Britain, France, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg. One of the most important topics before the conference was a discussion of quarantine 37. In the annual report of the secretary, E. Turbat, of Orleans, France, appeared the following:

"Concerning the American prohibition, nothing is changed; the articles which were accepted last year have continued to be accepted this year. The washing of the plants has been done, and, contrary to the opinion expressed last year, it does not seem that the plants have much suffered from this process. A delegation of Belgian horticulturists went to the United States last year and published a very interesting report, which we shall ask the conference to consider. However, in the course of last season, Mr. Marlatt's declarations have continued to show that the aim of the federal horticultural board is to stop altogether the import of fruit trees, etc., and that as soon as they can. To obtain this result, he mentions instances where nests of caterpillars have been found in goods sent by French growers. Though some of the cases are disputed by the French senders, this is made a pretext for announcing that quarantine 37 will be enforced next season more rigidly still. On the other hand and at the same time, a group of American importers are trying to get the measure less severely applied."

The quarantine and its effects on the export trade of Europe was discussed at length. Professor Westerdijk, of the Dutch ministry of agriculture, contributed a paper on the subject, which was received with general approval. It was agreed that it was one of the best contributions to the discussions. The professor said: "The interchanging of plants should not be prohibited, but only controlled. Competition is a necessary factor for the advancement of the world, and this will not take place if the present stringent conditions are insisted upon." Each country reported the measures it has in hand to endeavor to relieve the situation. Great Britain sent to the Washington conference W. G. Lobjoit, controller of horticulture.

After considerable discussion the following resolution was passed:

The Conference.

Considering that each country has the right and the duty to prevent introduction of plant diseases and parasites,

Considering that the quarantine system adopted by the United States, which would in course of time bring complete prohibition, is not justified,

Considering that horticultural European countries would have to adopt similar measures against agricultural and horticultural produce from the United States, including fruit, in case the latter country maintains the present system.

Considering that in such a case international trading in horticultural produce would be so reduced as to be in danger of extinction,

Demands:

That importation of produce from countries which have a phytopathological service should be free and guaranteed between these countries, which, however, will reserve to themselves the right to issue special rules concerning the importation of certain products.

Invites:

Affiliated associations of the F. H. P. I. to communicate this resolution to their respective governments and pledge themselves to press it with all their power.

And decides:

That the resolution will be communicated to the United States government by the bureau of the F. H. P. I.

BRITISH ROSE SHOW.

At the British National Rose Society's spring show, held April 21 at the London Scottish drill hall, Elisha J. Hicks was the principal exhibitor and won numerous honors. In his group exhibit, the only one made, Mme. Butterfly and Ophelia were among the outstanding varieties. In the class for six new roses, one bloom of each, Mr. Hicks won with Premier, Crusader, Earl Haig, Mrs. Hornaby Lewis, Glory of Stenfurth and Mrs. Elisha J. Hicks, the last-named being denominated "the rose with a fragrance."

Among the new roses shown was only one real novelty, most having been exhibited at last year's shows, and nothing higher than a certificate of merit was awarded. George Beekwith & Son, Hoddesdon, exhibited Elsie Beekwith, a rose that was considered by many to be the best in the show as a commercial variety; it is a seedling hybrid tea, of a deep, glowing, rosy pink, long in the bud, exquisitely shaped, with large, deep petals. In habit and foliage it is not unlike Richmond; it will be without doubt a cut flower rose, and judging by a sample bush the growth is vigorous; it has a faint tea scent.

B. R. Cant & Sons, Colchester, had their Pernetiana Sovereign in excellent condition. Its color was never better; open it is a deep golden yellow and in the bud something between an apricot and deep yellow; its foliage is almost like a camellia leaf, so polished was the deep, bronzy green; the flower is full and well shaped.

Elisha J. Hicks showed a seedling hybrid tea, Mrs. Hornaby Lewis, a fine, full, faintly scented flower. It is cream with an apricot-flushed center and has deep, dark green foliage, flower of good substance, borne on stout stems.

English & Sons showed Doreas, a Wichuraiana. The trusses are large and well formed and borne on long stems; its color partakes of coral pink, but is a pleasing combination of rose and light pink, slightly suffused at base of petals with palest of yellow. The same firm also showed Mrs. T. J. English, hybrid tea, a dainty decorative rose of apricot and amber, with shadings of soft pink; it is nicely reflexed and tea-scented and shows plenty of foliage.

MAY RAISE POSTAGE

MAY RAISE PARCEL POST RATES.

Higher rates for parcel post packages are necessary if the deficit of $100,000,000 a year, which the postal service now incurs, is to be reduced, according to Postmaster-General Hubert Work, who has sent a letter to the Interstate Commerce Commission and to members of Congress, pointing out that the present rates on parcel post are far below the actual cost of the service.

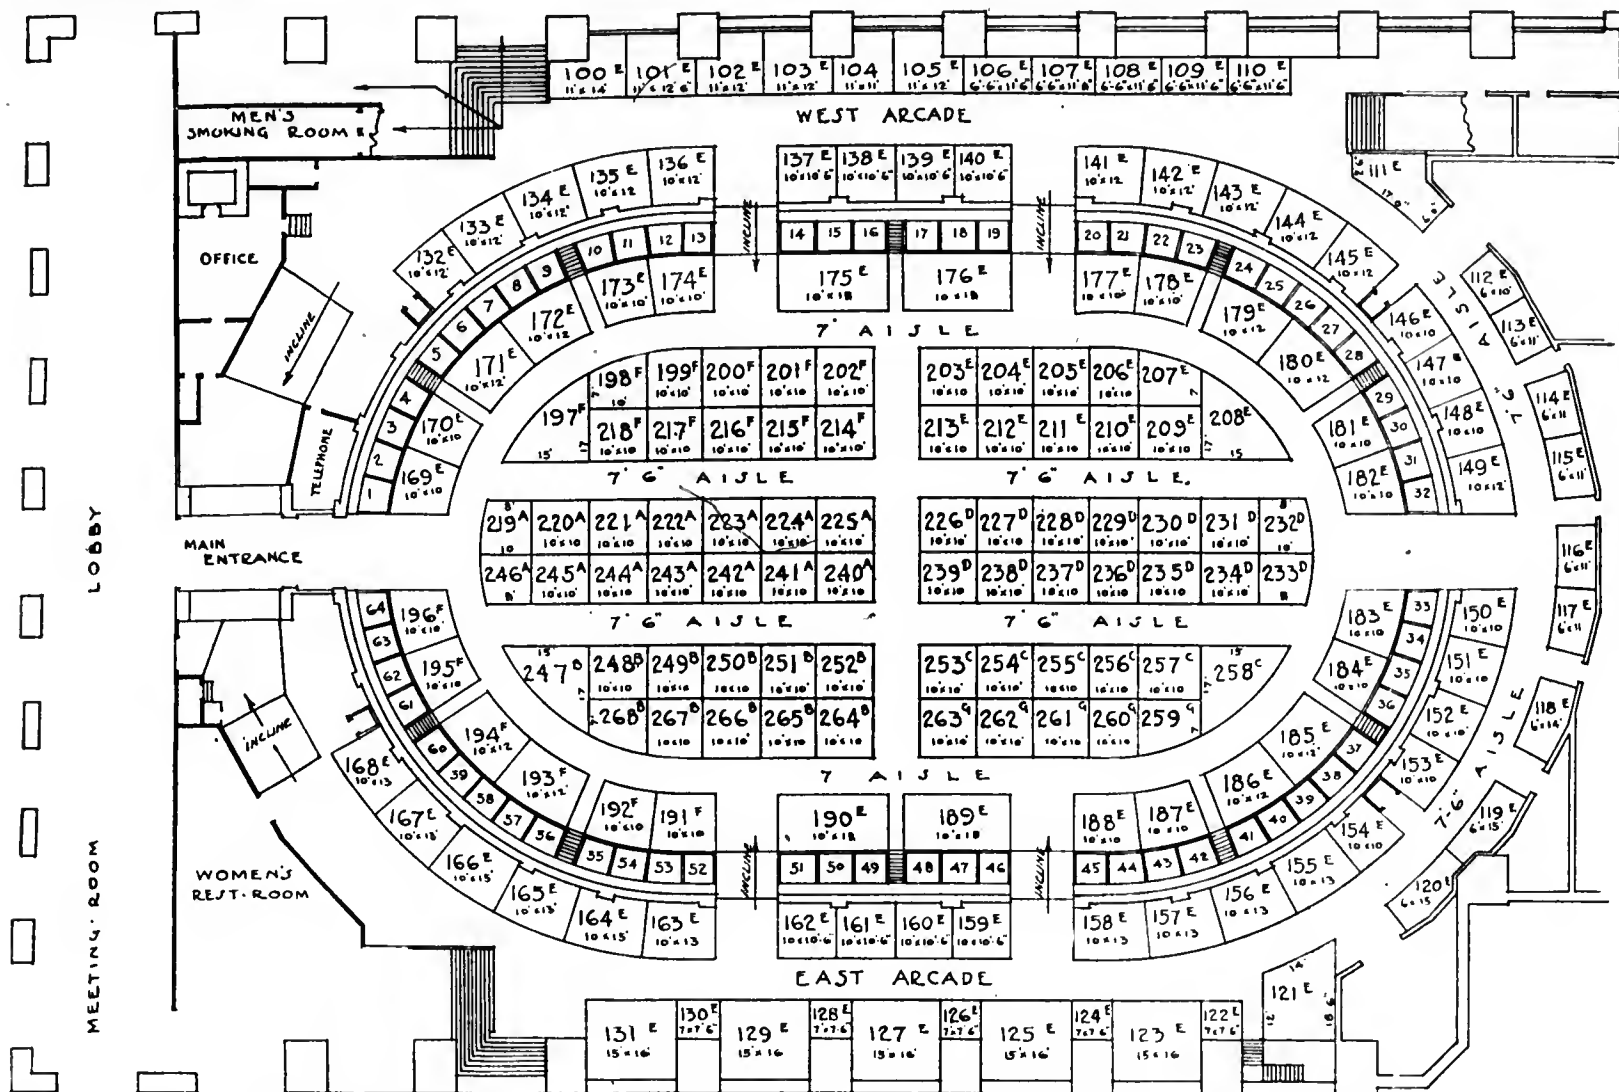

The rates now in effect on parcel post matter were fixed by Congress in 1912, it is pointed out, and were based upon the estimated cost per pound of transporting and handling fourth-class mail matter under the conditions which existed during the period from 1908 to 1911. "Not only have the conditions changed, but the rates per unit of service for railroad transportation, especially, and for all other transportation, generally, and the salaries of the postal employees in the field, including those in the post offices, the railway mail service and the rural delivery service, have all been increased in recent years and since the inauguration of the parcel post system under the rates now prevailing," points out the postmaster-general in his letter.

"It is evident that in any estimate of cost of handling the several classes of mail matter, these increases in cost per unit of service and cost in the individual salaries of postal employees would add materially to the cost of handling per pound, even if the relative weights and numbers of pieces of the several classes of mail matter had remained the same as they were in 1907 and 1912.

"As the revenues received from parcel post matter are produced by rates fixed by the act of 1912, then estimated to be little more than sufficient to cover the cost of performing the service, it is obvious that the revenue now received on such matter must be far below the actual and apportioned cost for that service under the conditions now existing. What that difference or loss in the aggregate is has not been definitely ascertained, for the reason that the department is not in possession at present of sufficient data as to weights, number of pieces, average hauls, and other elements necessary for use in apportioning common expenses, to enable it to reach an accurate conclusion. It can not be successfully controverted, however, that the loss is great.

"The department is proceeding, in conjunction with the joint commission on postal service, to secure the necessary, adequate data and to make an estimate, based upon existing conditions, as to the revenue derived from the several classes of mail matter, the cost of carrying and handling them and the gain or loss per pound, respectively. When these results are known, it will be the duty of the postmaster-general to present them to the Interstate Commerce Commission, so far as parcel post matter is concerned, with appropriate recommendations for changes in rates of postage thereon, as contemplated by the act of 1912 and the amendatory act." T. N. S.

FLOOR PLAN AT KANSAS CITY.

Floor plans of the exhibition hall in which will be staged the trade display in connection with the S. A. F. convention at Kansas City, August 15 to 17, have been distributed, together with application blanks for reservation of space. As will be seen from the reproduction of the plan on this page, the hall lends itself to a display of this kind, and it is amply large to care for the extensive exhibitions that the convention of the Society of American Florists now annually attracts.

The floor is oval in shape, with a sunken central area. According to the plan, central position will be given to plants, facing the main entrance, with cut blooms to the right, and bulbs, seeds and garden requisites at the left. Back of the plants will be the space allotted to the greenhouse structures and to the right of it will be the exhibits of boilers and heating apparatus. To the left will be florists' supplies. The booths which line the edge of the sunken area and those which occupy the raised circumference will be for the use of exhibitors of florists' supplies, who have become the most numerous of those who stage displays at the convention.

The rental of trade space has been set this year at 60 cents per square foot, with a minimum of $35. As in previous years, Secretary John Young will be superintendent of the trade exhibitions. Applications for space should be mailed to him, at 43 West Eighteenth street, New York, promptly. An advisory committee of Kansas City florists is composed of Vice-president Samuel Murray, William L. Rock and W. J. Barnes.

What exhibitors may expect in the way of business at Kansas City is indicated by Secretary Young's remarks, as follows:

"Judging from the number of inquiries received, it is easy to understand that the thirty-eighth annual meeting of the Society of American Florists, to be held at Kansas City, Mo., August 15 to 17, will have a record-breaking attendance.

"Many of our members are planning their work so that they will be able to make this their vacation time, where both pleasure and business may be combined.

"All in the trade are cordially invited to join with us at this meeting to be held in Kansas City, and we assure them of our earnest cooperation in any plans they may make towards a successful and enjoyable trip."

MAY SEAL FOURTH CLASS MAIL.

Articles embraced in mail of the fourth class (parcel post), which are not in themselves unmailable, when inclosed in sealed parcels bearing printed labels which show the nature of contents and name of the manufacturer, producer or shipper, and are endorsed "Postmaster: This parcel may be opened for postal inspection if necessary," or words to that effect, are mailable at the fourth class (parcel post) rates of postage, according to Postmaster-General's order 6281, dated December 7, 1921, amending paragraph 5, section 469, postal laws and regulations.

It is not required that the quantity of contents be indicated on the labels affixed to parcels sealed and mailed under the provisions of that section, although this information may be shown if desired. In stating the character of contents on the label, a descriptive term of a general nature will suffice, such, for example, as "Merchandise—Fourth Class Mail," "Plants," "Seeds," "Flowers," and the like.

The required endorsements must be placed on parcels by means of printed labels. Rubber stamps may not be used for this purpose.

CHECKING WHITE FLY.

I have mailed you a 2¼-inch cyclamen plant, the stems of the leaves of which are covered with white specks. Can you tell what these spots are and how to remove them? W. F. C.

The small, white specks are from the white fly, which attacks cyclamens and many other plants, particularly in the spring and summer, being especially hard on pelargoniums, ageratums, heliotropes, fuchsias, calceolarias, cinerarias, tomatoes and cucumbers. Spraying with nicotine sulphate, one part to 600 parts of water, to which a little soap has been added to make it adhesive, will discourage the fly, if the process is continued every second or third day. Fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas is the best remedy for white fly, but the gas must be used with great care, this gas being extremely dangerous, and in warm weather the possibilities of injury are always greater than when the temperature is moderately low. You will find that syringing will discourage the fly and at the same time help to check the dreaded mite, which annually ruins many thousands of cyclamens. C. W.

TWO POST CARDS.

In addition to the number of plant establishments which sell at wholesale only, a great many florists who operate a small area of glass primarily for retail purposes add to their profits by disposing of their surplus plants from time to time to other florists in need of stock. Since the Classified department of The Review has made it easy for such florists to dispose of such surpluses at trivial cost, those who have undertaken to do business with other florists have become more and more numerous. Not accustomed to transacting this type of business, however, they are not always provided with the best system for handling it. The Review has from time to time given suggestions for the betterment of such systems. Among the most important of the provisions which a florist should make, if he fills many orders for others in the trade, is a post card form or two to expedite correspondence and prevent misunderstanding.

It would be well if every florist who shipped an order would send a post card on the day of shipment stating exactly what is sent and how many, the exact date when sent, and whether by express, freight or parcel post. But it should be imperative to every good business man to acknowledge orders which are not filled immediately. In case a florist has sold all the stock he advertised, but has another batch of plants coming along a few days later which he would like to use to fill further orders, he should send each buyer notice that remittance has been received and that shipment will be delayed, stating as nearly as possible the exact date when the order will go out. It is easy to have a post card form printed, so that only a few words need be filled in and the address of the customer written. Florists usually devote little time to office work, but this much ought to be done. Then the orders may be placed in a file and filled as soon as the stock is ready, unless word comes in the meantime from the customer that he cannot wait.

For the instruction of those readers who have use for, but have not yet provided a post card such as has been suggested in these columns, a form of card is reproduced on this page which was found particularly satisfactory to one firm of florists. This firm, the Thumb Nursery, owned by R. J. Rasmussen & Sons, at Marlette, Mich., has had printed return post cards. As soon as an order is received the form headed, "Acknowledgment of Order," is filled in and the post card is immediately mailed. The return card attached, headed, "Receipt of Shipment," has the address of the Thumb Nursery printed on the reverse. Most customers take the trouble to fill out and mail this return card, which provides the Thumb Nursery with a record of the arrival of each shipment and an expression of customers' opinion of the way in which the order was filled, as well as of the stock used to fill it.

Regarding this system, the Thumb Nursery says, "The return cards we have received more than pay for the cost, and we feel that we have made satisfied customers in this way. We are interested in a shipment after it leaves our hands; so we use this system. When used in connection with Classified ads in The Review, it makes a great combination."

IT NEVER WOULD BE MISSED.

Some day, when the taxpayers are able to indicate for what their money is to be spent, such misinformation as is contained in the following clipping from an Arkansas newspaper will not be sent out from Washington. Those who are seeking the way to economy at the national capital might well curtail the stream of printed matter, in the form of clip sheets, mimeographed circulars and pamphlets, that is distributed broadcast to fill newspaper columns with half-facts that lend themselves to such a misleading distortion. The following appeared in the Fort Smith American April 30:

TO CHECK SOARING COST OF FLOWERS.

Washington, April 29.—Uncle Sam is no longer dependent upon Bermuda and Japan for the great white, bell-mouthed lilies that form the center of home and church decorations at Easter time. Horticultural experts of the Department of Agriculture are now producing both bulbs and flowering plants of the Easter lily from seed.

Surplus seed and bulblets produced in lily propagation work at the government's Arlington experimental farm have been distributed to florists and private horticulturists. From these are expected to grow an entirely new line of lily culture, which ultimately will supply the American market fully without dependence on imported bulbs.

To date, however, the volume of bulbs and plants produced from seed is not enough of a factor to increase visibly the supply or reduce prices. In another year, however, American propagated lilies should be a controlling factor in stabilizing the prices of lilies at Easter time.

Just now, with increasing demand at the approach of Easter, prices are beginning to climb. Florists explain this by saying there is a shortage of imported bulbs due to floods in Japan.

Government horticulturists here say they have no advices as to floods in Japan affecting the lily bulb supply.

On the contrary, they point to the statistics covering importations and show that the value of flower bulbs of all sorts imported so far this year is about one-third, or more than $1,000,000, more than for the same period a year ago.

Propagation of Easter lilies from seed is not a difficult job, Uncle Sam's gardeners say, and can be undertaken by any lover of flowers with good chances of success.

In fact, there is no good reason why the Easter lily, in the greater part of the United States, cannot be made a home flower, available to everybody at Easter time, instead of a high-priced, artificially forced hothouse bloom.

Siloam Springs, Ark.—A. Woerner, who has had experience in the trade, has arranged to start a small greenhouse here and thus go into business for himself.

HOLIDAY HITS HIGH MARK

MOTHERS' DAY SET RECORD.

Heads Florists' Holidays.

Reports from several cut flower centers lay stress on the fact that Mothers' day business this year exceeded without question that done at Easter. The unvarying good tidings from other cities and towns give support to the statement that the second Sunday of May has taken its place at the top of the trade's big days for the season—a season of uniformly big holiday sales.

A number of things are responsible. One is the public's acceptance of flowers as the proper means of celebrating the day. In former years, hardware stores, dry goods stores, bond houses, milliners, confectioners and still others offered something in the newspapers to be given to mother on her day. This year the candy merchants used big space, but no Christmas crowds gathered at their doors. The other tradesmen left the field to the florist. Some did the same as a Chicago bond house, publishing a tribute of appreciation to mothers without business appeal. Outside of the confectioners, only the telephone and telegraph companies tried to get business on Mothers' day. The former suggested calling mother on the long-distance wire. The latter enclosed envelope stuffers which probably assisted florists more than anyone else. One read:

Sunday, May 14, is Mothers' day.

The day set apart in honor of the mothers of the land; the day on which every one who is distant from his mother will delight in sending her a message of affectionate greeting.

The Western Union Telegraph Company.

American Legion Helped.

Highly important in pushing Mothers' day sales to the record point was the coöperation between the Society of American Florists and the American Legion. In The Review of April 27 florists were told how they might benefit from the results of a conference between officers of our national society and of the American Legion. The publicity committee of the Society of American Florists provided posters and advertising mats carrying the copy reproduced in The Review. Of the posters, 2,500 were mailed out at once to members of the F. T. D., since that was the only list of retailers available. In response to requests from florists all over the country, 17,500 more were sent out, a total of 20,000 being distributed altogether. The publicity committee provided florists gratis with 300 mats of the advertisement, 200 in 2-column width and 100 in 3-column width. These were used in newspapers in almost every city of any size. The Allied Florists' Association of Illinois spent $900 to insert the advertisement in the Chicago papers. The Philadelphia Florists' Club telegraphed for 3,000 posters and three mats to be run in newspapers there. In a whirlwind campaign $2,000 was collected to advertise the day. American Legion members distributed the posters among merchants in every line of business in Philadelphia, as they did also in Chicago, so that shop windows everywhere showed the posters in conspicuous positions.

When it is considered that the coöperation of the American Legion cost florists nothing and that the posters and mats distributed cost the publicity committee only $800, it must be concluded that florists obtained a vast amount of highly profitable advertising at an extremely low cost. So effective was the advertising gained in this way that few retailers spent money for newspaper space, only two of the loop retailers in Chicago advertising extensively for the day.

Flowers Abundant.

Another fact which promoted Mothers' day sales was the extreme abundance of cut flowers, caused by the hot wave in the early part of the preceding week. This was not, however, an un-mixed blessing. Stock was rushed to the markets in huge quantities, but a large proportion of it was unsalable and much more was unsuitable for shipping. The growers received large returns because their crops were large. The retailers were able to keep prices low and sell all the cut flowers customers wanted to buy. Wholesalers had a harder time of it than they usually have at a holiday, because selection and packing had to be done with much greater than ordinary care. So plentiful was stock that for the first time in several years carnations were to be had in retailers' stores Sunday evening. Peonies, arriving much ahead of time, added to the plentiful supply. Sweet peas arrived so fast they could not be moved before more came in.

In some markets the supply was not so heavy as in others, and in these conditions were better and higher prices prevailed. Everywhere, however, the abundance of stock enabled the retailers to make high records in sales.

Price Complaints.

Of course, the usual complaint of high prices came to the fore, though it bothered less than usual. One reason was the abundant supply and consequent low prices; the other was that the florists themselves, through their organizations, killed much unfavorable propaganda before it got into the papers. Miss Jarvis was completely squelched!

In Chicago the Saturday morning papers carried pictures which illustrated the accompanying reports of the abundance of flowers. Of course, there was the usual warning against flower profiteers. For this, it transpired some florists were themselves to blame. Officers of the Allied Florists' Association had given Russell J. Poole, high cost expert of the city council, a list of prices which could be considered reasonable and fair for the holiday. Mr. Poole afterward telephoned thirty-four florists whose names he picked out of the telephone directory and, telling who he was, asked how low they would sell the various flowers listed. A number of florists gave exceedingly low prices. The result was that Mr. Poole, instead of giving the Chicago newspapers for publication the list of prices furnished by the Allied Florists' Association, made up a list of prices of his own, which contained, for example, carnations at "$1 to $1.50 a dozen for the very best." Much complaint ensued, and the officers of the Allied Florists' Association were the more disappointed because their efforts to ward off just such a report had been frustrated by the statements of the florists to whom Mr. Poole telephoned.

Not many persons, however, made reference to the price list when they visited the florists, and in all probability the story, prominently featured and illustrated, promoted florists' sales by advertising flowers for Mothers' day more than it hurt them by mention of low prices.

In Hackensack, N. J.

The New York newspapers had tidings of trade dissension to tell just before the day. The fullest, though not the most adverse, of several newspaper accounts regarding the Hackensack ease, was the following in a New York paper of May 12:

"With the advent of Mothers' day, which will be celebrated Sunday, comes the annual announcement that carnations have gone up in price. Florists of Hackensack have announced that they are going to boycott carnations because of the increased price, which, they say, has jumped from 4 to 20 cents apiece in the last four days. The Hackensack florists are going to advertise in their local papers urging that roses and sweet peas be used in the observance of Mothers' day.

"These New Jersey florists assert that commercializing of the observance by the wholesale dealers in this city would make it necessary for them to charge 35 to 40 cents for each carnation, which, they believe, is more than their customers want to pay. The decision to boycott the carnation was reached at a meeting held yesterday in Hackensack.

"Edward J. Hession, president of the retail florists' organization and one of the largest growers of carnations in this city, has denied that the price had reached 20 cents. He said carnations were selling yesterday for 8 cents apiece and that the reason for the raise was the fact that it is an off season and the unusual demand.

"Mr. Hession explained that buyers have been coming in from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston and have virtually cleaned the local market out of carnations. There was a wonderful crop of carnations at Easter and there will be another in June, but just at this time it is between crops and the price is governed by the supply. Mr. Hession said, however, that carnations should retail Saturday for $3 or $4 a dozen."

POSTING PRICES

CHICAGO PUBLICITY.

For Mothers' Day.

In submitting a report of the publicity obtained in the reader columns of the Chicago daily papers for Mothers' day, Kirkland-Porter, the advertising firm which acts for the Allied Florists' Association to that end, gave a full account of the turn of affairs that caused such dissatisfaction. It contains matter instructive as well as interesting to florists.

"We found right at the start," reads the statement, "a bitterness against the florists in connection with Mothers' day. The city editor of the Tribune informed us that the holiday had originated with the florists as a commercial proposition and that Mothers' day flower prices had been boosted beyond all reason. Two other city editors said they did not approve of Mothers' day because of high flower prices.

"One managing editor, on one of the biggest dailies, informed us that he was approached two months ago by a man who asked the paper to start a crusade against the buying of flowers on Mothers' day. This man suggested that there were so many other ways of remembering mother that flowers should be eliminated because of their high price. The managing editor later learned that this man was connected with the candy manufacturing business.

Fair Price List.

"With this hostility so evident, we took up with H. V. Swenson, C. J. Michelsen and Eric Johnson the matter of having a fair price list issued through the city council's high cost committee in an effort to offset the knockers. This was agreed to and a very fair list was made up by Mr. Michelsen and approved by Mr. Johnson and Mr. Swenson and leading retailers. This list was handed to Russell J. Poole, secretary of the council committee.

"We have learned that some mysterious influence was at work to have this committee pass a resolution asking the public to refrain from buying flowers on Mothers' day because of alleged profiteering and asking everybody to send candy and other things to mother on that day.

"When Mr. Poole received the list from us he said he believed the prices quoted were too high. He pointed to the price of from $3 to $4 a dozen for carnations and said he bought fine carnations for $1.25 a dozen one week before Mothers' day. He then agreed to get retail flower prices from a number of florists on the Thursday preceding Mothers' day and later reported that he had the prices from thirty-four retailers in different parts of the city. This list showed, for instance, roses as low as $1 a dozen, with an average of $2.50 a dozen asked by the thirty-four retailers.

"I later learned that in telephoning and asking for prices, his investigators, in some instances at least, told for whom the information was wanted. This, no doubt, caused some florists to give a much lower price than they were actually charging at the time.

Council Committee Meeting.

"Information came to us just before the meeting of the council committee Friday morning, May 12, that an effort would be made to eliminate flowers from Mothers' day by an official resolution. We notified Mr. Swenson and Mr. Michelsen of the meeting. Mr. Porter talked to several of his friends on the committee and was present at the meeting. When the Mothers' day matter came up for discussion, it was evident that some members of the committee were bitter against the florists.

"Mr. Poole and Mr. Porter explained that the Allied Florists' Association was anxious to stop profiteering. Chairman Edward Kaindl stood loyally by the florists and shut off a lot of adverse discussion. The committee then agreed to ask the public not to consider the carnation as the official flower and ordered a fair price list issued. Mr. Poole then took the average price his investigators had obtained from the thirty-four florists and, after increasing the price above the average in every instance, issued his fair price list.

Ultimately Good.

"This list, no doubt, worked a great injustice to the retailers for the time being. But it is bound to do them a lot of good in the future. It did help to keep down prices, and if the public were told right now by the newspapers that flower prices were boosted too much for Mothers' day, it would be easy for the candy men or anybody else to get every paper in town, the city council and almost everybody else to join in a campaign next year to stop the buying of flowers for Mothers' day.

"The situation right now is this: The retailers got the worst of it temporarily, but the city council, the newspapers and the public are all convinced that the Allied Florists' Association blocked all profiteering and that flowers will continue as the proper gift on Mothers' day. This improvement in public opinion, we believe, more than offsets any harm that has been done to the retailers.

"Every newspaper in Chicago, with the possible exception of the Journal, is now friendly on the Mothers' day proposition, where three weeks ago the American was the only paper that was not opposed to boosting flowers for the holiday.

General Publicity.

"In regard to general publicity, you will see that we put over pictures of 'Bob' Sweitzer and Lucius Teter with their birthday flowers, as was suggested previously. Many of these pictures, showing the flowers, can be put across. Sherman Duffy, on the American, has agreed to give over his garden column to flowers on at least two days a week. So have the News and Post. We have also talked to the one man on each paper who selects the pictures and all have agreed to give the preference to pictures showing flowers whenever possible. We can gradually work that line into a big thing."

It is interesting to see the tabulation of reader and pictorial publicity obtained by the Allied Florists' Association from May 1 to May 15. It is as follows:

	Items	Agate lines	Value
Mothers' day .....	39	5,052	$3,129.20
General .....	26	4,399	2,706.45
Grand total .....	65	9,451	5,835.65

MOTHERS' DAY IN WASHINGTON.

Mothers' day business in Washington probably broke all records over the same day in previous years. All the stores had all they could do and some of the retailers had to call in outside help to take care of the customers. All of the stores put on extra delivery help. The volume of business was heavy, all told, although there was little advance in prices other than on carnations.

"As far as waiting on trade was concerned," said William F. Gude, of Gude Bros. Co., "it was just like an Easter day. There was plenty of stock of good quality and it seemed as though everything was in demand. As I stated before, I do not approve of raising prices on such a day as this. It is too much like killing the goose that laid the golden eggs. For that reason we sold all of our carnations at $2 per dozen retail. We did not raise any of our prices perceptibly. We had all that we could do, and our telegraph business was exceptionally heavy and satisfactory. It took the entire time of one person simply to write the telegrams that we forwarded to other cities. Incoming business of this kind was equally satisfactory. All told, it was a successful day."

"We had all that we could do to take care of the trade that came to us," said George C. Shaffer. "We were fortunate in getting some good stock and we had no difficulty in disposing of it. Of course gross sales will not be anything like those at Easter, because the prices that we charged for both cut flowers and corsage bouquets were much lower than we asked last month, yet our store looked at all times just as it did at Easter. The business was not in any way confined entirely to the sale of carnations, for we moved untold quantities of sweet peas, to say nothing of roses and other flowers. The sale of potted plants was fair. I am well pleased with the results of the day."

The wholesalers for several weeks have been complaining of having to "fight flowers" and the end of last week was no exception. There were more sweet peas offered on the market than the market could possibly absorb, despite the fact that their sale was heavy for Mothers' day. Carnations were plentiful and the price dropped from $15 per hundred to $12 per hundred. Later on it was possible to get good stock at as low as $10 and when Monday morning came there was a big drop, for the demand disappeared with the ending of Sunday. There was not nearly the advance in prices that had been expected, for the local competition in the wholesale line was too great and it became a question of disposing of as much stock in as short a time as possible. However, the wholesalers are well pleased with the result of the business of May 13 and 14.

WRITING AD COPY.

The lifelong association with flowers makes most florists better ad-writers than the average merchant or producer. Probably it is because, being in contact with a commodity that is principally a conveyor of sentiment, the florist absorbs the ability to express sentiment. And that's the secret of writing florists' advertising which moves the public.

Mrs. Minnie Lilley Copeland is primarily a practical florist. That's evident from the way she runs a successful flower shop in Marion, Ill., and manages two greenhouse establishments, one at Marion and one at Creal Springs, Ill. But that she can write an advertisement that appeals to the public is likewise evident from the copy below. It was praised in Marion, Ill., for its message and it apparently brought the wanted business, for Mrs. Copeland's Mothers' day trade set a record. This is the way her advertisement for the holiday ran:

MOTHER!

How we listen to catch the last, lingering strain of the violin or the sweet notes of the bird, or wish we could never forget the beautiful child face, or the mountain scene, or the last work of a friend, the perfume of the rose! It is an axiom; we do forget some fine events in our lives.

MOTHERS' DAY FLOWERS.

Is it customary to use only white flowers for Mothers' day? I have supposed any flowers, colored or white, were suitable for decorations on that day or for sending to mother. I thought in wearing a flower the rule was, "A white flower for mother dead and a colored flower for mother living." Has there been a change in sentiment? Someone says there has been a new ruling, but I cannot see how any ruling could be made in regard to sentiment.

J. B. A.—N. C.

Of course there can be no "ruling" in regard to public sentiment. The use of flowers for Mothers' day illustrates that fact as well as anything could. When Miss Anna Jarvis first wished to pay tribute to her mother, she wore a

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE AND WHY

FLORISTS of Seattle, Wash., again showed the good judgment so characteristic of the westerners when those who are members of the Seattle Florists' Association reelected Dr. Walter A. Moore, of the Hollywood Gardens, president of their organization. One year ago, when Dr. Moore was elected president, the Seattleites knew that they had chosen a good man, and the 365 days or so that intervened to the time of his reelection have proved his value as a president. Dr. Moore is a big man connected with a big concern, for the Hollywood Farms, just outside Seattle, operate more than 150,000 feet of glass, besides poultry and stock farms, on several hundred acres of land. The retail flower store, of which Dr. Moore is in charge, is known as the Hollywood Gardens. Besides his high reputation in florists' circles, Dr. Moore is also well known for his efforts for civic improvement. Recently when a committee of 150 civic leaders was appointed to instigate a campaign to make Seattle the "flower city," Dr. Moore was one of the number.

white carnation. When she endeavored to get others to follow her example, it was at first prescribed that a white carnation be worn for a departed mother and a colored flower for one who was living. But it was soon manifest that if any large number of people in this country were to observe Mothers' day, such restrictions would have to be abandoned. The public showed itself quite willing to celebrate mother's memory with any flowers that were left in a florist's store after the white carnations were sold. Few persons outside of the florists' trade have heard anything about a distinction between white and colored flowers. Sometimes personal prejudices are against such a distinction. The public will not be told what it is to wear on a given occasion or what it is to send to any person. The public has shown that it would not abide by any "rules," whether imposed by Miss Anna Jarvis or anyone else. It would not be wise for florists to attempt to maintain such "rules," already nearly obsolete. Mother appreciates any kind or any color of flowers. Offer flowers of all kinds for Mothers' day and let the purchaser select what he or she wishes.

GROWING DICENTRA.

Will you advise me through the columns of The Review how to propagate dicentra? Is it hardy enough to be left outdoors in the Michigan climate?

E. B. E.—Mich.

Dicentra spectabilis, commonly called bleeding heart, is one of the numerous, beautiful, hardy plants introduced by Robert Fortune from Japan to Great Britain seventy-five years ago. It should prove hardy in your state, requiring only moderate winter protection in the way of a mulch of straw, leaves or meadow hay just before the ground freezes. It prefers a light, rich soil in partial shade. If it is kept moist at the roots, the graceful foliage will be retained practically until fall.

Propagation is accomplished by dividing the crowns and roots, and should be done in August or early September, so that the divisions will become established before winter sets in. Another plan is to lift one or two clumps, carry these over in a coldframe, divide them carefully and pot separately before growth starts, placing them in a cool greenhouse. This plant is excellent for gentle forcing and proves popular abroad. In America we do not see much of it used in this way. C. W.

NAMING PLANTS.

We have mailed under separate cover a number of geranium and pelargonium blooms. Will you inform us as to the names of the varieties? We have labeled these as follows: No. 1, single dark red geranium; No. 2, pink geranium, double, and single pink geranium; No. 1, lavender, and No. 2, pink ivy geranium; No. 1, light, and No. 2, dark pelargonium. Also we have enclosed a clipping from a foliage plant, the name of which we should like to know. W. G.—Ill.

It is a difficult matter to name geraniums sent by mail, especially when they are packed in a light-weight paper box, as these were. They arrived completely crushed and dried. The small-leaved foliage plant is Santolina Chamæcyparissus, or lavender cotton, a useful bedding plant where silvery foliage is wanted. Pink ivy-leaved geranium No. 2 appears to be Souvenir de Charles Turner. The single, dark red geranium is Jacquerie, or closely resembles it. The dark pelargoniums look like Easter Greeting; light pelargonium No. 1 looks like Kingston Beauty.

Identification of the others can not be made and I am not absolutely certain of those named. Carefully pressed individual flowers or whole trusses, packed in a light wooden, tin or stiff cardboard box, is the proper way to mail flowers or small plants for purposes of identification, which is rarely easy, owing to severe cold in winter and heat in summer. C. W.

batch of 4,500 cuttings but 350 were saved, whereas on cuttings taken through the winter the loss was infinitesimal.

George Peters & Sons, Hempstead, N. Y., had a fair rose crop for Mothers' day.

With a bunch of mail in his hand, Henry Weston, Hempstead, N. Y., observed that the business was half and half, part wholesale and part retail, so that the extra profit from the one was allowed upon the other as a counter-balance. Every effort is made to boost planting. The grounds and greenhouses have been made attractive and the stock here is fully up to the usual high standard.

Fred Ankers, Freeport, N. Y., possesses a fine collection of hardy azaleas, which are planted around the house. Carnations are ready to plant out. These plants are not so stout as they usually are at this time of the year. W. M.

STARTING WINTER PRIMULAS.

At what time should the seeds be sown for Primula obconica, P. chinensis and P. malacoides for winter sales? L. M. S.—Mich.

Primula obconica and P. chinensis must be sown at once and they would have been better if they had been started in April. P. malacoides is a vigorous grower, and July is sufficiently early to sow the seed. C. W.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

"Perfectly lovely," commented Simon Dernison, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, referring to a farewell banquet given by a party of Holland bulb salesmen on the eve of their departure from Hoboken, at which our worthy fellow craftsman was an honored guest. The toast to a safe passage and speedy return was given and received with mixed feelings. The ghost of prohibition hovered over the assembled party, none of the members of which had the power to lay it.

"Nothing to it," observed Paul Rigby, of the S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, when asked as to the truth of the report on boosting prices of carnations for Mothers' day. "Prices were fixed at 15 cents each for colored, and 20 cents each for white, top grades, at our place."

Anton Schultheis, accompanied by his good wife, arrived home at Cottage Point, L. I., rejuvenated by the sojourn at Miami, Fla. Exclaimed he: "On to Washington, with what success we cannot tell, but we hope to make a favorable impression touching the matter of quarantine." Evidence that stock can be grown at home is seen in a splendid group of lilacs coming along for next Easter. They are grafted on the ligustrum. Two sons are actively interested in this growing concern.

Louis Dupuy, Whitestone, L. I., is extending the cultivation of ericas, having added considerable glass for that purpose. A heavy cut of Darwin tulips sold well for Mothers' day.

"Not for us," observed Walter Scott, of the John Scott Estate, Brooklyn, referring to a wagonload of lemons which was passing, "rather the reverse, for really this has been up to the present time the best season in our experience." The Scottii fern, which originated here with its various sports, meets with ready sale.

John Scott is located at Norwich, Conn., having purchased the Von Steery place recently, intending to cater to the retail trade.

The Nippon Nursery, Woodside, N. Y., had a small ratio of diseased lilies, according to S. Suzuki, an expert grower. Those that were good sold quickly.

"A dollar a square foot is a farmer's way of figuring," observed Arthur Buckholz, Woodside, N. Y., "but we have to do better than that nowadays to come out ahead. This house, for example, contained lilies at Easter and is now filled with coleus, going out this month, to be succeeded by chrysanthemums. Sure, business is good, but the expenses are larger and profits smaller."

Victor Dorval & Bro., Woodside, N. Y., had the best bulb business in their experience and have a splendid showing of bedding stock, the larger part of which is already spoken for.

John J. Marquardt, Middle Village, N. Y., now caters to the wholesale trade entirely, which requires a different line than that for cemetery trade, for which this place was noted.

"Figures make interesting reading," observed Theodore Hengstenberg, Hempstead, N. Y., referring to an order for 13,000 geraniums being filled for Greenwood cemetery and a part of a contract at satisfactory figures. Commenting upon the scarcity of geraniums consequent upon the loss in fall propagation, it was remarked that out of a

OBITUARY

John Nelson.

John Nelson, one of the oldest florists in Chicago, both in years and in duration of his connection with the business, died May 15 at the residence of his niece, 1517 North Linder avenue. Mr. Nelson was 80 years of age. For more than three decades he conducted greenhouses and a retail store at 1747 West Huron street. The neighborhood became so congested that it was impossible to grow anything in the greenhouses, but he continued to operate the retail stand until about a year ago, when he sold the property and retired. He was one of the first florists in Chicago and one of the oldest when he quit. The funeral was held May 17 from the residence of the niece, Louise E. Nelson, with whom he lived. A sister also survives. There were many flowers at the funeral, as Mr. Nelson was well known in the trade and highly esteemed. Interment was at Graceland.

Eugene A. Butler.

Eugene A. Butler, veteran florist of Niagara Falls, N. Y., died at St. Mary's hospital May 10. The funeral was held at the Pierce Avenue Presbyterian church Friday afternoon, May 12. Mr. Butler is survived by his wife and two sons, Fred Butler, noted evangelist singer, and Eugene, all of Niagara Falls.

Mr. Butler was the pioneer florist of Niagara Falls. His place of business was at 530 Main street, where he had been for about two score years. He was in business on the same street about half a century.

FLORIDA FLORISTS MEET

FLORIDA FLORISTS' MEETING.

First Convention.

The first annual convention of the Florida State Florists' Association was held at Lakeland Friday, May 5, in the ballroom of the Elks' hotel. From the windows of this room could be seen the beautiful lakes, orange groves, palm-shaded streets and charming homes, altogether a fitting environment for the first convention of florists of the state.

The meeting was called to order by the president, C. Leslie Whipp, of Jacksonville. John C. Sims, Adel, Ga., invoked God's blessing on the meeting and the work of every florist. E. R. Giddings, of the Westmoreland Floral Gardens, Lakeland, welcomed the convention in words that convinced all of the speaker's sincerity. F. W. Fletcher, of Orlando, responded in his usual happy manner. The address of President Whipp was to the point and was characterized by the spirit of faith in the future of the association and the development of the florists' business in the state. The report of the secretary-treasurer, N. A. Reasoner, was gratifying to all. His report showed the treasury to be in a healthy condition and the membership list growing rapidly. The association now has more than 100 members.

Pennock on Principles.

The special feature of the morning session was an address by S. S. Pennock, president of the Society of American Florists. Mr. Pennock was enthusiastically welcomed and his talk was enjoyed by all. His personality inspires confidence in all he says. His subject was "Basic Principles Governing the Successful Florist." His address was printed in last week's Review.

Following Mr. Pennock's address, various members of the association discussed commercial rose growing in Florida. Mrs. J. W. Warner, of the Miami Floral Co., gave some valuable information. She has been quite successful in growing red and pink Radiance. Most of the florists agreed that roses do best in Florida near the low hammock lands, where the moisture lingers. T. K. Godbey spoke of a native stock that was fine for grafting. Opinion was divided as to the merits of grafted and own-root stock; the varieties of soil and climate explain this.

F. A. Knull, of Tampa, read a valuable paper on planting dates for different cut flowers. It was the product of many years' experience and the association is indebted to him for the contribution he has so unselfishly made to the common fund of knowledge.

Afternoon Session.

The first subject discussed after the noon adjournment was 1922 novelties. J. M. Carruthers, of Orlando, led this discussion. N. A. Reasoner, of Oneco, described a popular novelty contrived from red candles and the air plant, which is so abundant in south Florida. R. Q. Shoch, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, described some of his firm's novelties.

W. H. Shultz, Jr., of Auburndale, read an interesting paper on the asparagus growers' problems. He is a great believer in the future possibilities of asparagus in Florida. F. W. Fletcher emphasized the imperative need of a campaign of advertising to distribute this product widely. The express companies also came in for discussion under this subject. On the whole, the service they render is satisfactory, but a closer co-operation would be of mutual benefit.

Bulb Opportunities.

The most interesting part of the day was the session devoted to the discussion of bulb opportunities. F. W. Fletcher led this discussion. He is a witty and forceful speaker, with years of experience to draw from. He called on the veteran bulb grower of Florida, T. K. Godbey, to give the convention some of his experiences. Mr. Godbey has been growing bulbs in Florida for about forty years, and without doubt his is the last word on the subject in the land of flowers. His talk was most interesting. His reminiscences, which were sandwiched in between practical advice, were keenly enjoyed by everyone. We have forgotten how many bushels of potatoes he managed to grow in one year, but they were legion. He also taught the south the worth of the velvet bean as a forage plant and soil improver. He recounted with simple eloquence his efforts to introduce his bulbs to the trade. One was impressed with his patience as he told of failure after failure, but we felt glad when he told how at last florists were willing to be shown that home-grown bulbs could produce results. Mr. Godbey is not in favor of repealing quarantine 37. His remarks brought forth some applause by other members who share his views.

Another person equally honored and beloved is Theodore L. Mead, of Oviedo, Fla. He is an enthusiastic grower, with a weakness for amaryllis and gladioli. His talk on gladioli was most instructive. He is producing some promising varieties. The writer enjoyed a personal talk with him on amaryllis experiments. Mr. Mead has produced a white and has almost produced a white with a definite pink margin; he already has it, but thinks that one more effort will produce even more satisfactory results than he has yet attained.

After the close of the program Messrs. Hume, Reasoner and Fletcher, Mrs.

C. Leslie Whipp.

(President of the Florida State Florists' Association.)

George Backus and others answered many questions which had been put in the question box by various members. After adjournment all the young retail florists and some others met at the show room of the Westmoreland Floral Gardens and witnessed a practical demonstration in designing by W. H. Knull, of Tampa. Mr. Knull was assisted by Mrs. Warner, of Miami. Several bouquets, baskets and designs were tastefully arranged. Mr. Knull is an artist in his line.

The Exhibits.

The floral exhibits were beautiful and interesting; the flowers and plants were skillfully arranged in the smoking room of the Elks' hotel. The most striking showing of flowers was made by Mrs. George J. Backus, of Stuart, who showed beautiful gladioli in many colors. America and King were especially fine. T. L. Mead exhibited a wonderful collection of seedlings of his own hybridizing; one spike of lavender bloom was especially attractive.

T. K. Godbey, of Waldo, had a huge vase of calla blooms. In the bulb line he showed hamperers of calla bulbs, freesias, snowflakes, Chinese sacred lilies, grape hyacinths, rainbow freesias, Spanish irises, Narcissus Paper White and Lilium Harrisii.

F. W. Fletcher showed a vase of hybrid gerberas. They were well grown and most beautiful.

C. M. Griffing & Co., of Jacksonville, had a beautiful exhibit, consisting of Coccos australis in large sizes, Japanese junipers, libocedrus, Cupressus funebris and fifty hydrangeas of French extrae-tion.

John B. Beach, of the Indian River Nurseries, West Palm Beach, showed some wonderful specimens of crotons in tubs. Several varieties were planted together and they were more than four feet in height.

Mr. Reasoner, of the Royal Palm Nurseries, Oneco, had a vase of well grown double white petunias, dahlias in variety, scabiosas, beautiful specimen plants of Nephrolepis Duffii, N. davalloides fureans, Phœnix Roebelenii, P. reclinata, Livistona chinensis, Cibotium Schiedeii, Cycas revoluta, Aranearia Bidwillii, Ficus elastica variegata and Pit-tosporum Tobira. The last-named plant is fine for hedges in Florida, especially near the gulf.

The Knull Floral Co., of Tampa, staged a beautiful exhibit of potted plants, consisting of well grown plants of Areca lutescens, crotons, tuberous and fibrous-rooted begonias, handsome ferns in cement urns, fancy caladiums and hydrangeas in variety.

It is the intention of the association to make the flower exhibits a chief feature of the convention next year. The endless variety of plants that can be grown successfully in the state and the unselfish enthusiasm of the members are an earnest prophecy of a convention next year that will mark a distinct advancement in progress along every line of endeavor. We are not yet conscious of the possibilities of Florida as a flower and bulb-producing section.

John C. Sims.

PLANTING BY CALENDAR.

A Pioneer's Idea.

The portion allotted to me in this meeting is to furnish you with our "Planting Calendar for Cut Flowers." As an introduction to those with whom I am not personally acquainted, I should like to say I am one of the pioneers of the cut flower business in this section of Florida, being the first person, I believe, to depend fully on the cut flower business alone for a livelihood.

I opened a retail store in the court of the Court arcade of Tampa, Fla., Saturday, October 8, 1909. This was the sixteenth week of the big cigar strike, which, I dare say, many of Tampa's business men well remember. A stock of decorative palms and plants suitable for the occasion was purchased from Reasoner Bros., of Oneco, Fla., and about $40 worth of choice cut flowers from the Pennoek-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia.

After running a fair-sized display advertisement in the local newspapers and personally calling on all the most prominent business men with "My eard, Sir," inviting them to our wonderful display of cut flowers, the finest and largest line ever displayed in the city of Tampa—facts, too!—we opened shop at 7 a. m. sharp and closed on the old time schedule, 11 p. m., with a total sale of $4.95. Fine, wasn't it? But dozens called in, looked us over, told us what a wonderful display we had; said they had never seen anything like it; assured us we were filling a long-felt want. This alone was encouragement. We believed them; we stayed, filling their wants later, and we are still filling their wants from the calendar here given, which I have divided into three classes; namely, seeds, bulbs and cuttings or divisions. The planting calendar is shown on this page. In regard to ageratum cuttings, it should be added that the beds pay out in sixty or ninety days. In regard to the violet cuttings, old clumps should be divided and potted in 3-inch pots about July 20. Judgment must always be used with this calendar, as the conditions of weather naturally make many changes in the maturing of the flowers, as well as the length of the season.

I hardly deem mums a success outdoors, but do believe that if provision for shelter with cloth be provided at the time buds begin to show color, it would be possible to produce good stock in the field, since all trouble has developed with us on and after that time. We are, ourselves, trying out this method this year.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week just passed in the New York cut flower market was important in that it reflected the business of what has become one of the greatest flower days of the year—Mothers' day. Toward Thursday of last week the wholesalers were busy endeavoring to book orders for the festival. Carnations, of course, were the principal item, and it soon became apparent that $15 per hundred was to be the price for carnations of white varieties, and it may be said that most of the business was booked at that figure. Later, the price on whites was boosted to $20, but more with the idea of taking on business not considered regular, or, in other words, that kind of business that comes under the head of transitory or the shopping kind. On Saturday afternoon of last week carnation prices broke to as low as $6 per hundred, whites included; then came a little reaction on Sunday morning, with whites moving at $12 top. It can hardly be said that carnation conditions approached the sensational. In all other staple lines, prices did not go beyond normal for the time of year, but stock was in heavy supply and clearances were an important factor in the market. Roses ranged from $4 to $20 per hundred, according to grade, from No. 2 upward. American Beauty sold poorly and much stock was unsold, even at what might be considered low prices, $30 to $60. A few rose growers missed the market by making late shipments, Saturday evening arrivals hanging fire and creating a hold-over of no mean proportions. Both in roses and carnations growers lost out by endeavoring to time the market to their own peculiar ideas, earlier shipments being assured of more remunerative prices. Last year the buying was light in the early hours of Mothers' day buying, but this year it was the reverse, and late shipments fared badly.

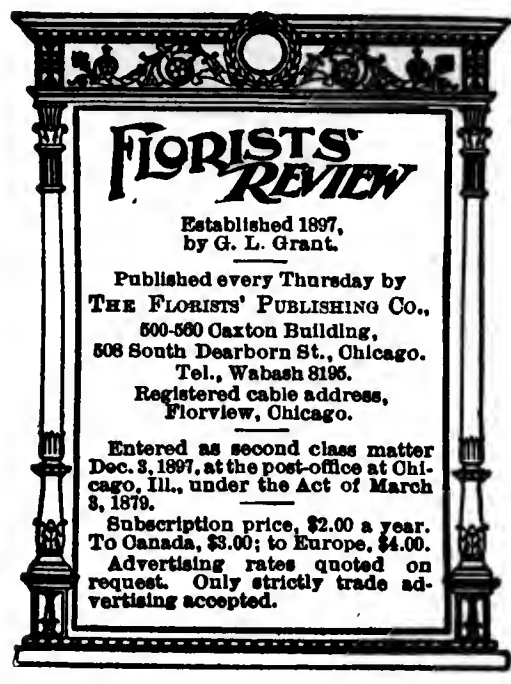

Easter lilies were plentiful and moved fairly well within a price range of $10 to $15 per hundred. Valley got little more than a look in, sales being slow and more or less forced. Rarely has so much herbaceous stock been seen at this season, and sales of it dragged consider-

Planting Calendar for Cut Flowers in Florida.

A heavy hail storm did damage in a number of places in Iowa Monday, May 8. About 5 p. m. the storm broke at Iowa City, and in fifteen minutes covered the ground one and one-half inches deep. At the same time more than one and a quarter inches of rain fell. The hail broke all the glass on the south side of the houses of A. G. Prince and part of that on the north side, about three-fourths of all the lights in the range. The plants in the houses were badly cut and broken by the hail and glass. The carnations and other plants in the field were about ruined, says Mr. Prince.

DON'T limit the Memorial day appeal in your advertising. The day has come to be observed in memory of all our departed, not alone the soldier dead.

THIRTEEN thousand members of the trade have paid to receive The Review this year. Few fail to renew when their time is up and new names are being added every day.

It has become possible to insure against rain during any designated time, but has anyone heard of indemnity against loss if it does not rain? That would interest florists more.

IF your sales are back at the pre-war level, but your costs are not, compare items of present expense with what they used to be. You will learn what's happening to the profits.

ONE ex-president of the S. A. F. celebrated his birthday the day before Mothers' day this year and another one the day after. Philip Breitmeyer is the former and J. F. Ammann the latter.

A DRUGGIST put in his window at Mothers' day a few vases of artificial flowers and a placard reading, "Say It with Flowers," the kind that last, 10 cents each." They lasted all right—clear to Monday morning without a purchaser.

THE best service is not that given in a heavy last-minute rush. Help The Review give you the best service by sending in material, for both reading and advertising columns, as early as you can. Get it in Thursday, Friday or Saturday. Don't delay till Monday.

THAT the use of accessories is increasing, not only steadily but rapidly, is shown by the number of new concerns entering that field of endeavor, as jobbers. The Review knows of two more new stocks being put in by wholesale cut flower dealers, not yet announced.

MORE different agencies than ever before boosted Mothers' day this year. Although most of them were actuated, like the telegraph companies, the postcard people and the candy makers, by the desire to further their own ends, they gave invaluable assistance in impressing the day on the public's memory. It is the one thing necessary to make Mothers' day a flower day of the first importance.

A FIRM which carries customers' accounts for long periods, or accepts notes, is embarking in the banking business, an unwise procedure for persons whose training and experience has been in selling or producing.

ONE of the least difficult but most efficacious methods of getting your bills paid promptly is to mail statements on the first of the month without fail. Bills received promptly encourage prompt remittances.

CONFIDENCE is the basis of all business, but especially is this true of the florists' business. No man, and especially no florist can expect lasting success unless he keeps faith. If he says he will do a thing, he must do it; if he takes money he must give an equivalent, be the transaction large or small.

CORRESPONDENTS WANTED.

A number of cities not represented regularly in the news columns of The Review should be put on the trade map. If you are in such a city, like to write and can get around among the trade regularly, the Editor would like to hear from you. Correspondents are desired in the following places:

Buffalo, N. Y.	New Orleans, La.
Albany, N. Y.	Hartford, Conn.
Syracuse, N. Y.	Lincoln, Neb.
Springfield, Mass.	Memphis, Tenn.
Denver, Colo.	Toledo, O.
Atlanta, Ga.	Columbus, O.

SWEET PEA POISONING.

Perhaps some reader who has been similarly afflicted can prescribe for this case:

"I am troubled with a severe case of sweet pea poisoning, which I get regularly at the beginning of each season and which leaves me regularly after the season. Would like to know of any remedy for this."

WHY MONEY IS SCARCER.

If fewer dollars are flowing into the florist's till, it is because, for one reason, there are fewer dollars to flow.

The per capita circulation of money May 1, according to a Treasury department statement, amounted to $48.89, as compared with $49.81 a month previous and $57.12 May 1 of last year. Money in circulation May 1 amounted to $5,352,255,730, as compared with $6,158,170,819 in circulation on the same date last year.

The decrease is reported to be indicative of the gradual return of the dollar to a normal purchasing power.

The amount of money in circulation May 1 was the smallest volume since the beginning of the expansion which marked the country's preparations for hostilities during the war period.

ON THE UP GRADE.

When the farmer thrives, the rest of the country prospers. The change for the better in agricultural communities forecasts better times for the florists in the rural districts and strengthens the prospect of good business ahead for all of us.

"There is no doubt that there has been a sharp reaction from depression in the middle western farming territory," last week asserted George M. Reynolds, head of the Continental & Commercial National bank, Chicago, after a trip through that part of the country. "Improvement in this section is more marked, I believe, than anywhere else.

"The change for the better in the agricultural situation is the basis for the increased activity in business generally. Appreciation of the value of farm products has helped the farmer materially. Also it has heartened him.

"The feeling is general that we are on the upward trend. I have no doubt this is the correct view, although it is probable that progress will continue to be gradual."

COAL CRISIS PASSING.

Various indications point to a lessening of the critical condition of the bituminous coal market. A marked increase in bituminous production is forecast in private advices of coal operators and semi-confidential advices to government agencies in touch with the national miners' strike. Some estimates put the gross production of last week at 4,700,000 tons, or between fifty and sixty per cent of the current weekly consumption.

In the Kanawha field of West Virginia miners are interposing practically no obstacles to the attempts of operators to reopen their mines on an open shop basis. About thirty-nine mines recently have been put into operation. The wage scale accepted so far by the miners is identical with that paid during 1917.

Negotiations also have been opened between the United Mine Workers in district 19, which covers Kentucky coal-producing territory, and the operators concerned. It is proposed there to resume operations in the field and allow the wage question to be settled afterward by arbitrators satisfactory to both parties.

HOOVER'S PLAN OF REGULATION.

With reference to the suggestion for regulation and control of trade associations, Secretary of Commerce Hoover last week put forward a plan which he termed a simplification of that recently proposed by Senator Edge. "My suggestion is," he said, "that there should be enacted a minor extension to the Clayton act to the effect that interstate trade associations should be permitted to file with some appropriate governmental authority the plan of their operations and the functions that they propose to carry on, that upon an approval of such of these functions as do not apparently contravene the restraint of trade acts the associations may proceed with their operations."

The chief usefulness of such a law, Mr. Hoover said, would be a definition of just when the association is acting within the law and when it oversteps the legal limit. "All those who know the situation in trade associations," he declared, "will realize that in the main their membership comprises the smaller business and the more moderate-sized business of the nation. Ninety-nine per cent of these members have but one anxiety and that is to so conduct their business that it may stand reputable in the community, as well as before the law; and if these associations are to grow in the service that they can undoubtedly perform to our whole business and commercial fabric, the members of these associations deserve to have some assurance and confidence that they are acting within the intent and spirit of the law."

These are the weather man's records, made in his aerie; on the ground it was warmer, forcing all outdoor flowers into premature bloom, while, with bright sun, under glass the heat was devastating, doubling production but robbing the flowers of the quality so essential to satisfactory dealings at times of high prices.

The Chicago market never has known such conditions at Mothers' day; a similar situation has been encountered at Memorial day, but never before so early in the month.

The heat wave doubled the anticipated quantity of stock. It made much of it too soft to be safe to ship and huge quantities, especially of sweet peas and carnations, were unsalable. It is a conservative statement that the Chicago market never at any time has handled so many flowers in one week and seldom, if ever, has the waste been larger. It was a nightmare for the workers, as the demand also was the largest ever known and the task of filling orders would have been great if the stock could have been used as it came, without the necessity of selection; as it was, all possible care had to be given to sorting and grading to avoid certain disappointment.

Perhaps the carnation demands first place in an effort to particularize. Of course the growers had held back what they could. The heat hit them, making much of the stock useless. Strictly fine, fresh flowers were never in oversupply and most of them brought good prices. Prices ranged all the way from 15 cents to the waste barrel. The average for the week will be low, far less than the grower expected. At the same time there are many complaints from buyers. It was distressing.

Roses were not so seriously affected by the heat; they were more plentiful than had been expected, but they sold out almost clean. The short and medium lengths brought list prices, because they were not equal to the demand, but concessions were necessary to bring the longer grades within the reach of some of the buyers. Rose growers fared much better than carnation growers and the buyers were better satisfied.

Peonies have not heretofore been a factor at Mothers' day. Last year one house had a few thousand dozens and made a hit. This year everybody had them and got hit. Growers have been planting in Tennessee in the hope of making Mothers' day, but this year the heat wave brought in the cuts from the numerous and large fields in southern Indiana and Illinois. Growers who frequently worry over being in time for Memorial day were in full swing early in the week before Mothers' day. Great as was the demand, only a part of the supply could be sold, even at prices based on what the Memorial day market seems likely to be, and large quantities of peonies went to cold storage to await developments. The growers probably will be satisfied with the prices, as most of them would have received no more had the cut come at the usual time. Too large a part of the supply was white; the pinks are later. There was the usual complaint over festiva maxima; it is a grand peony on the plant or fresh cut, but it does not ship and keep well and the buyers hold aloof.

The sweet pea growers got the worst results of all. Early in the week their stock was a mess; hundreds of thousands were unsalable. Some wholesalers had the good judgment to dump them at once and clear the way for the better stock which followed, but others let them stand around, hoping, perhaps, for a buyer. Really first-class peas never were in oversupply, but of course the presence of low-grade stock always pulls down the prices. The growers will buy no Pierce-Arrows just yet.

The heat rushed in the bulbous flowers early in the week, so that few Darwin tulips or jonquils were in evidence by Mothers' day. There was, however, much outdoor valley. Easter lilies were a glut, as they were not in special request. Some were jobbed off, while others were sent to join the peonies in the freezer, but consignments from a distance showed a considerable loss. Callas were in worse case than the giganteums; mother evidently associates them with funerals, for nobody wanted any. Nor did ten weeks' stocks class as mother's favorite. Snapdragons were in larger supply than ever was known before and only a small part of the receipts could be sold, which means that the growers of the best stock got all the money and the others nothing. There were large receipts of gladioli from the south, in small request. The indoor local gladioli were much better, but not in large supply and they sold fairly well. Statice moved satisfactorily, as did greens.

Lilac was in heavier supply than any other week this season. Much of it arrived in poor shape, but nobody wanted even the good lilac, purple or white. It was noted in many places this Mothers' day that the public did not care for outdoor flowers of any kind.

Friday was the big shipping day; it probably broke all records as to quantity of stock sent away from this market. Saturday the city retailers bought heavily and Sunday morning there was a still greater rush. How well it was going was shown by the fact that many of the early buyers were back for more before noon and many wholesale houses found it paid them to keep open all day.

From the wholesalers' point of view it was a record-breaker. While prices averaged low and there was much waste, the cash value of sales was well ahead of last year. Growers got low prices per flower, but cut so much stock they received large checks, in many cases the largest ever.

The retailers had all they could handle. To have done more business they would have required more space, more clerks and more hours in the days and nights. Half the taxicabs in town, it seems, were hired to deliver flowers Sunday morning. The retailers suffered, as did growers and wholesalers, because of the poor quality of so much of the stock. Also, some of them found its abundance was not an unmixed blessing. While they paid less than they expected and could sell at a good margin of profit, some of them found that street salesmen had buckets or wagonloads of what some people called flowers on the adjacent street corners and were doing big business Saturday afternoon and Sunday.

May 15, Monday, the market surprised many people. The old stock had been dumped and the receipts of fresh flowers were light. Buying was stronger than anyone expected. It seemed that nearly every retail store had cleaned out completely and that it was necessary for everybody to buy at least a few flowers with which to fill orders and make a show. The result was an excellent day's business at prices that averaged at least as good as those received Saturday afternoon and Sunday. The market was quite clean by night.

Asparagus has turned scarce.

Wietors to Retire.

It may now be announced that the long established firm of Wietor Bros. will retire from the florists' business May 31. Rumors of the matter have long been current and N. J. Wietor states that the papers have now been signed. Ten acres of the Wietor property adjoining the Angel Guardian Orphan Asylum, together with the rose houses on the property, have been sold to the orphanage, which already operates a quite large range of glass, selling most of its output at retail. Another 5-acre piece and the carnation houses on it have been sold to John Eschette, who has been carnation foreman for the Wietors for about fifteen years. He will operate the range for his own account, beginning June 1, and will consign his flowers to the Joseph Foerster Co. The remainder of the Wietor establishment, which is all in roses, will be taken over June 1 by John and George Wietor, sons of Henry Wietor, and by John Borst, who is Mr. Wietor's son-in-law. They will continue to grow roses, to be consigned to Peter Reinberg, Inc. The wholesale store in the Atlas block has not been disposed of, but will cease to function June 1. If a purchaser for the lease and equipment does not appear, the store will be kept open for a time for the collection of outstanding accounts.

The firm of Wietor Bros. started in the greenhouse business in the spring of 1894. In the autumn of that year the wholesale house was opened under the name of the Rogers Park Floral Co., the owners being N. J. Wietor, Henry Wietor, John Muno and Adam Zender. The latter two retired from the greenhouse business with a competence some years ago. In 1897 the wholesale house was taken over by the Wietors, who in the course of time built up a range of approximately a million feet of glass.

In addition to the greenhouses, the brothers own considerable real estate in Rogers Park. On it there is an excellent gravel pit and a large amount of black soil which is in request in neighboring new additions. These enterprises will occupy Henry Wietor's attention until such time as the real estate is platted. N. J. Wietor is a vice-president of the Devon Trust & Savings Bank and about July 1 he will begin giving his whole time to that institution, in charge of its promotion and real estate departments. Foley's New Factory.

Since its fire last January the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co. has had its operations strung out in four or five buildings in two blocks on West Thirty-first street, but it has continued making shipments with only slight delay. Much new machinery has been obtained and is in operation. Work has now been begun on an entirely new factory in River Forest. The site is an ideal one for manufacturing, with a sidetrack from the Great Western railroad. The new building will be of the modern factory type, only one story high, raw materials entering at one end and the finished product emerging at the other. Although farther from the center of the city than the burned building, the new site is nearer to town in point of time and ease of access. The Garfield park branch of the elevated railroad has a station within half a block. It is expected that the new building will be ready for occupancy in July.

Various Notes.

N. J. Wieter did not seem in the least downhearted when he left for home at noon May 14. "We broke three records," said he with a smile: "Biggest day and biggest week since we were in business, and for the first time on record we had to go outside for cooler space. Sold out completely except for a vase of callas."

W. J. Smyth's store did not close at all on the night of May 13, Arthur Weatherwax and B. J. Sherman working straight through the night, putting up orders. Just as they finished Sunday morning a telegraph messenger arrived with twenty-four more telegraph delivery orders from out-of-town florists. "Another Easter," is the way Mr. Smyth describes Mothers' day.

Between closing time Saturday night and opening time Sunday morning Peter Duris, and his assistants at the store of the Central Floral Co., put up 847 packages ready for taxicab delivery for Mothers' day.

Charles Erne says May 12 made a new record for Erne & Co., with the largest money value of sales for any one day in the history of the house.

Mrs. Eric Johnson spent last week in the Presbyterian hospital, with Mr. Johnson too deeply engrossed in business to be able to get there during visiting hours. She is home again now.

F. M. Johnson left his new Packard in front of a west side hospital the other evening while he visited his mother, who is ill. When he came out he found thieves had forced the padlock and made away with two cord tires that had never been on the wheels. No insurance possible.

The early birds on Wabash avenue wondered what was going on Sunday morning, because at the corner of Wabash avenue and Monroe street, around the store of George Wienhoeber, forty Yellow cabs were lined up. They were

I. M. Bayersdorfer, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, has been displaying a large line of samples at the Palmer House this week.

C. J. Michelsen indicates his belief that the growers have overdone the snapdragon. He says scores of growers have been sending these flowers to market, the stock showing widely varying quality. Really fancy snapdragons, especially in light pink, can be sold for good prices, but the demand is limited and when it has been satisfied the flower is one of the most difficult to push—if the buyers don't want snapdragons at a good price they rarely have much use for them at any price.

A. Miller, A. Henderson, R. B. Howe and J. C. Vaughan attended the hearing on the quarantine held at Washington May 15. J. A. Young, of Aurora, president of the Illinois Association of Nurserymen, went earlier to attend a conference of nurserymen held in advance of the public hearing.

P. C. Schupp says he is well pleased with the Kroeschell ice machine recently installed by J. A. Budlong Co. While it has not been operated long enough to get a line on cost as compared with ice, its efficiency was at once apparent. The two refrigerators are handled with ease, running the machine two hours in the early morning and two hours again in the late afternoon.

several days. He is in his thirty-third year with Henry A. Dreer, Inc.

Peonies are accumulating rapidly in cold storage. The E. C. Amling Co., the A. L. Randall Co., Kennicott Bros. Co. and the Chicago Flower Growers' Association each has a private room and Klehm's Nurseries also will have one when the local crop comes on. Numerous others are storing peonies, but not in sufficient quantity to require a whole room. It costs $300 per month for a room. Those who store in smaller quanties pay 50 cents per bucket per month. The rate was 75 cents per bucket last year. In the good old days of long ago the charge was only 15 cents per bucket, but now ten times as many peonies are stored as were stored then.

Peter Pearson had the best Mothers' day business in all his experience. It was wholesale trade. He had quantities of hyacinths, tulips and jonquils, in pots and boxes and cut. He worked it nicely by advancing the plants to where they began to show color and then putting them in cold storage until about three days before he wanted them for delivery to his customers.

Otto Goerisch collided with one of the icebox doors in the store of Zeel & Mann May 13. He received a blow on the forehead so severe that he lost consciousness for a few moments and several stitches were necessary to close the cut.

The new City Floral Co. bought a case of valley pips and planted them up, twelve, fifteen and eighteen in a pot.

They sold out clean to retail florists. It is a Mothers' day crop which can be handled within a month's time.

A vacant shop on Montrose avenue behind Harry C. Rowe's store at the corner of Sheridan road was used to hold the palms and other foliage plants while the Mothers' day stock was displayed to the public. Crowded with stock before the holiday, the store was cleaned out Sunday evening.

At the thronged intersection of Sheridan road and Wilson avenue, in the new Sheridan-Plaza hotel, Albert Hall found a heavy demand for cut flowers at Mothers' day. The paraders find his shop convenient.

A case of mistaken identity caused an error in the report of the Chicago Florists' Club dance in last week's Review. The winner of the corsage contest was Miss Elinore Pagels, the 12-year-old niece of Allie Zech. Second prize was taken by Mrs. Peter Pearson and third prize by Mrs. T. Cunnen, of Percy Jones, Inc. It was inadvertently omitted that A. Lange arranged Hans Jepsen's sweet peas in the prize-winning Mothers' day basket.

A few of the firm's celebrated baskets and not many geraniums were all that decorated the store of Stollery Bros., when it closed Mothers' day. It was never more thoroughly cleaned out.

The Allied Florists' Association last week purchased 4,000 blooms for distribution by members of the American Legion at the Cook county hospital on Hospital day, May 12.

"Ten thousand plants that last" were advertised for Mothers' day at Schiller's north side store. The few left at the close of the holiday's business were inadequate to dress the big Agneo conservatory.

Last week Paul E. Weiss broke into the Line-o'-Type column of the Chicago Tribune, though he himself hadn't tried to "make the line." Under the bold-faced head, "What Sort of Roses Are Those, Paul?" appeared the following: "We have just received a pretty pink letter from Paul E. Weiss, general manager of the Premier Rose Gardens, of Maywood, Ill., with PEW-E stuck down in the lower left-hand corner. What do you make of it? Polly."

several reports, it was even better than Easter, although stock of all kinds was considerably scarcer. Wholesalers found it absolutely impossible to fill their orders in full and the result was that orders were cut in some cases to as much as one-fifth of the original order. It was a circumstance which could not be controlled, as there simply was not enough stock, especially in roses and carnations, to go around, so each had to be given his share, which, as a rule, was not large.

On account of the warm weather previous to Mothers' day, it was almost impossible to hold back any stock. This accounts for the shortage. What little was held back was not up to standard. Then again, stock which came in late Saturday, May 13, was tight and the carnations were not opened. At that, most of the trade was mighty glad to get them under any circumstances.

Peonies came in just in time and rather saved the day. They arrived in fine condition and cleaned up nicely, bringing 15 cents each. Taking it all in all, business was satisfactory and few complaints were registered. Some excellent double ten weeks' stocks helped out, while calendulas, daisies and snapdragons continued their share, although snapdragons moved rather slowly.

The Market.

Mother is not fashionable! The buyers who were most prominent in the cut flower market last week were not those who were most prominent during the social season. In short, Mothers' day appeals to the masses and not to the classes.

Despite all the advertising and preaching to the contrary, white carnations reigned in Philadelphia on Mothers' day. The out-of-town buyers ordered flowers; the Philadelphians ordered white carnations. They ought to have known better; they didn't; they ordered; they fought for them; they pushed the price up to 20 cents on them; even then they couldn't get them, not anywhere near enough. They could make the lives of the wholesalers miserable, and they did.

The week, the second in May, opened quietly. There was a heavy supply of flowers, especially of roses, and there was little business. Carnations were the exception to this condition. Knowing what was coming and with the certainty of a light supply, lighter than for years past, carnations advanced in price and $6, $8 and $10 were the prices early in the week, while later they brought $10, $12 and $15, according to color and quality, the whites, of course, leading. A few of these go as high as $20. During the second half of the week the whole tone of the market changed. There was life and bustle everywhere, the other flowers following carnations, roses last of all; followed them in activity, but not in price. Nothing advanced like carnations; they simply advanced a little and became firmer.

The weather was most favorable, and the volume of business was as large as at any previous Mothers' day, possibly a little larger.

Southern peonies came in strongly and were a factor.

Mother Hubbard plants and geraniums sold, but the plant men didn't find Mothers' day of much account to them beyond the fact that the fateful tenth day of May, the opening of the outdoor planting season, has just passed.

Two Novelties.

When it became known that George P. Shearer had left the M. Rice Co. six weeks ago, the street wondered whether the house would miss him. He was the designer, a position of responsibility in a great florists' supply house. It is a well known fact that the places of the best of us can be filled, and so it proved. making novelties that have proved winners. Here are the latest:

An extremely taking bridal arm basket. It is formed of a substantial oval-shaped basket, supported by a long, flexible handle, which can be slipped over the arm. These baskets come in two sizes, one for the bride or bridesmaid, the other for the flower girl. They are made of reed, exquisite in form and delicately colored in a variety of shades.

The other novelty is a miniature parrot, perched on an upright stick to put in a pot or on a ring to put on a basket. The claim of these parrots lies in their minuteness and in their highly colored feathers. The modesty of the designer of these two novelties will not admit of his name being mentioned, but he is willing to have it known that the baskets are going like hot cakes.

Paul Berkowitz says the demand for artificial white carnations for Mothers' day was heavy.

William Berger's Sons found Mothers' day good indeed. When people found roses less expensive, they often took them instead of carnations.

Frank P. Meyer says the tractor has saved three times its cost in emptying and filling the greenhouses. The cable is necessary at both ends, as it is just as important to hold the heavy train of cars back on the down grade, as it is to pull it on the up grade or turn.

Mrs. Swisher, of Fifty-second street and Grand avenue, had her delivery car smashed and chauffeur injured in an accident.

Herbert S. Bell has resigned his position with J. J. Habermehl's Sons, at Twenty-second and Diamond streets.

The Charles F. Krueger Co. thought roses a better seller than carnations for Mothers' day. The manager, Frank X. Aller, displayed roses and only bought enough carnations for advance orders. The result was satisfactory.

Horticultural Society.

The regular meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society, held Tuesday evening, May 9, was an unusually busy one through the discussion of plans for the annual June exhibition. The premium lists for that event were presented and the increased number of classes and awards offered promise a much larger show than in several years. The exhibition committee reported that the interest that is being manifested in next month's exhibition, and the number who have signified their intention of participating, indicated an exhibition that would be well worth while.

William C. Lynch, manager of the Philadelphia Growers' Cut Flower Co., is rapidly recovering from an automobile accident, which occurred near Bustleton a few days ago.

Robert M. Franks is now manager of the uptown establishment of J. J. Habermehl's Sons.

A committee of three, consisting of Richard Gardner, William Gray and Bruce Butterson, was appointed to secure a suitable place in which to hold the exhibition, it having been decided not to have the shows at the Beach un-

Various Notes.

Mothers' day dawned bright and clear and it was noticed that an increased number of persons of all ages appeared on the streets wearing a flower. Carnations and roses were the most in evidence, although marguerites, English daisies, knots of violets and gardenias were much used as single blooms. Profiting by the resentment expressed by the public last year at the almost exorbitant increase in prices, the dealers this year were more judicious and, while there was an advance in the scale, it was more reasonable and in consequence there was easier selling.

S. W. Coggeshall, 201 Thames street, reports one of the heaviest demands for seed experienced in several years.

Frank Jencek is planning to increase his crop of violets at Jamestown. He is meeting with much success in the propagation of azaleas, which he intends to extend the coming season.

Oscar Schultz reports being driven to his utmost on landscape and all kinds of outdoor work. W. H. M.

The Market.

Another Mothers' day has passed into history and it surely was a big one for the trade. There was an abundance of stock in nearly all lines to care for the heavy demand of that day. The warm weather previous to Mothers' day pushed a large volume of stock into the market. Some of this stock was softened by the sudden change in the weather and, in consequence, could not be used for shipping purposes. Snapdragons suffered the most from the warm weather and there was a large quantity of these in the market. Carnations were in heavy crop and roses were in sufficient quantities to meet the ply of gladioli, feverfew, daisies, calendulas and tulips to help out.

Several consignments of peonies which came in from the south were seen on the market, but these were nearly all heated in transit and arrived in the market in a bad condition.

The supply of plants was also abundant in the market. Hydrangeas, gloxinias, some late tulips and also a great many pots and pans filled with three or four geraniums, mostly Ricard and Poitevine, made an effective offering.
A great many boxes made up of assorted plants were seen, and these consisted of geraniums, yellow daisies, ageratums and coleus, which were attractive and reasonable in price.

With the great variety of stock and the quantity on the market, prices ruled more reasonable than in former years.
Our advertising association gave the day considerable publicity, which, without doubt, paid well.

Various Notes.

Gimbel Bros., who have a radio system installed, broadcasted a message which read as follows: "Mothers' Day, Sunday, May 14, 'Say It with Flowers'." This message went out about 8:20 p. m., May 11, and was repeated in a great many theaters that have radio systems installed. Many cities at a great distance from Milwaukee also picked up the message. Without doubt, this was the first time that the radio was used for such publicity. Archie McDonald, manager of the Gimbel flower department, had his firm put this message across.

Shipping trade was unusually heavy with all of the wholesale houses and the retailers had an extremely busy day
Saturday, May 13.

Among the great events here is the florists' ball, which took place Wednesday, May 17. The advance sale of tickets indicated a large attendance. P.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

Business has been good throughout the interim between Easter and Mothers' day. There was an abundance of cut flowers on sale and they moved well.
The trade here, because it has not been able to have enough cut flowers for Mothers' day for the last two years, has been trying to encourage patrons to send pot plants instead of flowers. This action has developed a trade in pot plants which is good, indeed. Carnations are beginning to show the effect of the unseasonably hot weather of the last few days. Roses are continuing to show good quality and this, together with an abundance of high-class peony stock, compensated for the loss of carnations.
Peonies have been exceptionally good this year, as there were no late, killing frosts. One can buy fine peonies of the hawkers on the street for from 50 cents to $1 per dozen, but this does not seem in any way to affect florists' sales. If peonies could be depended upon to be as good every year as they are this year, Nashville growers would plant them much more extensively.

Friday, May 5, the local iris society held a show in a large garage show window on Broadway. There were about 200 varieties of iris displayed, most of which were in excellent form.
The show was a little too late to find some varieties at their best, but the interest of the public was unusual; in fact, while the show was scheduled to CHICAGO, May 4, 1922.

Mr. U. C. Hirschey, Pres.,
Climax Mfg. Co.,
Castorland, N.Y.
Dear Sir:-

We enclose your advertisement as it appears in today's Review and think you will be pleased with the showing it makes.

For our part, we have read this advertisement with more than passing interest and we feel sure the 13,000 florists who subscribe to The Review also will read it with more than ordinary care.

We did not realize that you made the largest line of florists' boxes in America. It seems to us that it would pay you to drum that fact into the memories of box buyers.

Nor did we appreciate that your prices are no higher than those of your competitors - we had gained the impression from your failure to publish prices that your list must be higher than the others. Of course we recognized that you make a quality article and that several thousand florists all over the United States are using your boxes in preference to any others. It has seemed to us, however, that if the facts were adequately advertised to The Review's 13,000 readers your business would unquestionably be greatly increased.

Awaiting your further instructions with interest, we are close at 6 p. m. of the opening day, the room was filled with visitors until 10 p. m., and, as the flowers were still in good condition, it was decided to leave them in place for another day. Many visitors who did not get to view them the first day took advantage of the opportunity thus offered. As a result, we predict that the planting of irises in Nashville will be doubled this year. One remarkable thing about the iris show was the fact that some of the seedlings produced by local breeders were fully equal to many of the best and most expensive varieties from abroad. A Mrs. MacFarlain, from the rural districts, displayed a beautiful orientalis that would be valuable to florists for cut flower purposes. No one in the show had ever seen or heard of this variety, and the exhibitor stated that she had had it for years and had no idea what it is.

Yours very truly,

Bedding plants have been moving well, indeed, the last two weeks. Cold weather held on so long that when spring actually opened up, it came with a rush and everyone wanted his plants at the same time. There promises to be a shortage in almost everything this year. Geraniums are coming back to their own; in fact, geraniums are probably outselling any other bedding plant this year. The newer varieties of petunias are also in great demand. Bedding plants are bringing much more profitable prices than formerly. Geraniums in 5-inch pots, if they are good, bring as high as $5 or $6 per dozen, while no one expects now to be able to get anything for 50 cents or 75 cents per dozen. Salvias sell for $1 to $1.50 per dozen and petunias bring from 75 cents to $5 per dozen, according to variety and size of plant.

Most of the florists in Nashville have had such heavy demands for cut flowers recently that they are not producing as many bedding plants as formerly.

Robert Currie, of the W. Atlee Burpee Co., spent a day in Nashville visiting the iris show and talking business.

C. H. Tritschler is turning over his greenhouse business to his sons and intends in the future to devote his entire time to evergreens and nursery stock.

Thomas C. Joy spent the week-end visiting the Atlanta and Chattanooga branches of the firm.

Turnip and kale seed is ripe and being harvested this week. The weather has been especially favorable and promises a good yield of both crops.

The spring has been so wet that much of the outdoor planting has not been done. The last week, however, has been hot and clear and most people have been pushing their planting to the limit.

SAN DIEGO'S SHOW.

The fifteenth annual rose and spring flower show held at San Diego, Cal., recently was a success from every point of view. The show was divided into three parts. Mrs. Alberta Hinson had charge of section A, containing the wild flowers, sweet peas and other flowers; F. A. Bodie had charge of section B, which contained roses only, and G. Burch, of the Harris Seed Co., had charge of section C, devoted to the professional exhibits.

The commercial awards were as follows:

Best display of bulbous flowers—R. F. Cushman, first; Boyle & Darnaud, second.

Best arranged basket of cut flowers—Boyle & Darnaud, award of merit.

Best bride's bouquet—Boyle & Darnaud, award of merit.

The Market.

Business is still far from good, especially the shipping end. Retailers are buying fairly heavily, but there is no life to the trade. Mothers' day will, no doubt, give it a little fillip and everything points to good business for this increasingly important annual event. Some fine gladioli are now arriving in the market and these, with the remnant of Spanish and Dutch irises, tulips and ixias, make a good showing. Delphiniums, columbines and similar stock are improving in quantity and quality. Roses, when good, are taken readily, and indoor carnations are all sold on sight. The tulips from the north are about all over and the statice season is on in full swing. This stock is arriving in especially fine shape this year, particularly from the beach growers.

Valley is good and plentiful, while sweet peas, Cecile Brunner roses, forget-me-nots and other flowers suitable for corsages are in good demand. Shasta daisies are scarce, but yellow daisies are too plentiful and, although they were never finer, there is no demand for them. Callas sell well and the few Easter lilies coming in are all taken. Asparagus plumosus is still scarce and sells freely. Adiantum and other greens are plentiful and large quantities of shrub blossoms continue to be sold. Plants are scarce and poor in quality.

A heavy rain fell in this locality May 8 and 9, averaging a little over one inch. With the water table high from the recent heavy rains and with the assistance to cultivation given by the last storm, the necessity of much irrigating will be eliminated and all crops benefited.

Various Notes.

The beautiful wedding set for which Herbert Bateman, Inc., was awarded a gold medal at the Pasadena show is being set up in the store of this firm, in order to show patrons what an up-to-date florist can do in the way of arranging house weddings. This is thoroughly good advertising and well worthy of being copied by others. The business here is fine, according to Carl Brose.

William T. Miller, formerly well known as a horticultural writer in the east, who came out here some time ago on account of Mrs. Miller's health, is going into the mail order business for seeds and bulbs.

Alois Frey, of San Fernando, is sending in excellent Iris tingitana to the Florists' Exchange. This is fine, long-stemmed, vigorous stock and sells freely.

Some of the finest Spanish iris, Canjanus, ever seen in this market are now coming from Frank Warner, of Inglewood. He was also strong on fine gladioli.

Tom Wright reports that all the 3-inch plants of his new fern are sold and that the 2-inch, of which he has some 60,000, are coming along in fine shape. The success of this fern is remarkable. Everything at the range is in fine shape and the cyclamens, in particular, are good.

At the store of the E. C. Ameling Co. a large force of men and girls are working on statice wreaths, bouquets and similar stock for their Memorial day trade. Over 30,000 statice have already been shipped. P. Huss is at Sawtelle in connection with the building operations.

Louis Dubin, of Wolfskill's & Morris Goldenson, has been on the sick list for a week. Albert Goldenson says funeral work is brisk just now.

F. Royston, of Walter Armacost & Co., has returned from the hot springs in the San Jacinto mountains and liked it so well he is going again, having left Mrs. Royston there. He says he met J. J. Reeves, superintendent of Beverly Hills Nursery, there, who is still far from well. At the store large numbers of baskets are being handled.

Angelo Tassano is going to leave his home on Whittier avenue and live at the Artesia Nursery until he leaves for Italy. G. Gorini, who has leased the nursery, will live in the Whittier avenue home. Some extra fine maidenhair is being sent in to the market from here.

F. R. Hills and Mrs. Hills have just returned from a week at Duncan Springs.

Fred H. Howard and party returned from their trip to the mountains just in time to escape the heavy rain.

W. Thompson has opened a flower store at Sawtelle, in addition to the stand on West Pico street. H. R. R.

The Market.

Stock was not plentiful last week, owing to the inclement weather. The demand has been heavy and prices have advanced. The market is cleaned out early every day; in fact, there is not enough of some kinds of stock to go around. The stock of roses does not meet the demand, while the same is true of carnations. Spanish irises, ranunculi and anemones are all holding their prices, though they are more plentiful than the previous week. Tulips are commanding good prices, but this crop is nearing its end. There are fine crops of sweet peas coming in, as well as fancy snapdragons and gillyflowers. More gladioli are being cut and the first peonies are now in the market. Double pink hawthorn is helping to solve the stock shortage and pansies also help out. Strawflowers are arriving in large quantities and they will do good service over Memorial day. There are enough orchids to meet the demand and valley is not scarce. The market is almost flooded with what is called wild valley. Gardenias are plentiful.

The Dahlia Society of California will hold its seventh annual dahlia show August 31 to September 2, at the Palace hotel.

The florists and growers of this vicinity will hold their picnic at Fairfax, April 29. One feature will be a contest for a Buick car donated by Nat Roller.

The San Francisco Coöperative Market has installed its new stock room in a handy location close to the entrance on Bush street.

C. Kooyman, speaking of freesias, said: "Indications are that freesias are going to be scarce this year and it would be well for people to buy early. Frost, during the late winter, killed the young plants. Strawflowers are also going to be somewhat scarce, according to the information we receive, and there will be a big demand for Memorial day."

"Mothers' day is a bigger day than Memorial day," declared J. A. Axell. "Business is excellent, but we haven't enough stock."

E. W. McLellan continues to cut Russell and Hadley roses with exceptionally long stems; these have excited much admiration.

Business is good, according to I.

Inoue, manager of the United Flower & Supply Co. Mr. Inoue has been visiting the trans-bay growers and found the amount of stock to be inadequate for the Mothers' day demand. This firm has several varieties of statice, helichrysum and other strawflowers coming in earlier than most of the stock of this kind.

Enomoto & Co. consider it too risky to ship cut flowers east at present and, in spite of a big demand, have declined to make long-distance shipments. They are handling statice and also have good crops of Spanish irises, roses and carnations from their nurseries.

The Growers' Floral Co. has a good rose crop coming in, as well as carnations and statice.

Domoto Bros. handled large orders for Mothers' day, for which they were able to cut good crops of roses, carnations and many kinds of outdoor stock, as well as quantities of asparagus fern. They have plenty of fine, potted roses and azaleas.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. have had a busy time with funeral work. Some beautiful pieces were made by them. Frank D. Pelicano has finished planting his dahlias and is now back at the store.

Podesta & Baldoecchi have been rushed with funeral work. They had six elaborate palls in two days, in addition to a large amount of work for prominent funerals.

B. Joseph used a copy of Whistler's "Mother" in his Mothers' day advertising, with appropriate lines to suggest the sentiments of the day.

David Lichtenstein, the Terminal Florist, is anticipating a busy time from the visit of the Shriners. Immediately after the close of the national convention here, in the middle of June, delegations of Shriners will visit Honolulu. Mr. Lichtenstein has the contract for decorating the Matson liners, which are to carry the Shriners to the islands. The Matsonia alone requires 200 ferns and palms for her decorations. She will be the first of the Shriner boats to leave.

Charles C. Navlet now has a complete stock of dahlia bulbs. The Black Pearl is on the market for the first time. It is "Pa" Fenton's introduction. This house had its own carnations for the Mothers' day trade.

Julius Eppstein, of the St. Francis hotel, has been in his element with the opening, May 10, of the remodeled St. Francis hotel ballroom, with a big dinner dance, for which Mr. Eppstein had a number of tables, including one decorated entirely in orchids.

F. C. Jaeger & Son have been busy with Mothers' day and funeral work.

Charles Brown, of Brown & Kennedy, says that funeral work has kept them busy.

The Suzanne Floral Co. has put in a new window, which is excellent for display purposes, as the space inside runs back for some seven feet. This firm has just had a big wedding at the 'Cliff hotel, the room decorations being pink double hawthorn and rambler roses.

The Market.

Business for the first part of May is rather quiet, with a light run on funeral work. The various flower stores are well supplied with Easter lilies, snapdragons, sweet peas, Spanish iris, Darwin tulips and roses. There is a shortage on carnations compared with other years. In pot plants hydrangeas are taking the lead, with a few pots of forget-me-nots, Darwin tulips, primroses, etc.

Ferns, like Boston, Whitmanii, etc., are not to be gotten, and the florists are losing sales by not having such stock at hand at the present time. Some stores are endeavoring to sell bedding plants, and pansies can be seen in almost any up-to-date flower store.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

The weather continues cold, windy and rainy, holding back business in all lines, including the florists'; the latter complain of the late spring and slow movement of bedding stock. The prospects are good for a whirlwind rush just as soon as the warm, clear days come. All are prepared and it is hinted that, with all the stock available, there is going to be a shortage for outside planting.

With the Bowlers.

Invading Tacoma with their crack team of bowlers, the Seattle florists and forty rooters were met by the home committee and escorted on a visiting tour among the shops. The first game started at 7 p. m., with the Seattle men "rooting their heads off." Result—first blood for Seattle; score: Visitors, 756; home team, 721. The second game began with Tacoma's star rooter, H. W. Manike, in action, and from then on the home team took on new energy, with the result that it captured two games and won the series. The total for the series was: Seattle, 2,167, and Tacoma, 2,301.

After the game all marched to the Stone room of the Tacoma hotel, where a sumptuous banquet was in waiting. The floral decorations were well up to such occasions, where florists meet as jolly good fellows. The arrangement was splendid and Mr. Kloepper, who superintended the work, was highly complimented. The fun started while waiting for the first course, with a cabaret song and dance, and from then on the entertainers came thick and fast. One hour was spent responding to toasts, which the toastmaster, Mr. Manike, shot at the victims. Wit and humor filled the hour with fun and laughter.

President Smith made a motion, which was carried, that a suitable cup be procured to be bowled for, the team winning it three times to acquire ownership. Captain Desmond accepted on behalf of Seattle and promised his loyal support in the contest. Henry Ben-thien, the noted earwig specialist, challenged Mr. Holting, of Seattle, for a 3-game match for $25. This was cheerfully accepted. Doctor Spencer and

The Market.

Unfavorable weather conditions have kept down stocks of all kinds, so the trade has easily cleaned up current offerings. There has been fair delivery of larkspur and a good demand for it. The demand for cut forget-me-nots has been ahead of the supply daily the last week. On carnations the supply is short, and at wholesale these are cleaned up as fast as offered.

The supply of roses has been fair and has cleared well. Daffodils and tulips are about the only items that approach oversupply. Some fine cut tulips are being shown, and the varicolored varieties, especially, are in good demand. The cut of orchids is down to a minimum and big demand would force the trade to go elsewhere for its stock. Sweet peas are showing up well as to color.

Bedding stock has been easy to sell, and gladiolus bulbs have been money-makers.

Potted items are free-moving lines, geraniums, tulips and hydrangeas being the leaders.

Various Notes.

Wallace Beall, of the Beall Greenhouses, is receiving the sincere sympathy of the entire trade over the accidental death of his 3-year-old son last week. The boy fell into an open post hole and before he could be rescued had strangled.

Kenney's Home of Flowers has enjoyed an increased transient business during the few days of better weather. This shop continues to show fine hydrangeas.

Satisfactory progress on all crops at the greenhouses is reported by Rosaia Bros., with only a little good weather needed to bring along a fine crop of roses. Increased activity in the line of social decorations has been noted, although none of the recent commissions has been large. Mrs. P. L. Rosaia has returned from a short vacation following the Easter rush.

The Orpheum Floral Co. handled the corsages for a university function last week, using violets and sweet alyssum to reproduce the school colors of purple and gold.

F. A. Allen, of the Pinehurst Floral Shop, has returned from a visit with relatives in Vancouver, B. C. He reports trade conditions there as generally good.

Better general business is reported for the City Flower Shop, which has been displaying some fine roses in its Third avenue window. The sale of bedding stock has been good, especially on pansies.

At the last regular meeting of the Seattle Florists' Association the following officers were named for the ensuing year: President, Dr. Walter A. Moore, of Hollywood Gardens; vice-president, Harry A. Crouch, of the Woodlawn Flower Shop; secretary, David L. Jones, of the Woodlawn Flower Shop, and treasurer, P. F. Rosaia, of Rosaia Bros. With the exception of secretary, this constitutes no change from the officials of the previous year. A challenge was received from the baseball club of the Spokane Florists' Association for a game to be played at the coming picnic of the local association, and steps were taken to ar-

FLORISTS HERE AND ABROAD.

British Visitor Makes Comparisons.

In a recent issue of the bulletin of the British Florists' Federation, Carl Engelmann, of Saffron Walden, England, remembered as a most interesting and interested visitor in this country not long since, compares British florists and their methods with those of the United States and some of the South American countries.

"British growers," he says, "may be divided into two classes: (1) Those who cater for Covent Garden and other large markets, and (2) those who grow to supply their own retail business. The former are more or less specialists, only dealing with a limited variety of flowers, while the latter generally are tempted to grow a great variety of plants and flowers in the endeavor to supply their retail customers. I believe I am right in stating that the specialists are gradually gaining ground, owing, no doubt, to their ability to grow produce of the highest quality at a lowest cost.

"The United States is, of course, the Eldorado of the specialist, the land of standardization and mass production. The growers have followed the national inclination, and many of the most successful men in the trade have adopted a kind of 'Ford' system in flower cultivation. I may mention here that the vegetable and flower growers are in two quite distinct trades, and one rarely finds the latter growing a house of tomatoes or cucumbers as a catch crop, which, of course, with us is the usual thing.

Specialists.

"Mass production is brought to a high state of perfection in rose growing. Even the largest establishments, with several acres of glass, would not grow more than four or six varieties in quantity. The nicety with which the crops are timed is most astonishing, and the average quality of the blooms reaches a high standard indeed.

"In other establishments energy is concentrated on the growing of carnations, orchids, lilies, palms, pot plants, etc., and in all these lines a pretty high average quality is reached, and this in spite of the fact that skilled growers are few and far between, and factory methods have to be adopted in nearly every establishment—methods not always ideal for plant cultivation.

"Besides these specialists, there are also many, mostly with smaller establishments, where, as in England, a miscellaneous lot of plants and flowers are grown for a retail trade, but it appears to me that there, more than here, the specialist is gradually squeezing these growers out of existence. But in the South American countries which I visited last year I did not see a large florist's establishment specializing in one article. Around several of the principal cities in Brazil, Argentina and Chile, there are, certainly, a few native growers who grow nothing but carnations, and apparently do well at it, but all the larger establishments have their own shops in the city and grow, or try to grow, a vast number of subjects to supply their private customers. This method naturally means considerable waste and, consequently, high prices.

The Wholesaler.

"Now as to the wholesale salesman. This much-abused individual appears to be loved by no man. We are told he squeezes the uttermost farthing out of the retailer and pays the grower just enough for his stuff to keep him out of the bankruptcy court. Even by his friends he seems to be looked upon only as a necessary evil. Well, the trade would certainly be in a queer way without these 'terrible' salesmen. In Great Britain we have our Covent Garden market in London and markets in various towns, where the salesmen exchange choice flowers for hard cash, and, occasionally, choice language with certain customers. Several salesmen have warehouses and offices close to these open markets, where business is carried on after the market is closed and provincial orders are attended to. The market proper, however, is the center of the business.

"This is not the case in most of the cities of the United States—except as regards the salesmen, the language and the flowers—because each wholesale florist has his own premises. These are mostly situated quite close together in one district, and many of them are large and well appointed establishments, like miniature markets. The flowers are sent by the growers and sold on commission, as here; but whereas here most things are sold by the box and little repacking is done, over there the grower sends his flowers in larger cases and practically every order is repacked. Many buyers, of course, fetch their own flowers and take them away as suits their convenience. There are, however, several markets after the style of ours in the United States, and a notable one, like a small Covent Garden, is at Boston, and this is owned by a syndicate of growers and commission men.

"In South America the wholesale florist is practically unknown, and I have had to come to the conclusion that he is a product, and a necessity, of a superior civilization, and his advent, wherever it may be, is a sure sign of the advance of the whole trade. Here and there in the countries of South America one finds a flower market. Such, however, can only be compared with the markets in our smaller provincial towns, and practically only retail business is transacted.

American Retailer Ahead.

"The last, and perhaps the most important, branch of the flower industry is that of the retail florist. If he did not push his wares, and, as our friends across the Atlantic do, induce the general public to 'Say It with Flowers,' the rest of the trade would put up their shutters. In the United States the flower shops are, on the whole, far more elaborate and extensive than those with

Woodruff of Lowgap Bowls Me Over With a Fish Bowl

Now, it happens that Lowgap is in North Carolina and that Woodruff & Son are wholesale packers of Decorative Evergreens.

Yesterday's mail brought a card and a letter from the son. On the card was this bowl and goldfish.

In his letter he said things that made me think things.

The card said that the goldfish would swim round and round for a hundred miles without getting six inches from the starting point.

The letter said—well, never mind what it said, but as near as I could make out, what it meant to mean was, that a certain F. T. D. florist on Fifth Avenue, corner of 58th Street, New York, was considerable of a sayer.

It didn't say he wasn't much of a doer, but I sort of gathered that he would be as much interested in reading an order from us once in a while, as week after week reading our talks in these ad. talks.

A fellow that comes right out frank like that and sends along a fish and a bowl besides, I believe should be encouraged.

Next time you want Decorative Evergreens, you might like to know that Woodruff & Son's address is Lowgap, N. C.

which we are familiar here. Many occupy a large amount of space, with large workrooms and showrooms, the latter often furnished in elaborate style, with dainty tables and chairs. No flower store (as it is called there) of any importance is without its large icebox for keeping flowers. In some instances this item is as large as a small English flower shop, and often the temperature is kept down by the latest refrigerating machinery working with compressed air. These boxes have, of course, a glass front, so that the customer can see the flowers and select what is required.

"Dried, preserved and artificial flowers are far more extensively used in America than here, and fancy baskets of

Flowers and Giving

"Consider the lilies of the field." How bountifully they bloom, how freely and fully they give of their loveliness and sweetness.

Brother Florists, we give to you our kindly thoughts and best wishes. Let us make this Spring-time very beautiful. "He that soweth bountifully, shall reap also bountifully."

all shapes and designs are fashionable. "The retail florists' establishments in South America are naturally of a most varied type, from fine businesses, which would make some of our west-end florists stare, in cities like Rio de Janeiro, Sao Paulo, Buenos Aires, Montevideo, etc., down to the poorest apology for a florists' shop in the smaller out-of-the-way places. It is a significant fact that even small towns have their florist, and flowers are used wherever barbarism has made room for civilization.

Balancing Differences.

"Space does not permit me to go further into details, and so I will venture upon a short summing up. Here we appear to have some better individual growers than there are in the United States, and when writing of the flower business there I include Canada, where conditions are practically identical. The flower-growing industry, however, seems to be carried on in a more businesslike style, and it is far better organized than here, while in the construction of glass-houses the Americans are certainly well ahead of us. The wholesaler, or commission man, across the water handles the flowers more carefully and does not waste so much as his brother on this side. He seems to be regarded, as he should be, more as a connecting link between the producer and consumer, rather than as the 'bête noire' of the flower industry.

"The greatest difference, however, and unfortunately not to the advantage of the Britisher, lies in the retail florists. Suffice it to say, that we have too many flower sellers and not enough florists in this branch of the industry.

"Finally, the social intercourse among the whole of the trade is more intimate there than here. There is no important town in the States or Canada which has not its florists' club, with practically all the retailers, wholesalers and flower growers as members. There are monthly business meetings, as well as picnics, dances, ladies' nights, dinners, etc., on its program. It is difficult to overestimate the value of these organizations from a business point of view, and it is up to us to imitate our brethren across the Atlantic in this respect."

ARE WE DOING OUR PART?

The writer recently read an article by A. D. Lasker, chairman of the United States shipping board and formerly president of the widely known advertising firm of Lord & Thomas, who quoted the following: "Advertising is an American product and we are the only nation on the face of the earth that knows how to advertise. Advertising, as we understand it today, is a comparatively new product, no older perhaps than 25 years, and I place that limitation upon the life of present-day advertising in order that I may gracefully say that I have had the wonderful opportunity of seeing it develop from mere type on white space to its present position."

The above paragraph struck a peculiar thought in my mind, as applied to florists and florists' advertising, except that we have developed our own in the few short years since our national publicity campaign started. It is masterful in its entirety—the progress we have made during the last five years—when we consider our own development in this direction from many standpoints; namely, when scanning our lists of contributing members to note the names of many who originally felt it was not at all essential to help the sale of flowers, but who now have acknowledged their error and contribute and boost also; then, the type who realizes the importance of selling more flowers now and considers that of late years we have forgotten the gluts we used to hear about so frequently; also, the number of campaigns started locally after noting the success of other centers; so, all in all, it is most pleasing to note our progress in this direction. Most of the florists' advertisements of today have a personality of their own, as against the effort in the earlier days, and perhaps "Say It with Flowers" and all its contemporary sayings have helped our brethren to bolster up more courage to attain the present result. However, we are only on the first round of the possibilities that are in store for us.

We hope some day to treat our advertising with words of instruction: How to use and keep flowers; how to grow and keep flowering plants; how properly to remember friends and relatives when telegraphing flowers to distant cities, so that our future advertising will consist of more constructive activity in the sale of more flowers.

The improvement in the kind of advertising we are all doing today is so marked that our trade as a whole is benefiting daily in the successful strides made in this direction. The florist of the west benefits by the progress made by his brother in the east, as does the florist in the north by his brother in the south; thus, the entire business profits in the general success.

Now, the only feature that seems lacking in this entire march of progress is an abundance of funds to keep our national program activities on the move. We are doing well for the

The Market.

The wholesale market in the early part of last week was loaded with heavy consignments and low prices prevailed. Generally speaking, the most of the stock was of poor quality, owing to the hot weather.

Beginning May 11, prices shot upward as the demand became better, and May 13 there was a general clean-up at the various wholesale markets, where shipping orders were piled high. There was some complaint among the retailers at the sudden advance in prices, but the leaders in the trade say the public wants flowers on Mothers' day and that advanced prices cut little figure.

Carnations were not in oversupply.

With the great demand for these, everything cleaned up, with fancies at $15 per hundred, top price. Roses were in great supply all last week and went begging early in the week. Even the great demand was hardly equal to the supply the last few days in the week.

Fancy gladiolus spikes had a heavy demand all last week and cleared nicely each day. Peonies were many, but did not take so well for Mothers' day as did other stock, and the supply greatly exceeded the demand. A few cape jasmines were in the market and sold well. Easter lilies and valley had a good week.

There was also a great supply of yellow and white daisies, and sweet peas. There was a glut of these all week, but they came into their own for the Mothers' day demand.

The Spanish irises, cornflowers, calendulas, delphiniums, Darwin tulips and plenty of fine spikes of snapdragon made up the rest of the consignments of seasonable cut flowers.

In greens the heavy demand was for asparagus and smilax and there was plenty on hand.

Club was held Thursday afternoon, May 11, at publicity headquarters. Owing to the busy season, the meeting was only fairly well attended. When President W. A. Rowe called the meeting to order, there were thirty members present.

After disposing of the usual preliminaries, Chairman A. W. Gumz, of the trustees, reported that the club meetings during the summer months would be held outdoors and that invitations would be in order from growers wishing to entertain the members. W. J. Pilcher invited the club to hold its June meeting at his place, at Kirkwood, and Edwin Denker announced that he would entertain the members for the July meeting, at his place at St. Charles, Mo. Both invitations were accepted with thanks.

The committee in charge of the commercial exhibits at the spring flower show, given by the Garden Club of St. Louis, consisting of W. J. Pilcher, chairman; C. E. De Wever, Julius Schaeffer and Frank A. Windler, secretary, reported that all in the trade had been notified by letter with enclosed program and entry blanks; that the large posters announcing the show were ready for distribution, and that the committee's work had been completed. A motion then prevailed that the committee be given a rising vote of thanks for its good work.

Frank Fillmore's usual motion that the club hold its annual picnic in July came up for discussion and the trustees were requested to arrange for this annual event at the club's expense and report at the next meeting for final instructions.

C. W. Wors then read a clipping from the St. Louis Times, which referred to the florists as profiteers during Mothers' day flower sales and also an answer which he wrote. This was given a vote of thanks.

J. F. Annmann responded as to the take place June 8 and will be the thirty-sixth anniversary meeting.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association held its meeting May 8, at Tower Grove hall, on South Grand avenue. In the absence of Theodore Miller, who has resigned as presiding officer, Mrs. F. Diemer presided. All other officers were present and the attendance was better than usual. Prospects for Mothers' day business came up for discussion and all present predicted a record-breaking business. Several new members were elected, with promises that several more would be taken in at the next meeting and it looks as if the association has taken a new lease on life.

Bishop Tuttle presided over the services at the annual flower sermon, May 14, at Christ church cathedral. An honorarium for this sermon was left as an annual bequest by the terms of the will of the late Henry Shaw, founder of the Missouri Botanical Garden.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle was entertained May 10 by Mrs. E. E. Windler, at her home on Virginia avenue. All members were present and enjoyed a pleasant afternoon.

Henry G. Berning says that he will have at his disposal more than 100,000 peonies from now on until after Memorial day.

Blair Impson, of the George Waldbart Floral Co., had a scare May 8, when two young men, under pretense of ordering flowers for Mothers' day, made an attempt to rob the cash register. They were frightened away by the entrance of customers, however, and both escaped.

L. F. Dintelman, Belleville, Ill.;
Charles Johann, Collinsville, Ill.; A.
Ahrens, O'Fallon, Ill., and Edward Denker, St. Charles, Mo., visited the wholesale district May 11 and attended the Florists' Club meeting in the afternoon.

A. E. Turner, of Mosinee, Wis., wholesale fern dealer, spent a few days in the city last week.

May 8 Captain Ruff's No. 1 team, Captain Kuehner's No. 2 team and Captain McAna's No. 3 team of the "Say It with Flowers" league rolled in the city handicap tournament. All seemed off form and did not disturb the leaders. May 17 this week they will bowl three doubles and singles and better work is looked for.

L. F. Dintelman, of Belleville, Ill., reports that he will cut for Memorial day for the local markets 10,000 peonies in forty different varieties. A. G. Fehr, of Belleville, will also have many thousands of fine peonies.

Frank Plotz, of the Brix Floral Co., reports that Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Brix, who are traveling in Germany, have advised that they arrived in Germany safely, and are having a most delightful time. They will remain abroad until next fall.

Paul T. Heil, at 556 Skinker, has this to say regarding Mothers' day business: "Easter was the best ever, but Mothers' day topped it in many ways in volume of business."

Telegraph orders for local delivery and those sent to florists in all parts of the country were the greatest ever.
From what can be learned at the present writing, the demand in St. Louis was the greatest ever and topped Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter, all great flower days, in dollars and cents.

The St. Louis Flower Growers' Publicity Association had, with the cooperation of the retailers, a full-page advertisement in each of the four daily newspapers, beginning May 10 and ending May 13. This gave great publicity for Mothers' day and created a tre-

The Market.

Mothers' day was a great success. Carnations and roses were cleaned up early Saturday, May 13, and there were more calls for both than could be supplied. Roses sold quite as readily as carnations. Both came in fine; in fact, all stock was good. Sweet peas were plentiful. Easter lilies were abundant. Peonies and gladioli were in good supply, but, much to the surprise of the consignors, this stock was left to the last and was taken only because there was nothing else. Good carnations sold on the market from $12 to $15. The average retail price was from $3 to $4. Some fancy stock sold for $5. This was limited in quantity.

Various Notes.

Henry Kusik & Co. sold 10,000 Easter lilies, 30,000 roses and 25,000 carnations last week. It was the best Mothers' day the firm ever had.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. cut 15,000 carnations for Mothers' day and sold them all at retail. Heretofore the firm has wholesaled part of its cut. One feature of Mothers' day business this year was the early buying. Additional salespeople were needed all week. Mr. Rock said he had never seen so many early orders.

James Ragan's cut of carnations averaged 3,000 a day for the entire week before Mothers' day. This was a heavier cut than he had for Easter.

The T. J. Noll Floral Co. sold out early Saturday, May 13. The roses that came in late in the afternoon and were intended for the following Monday's orders, were taken in advance. Stock was in such demand that Monday was left to take care of itself.

John Stevens cut 20,000 carnations for Mothers' day. He has planted 13,000 rose plants, Columbia, Premier and Butterfly, in the two houses recently completed in his Independence range.

The Muehlebach Flower Shop had seventeen decorations Thursday, May 11. Hugo Neff and his assistants worked at top speed all week, as it was an unusually busy time.

Jacob Hepting has returned from a visit in Switzerland. He sold his greenhouses to Rau & Kupfer several months ago, before going abroad for a rest. Recently he contracted with W. S. Dolan, of the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., for a steel-frame house, 30x100, to be built at Overland Park, Kan.

The Kansas City Wholesale Cut Flower Co. found its Easter lilies well liked for Mothers' day. These were ordered in large lots and were of excellent quality. When roses and carnations gave out, the lilies were in demand. A great quantity of other stock was exhausted Saturday, May 13.

The Chandler Landscape & Floral Co. had a heavier shipping business for Mothers' day than at any other holiday since the opening of the store. Funeral work and decorations were also heavy. Friday, May 12, there were three weddings. For one of these R. L. Motes decorated the church, the hotel where the reception was held, and the bride's table.

J. E. Murray & Co. received many compliments on their baskets, which were a special feature for Mothers' day. These baskets were made by Miss Grace Murray. Colonial bouquets were also featured. The sale of plants was larger than that of any previous Mothers' day and business in general for the week was good.

Reicht & Son, Leeds, Mo., will build two new houses; one will be 36x200 feet and the other 30x200 feet, steel frame, to be built by the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. Reicht & Son are market gardeners, but will also grow flowers for this market. Both new houses will be planted in carnations.

Samuel Murray's gloxinias were in great demand for Mothers' day. They could easily hold their own with anything grown in any greenhouse. Mr. Murray has been successful with these plants. This year's crop was better than any he has ever grown. J. E. K.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The market was good last week. Stock was plentiful in every line, except for the first few days of the week, when carnations were being held back for Mothers' day sales. Pot plants were scarce, but cut flowers were plentiful for Mothers' day.

advertising has been done by individual florists and excellent results were obtained. The Mothers' day business was greater in volume than that of a year ago. A large crop of roses is now available; Ophelia, Crusader and Columbia are perhaps the most popular now. There has been a fair demand for Sweetheart roses. Sweet peas were also in good supply and the quality kept up well. Carnations, for which the demand last week was unusually heavy, were of good quality and reached good figures; the supply has been good, but more could have been used could they have been obtained. Snapdragons were in good supply and they sold readily. A few good gladioli reach the market and are quickly sold. These are bringing good prices. Orchids and valley were plentiful and the demand for these was fair. Outdoor bulbous stock sold well.

Various Notes.

The wearing of mothers' favorite flower, rather than the carnation, which was originally intended, helped the florists considerably. In this locality, as in many others, it was impossible to supply the unusual demand for carnations.

Music, and later at the Eastman School of Music, has accepted a position as soprano soloist at the Memorial Presbyterian church.

The condition of Herbert B. Stringer, who has been sick with pneumonia, is much improved and the doctors say he is on the road to recovery.

All of the uptown florists made a special effort to make their windows particularly impressive for Mothers' day. The usual picture was noticed in many cases, but the novel displays, aided by the use of wax figures with especially good settings, attracted good crowds. Newspaper advertising greatly increased the sales. H. J. H.

for these bouquets. For the corsage, orchids are the most popular.

From now until the end of June, everyone will be busy with commencement bouquets. Roses, peonies, snapdragons, marguerites and sweet peas are the most popular. The cut flower market is in good shape, for the weather has been cool. Peonies are reaching the market in small quantities and are bringing $1.50 per dozen. There is a fair supply of delphiniums. Roses are plentiful and the quality good. Carnations jumped in price on account of the Mothers' day demand, advancing to $10 and $15 per hundred. The quality is only fair. There is only a fair supply of callas and the flowers are small.

The Market.

The continued fair weather last week was responsible for the entrance into the local market of enormous quantities of flowers of all kinds and it was not possible to move more than a small portion of the stock. A great many peonies are being shipped in from the south, and these are arriving in fine condition. Good quality flowers range in price from $8 to $15 per hundred.

There were large numbers of orders placed last week for roses for Mothers' day. Colors seemed to be the most popular. Carnations were more plentiful this year than ever before, but the retailers were slow in placing their orders, because they balked at the prices which were demanded by the wholesalers. The asking price on white carnations was $15 per hundred, with colored carnations offered at $10 and $12. The retailers considered these figures too high. In the rose line Columbia, Premier, Butterfly and Double White Killarney were the favorites and the prices ranged from $6 to $20 per hundred. Early in the week sweet peas could be had in any quantity at from $3 to $10 per thousand, according to quality, but the price stiffened materially towards the end of the week in anticipation of Mothers' day, and the prices then ranged from $1 to $2 per hundred. There was far more of a glut in sweet peas than in any other flowers.

American Beauty roses are not as good as they have been, due to the warm weather, and the price has dropped to from $3 to $6 per dozen. Darwin tulips are about over for this season, but the price remains at $8 per hundred for those tulips that are still to be had.

There was a great glut of valley last week and the price ranged from $1 to $6 per hundred. The latter figure was for the indoor stock, which is far superior to that grown outside. There are plenty of calendulas to be had, but they are in no demand.
T. N. S.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

The condition of the market last week was good, with the exception of carnations. The demand for carnations for Mothers' day far exceeded the supply and, in many instances, the growers and wholesalers were compelled to divide their stock among their regular customers. White carnations were plentiful in the market, while the colored varieties were scarce. Good carnations brought $15 per hundred.

The supply of roses was large and the quality good. In many cases customers were requested to substitute roses for carnations. The varieties of roses received in this market were White Killarney, White Ophelia, Premier, Columbia, Crusader, Richmond, Pilgrim, Ward and Ophelia.

A good supply of yellow and white daisies were in the market and helped out considerably. Sweet peas were in abundance, but the quality was poor. There were a few calendulas, but these were hardly in sufficient quantity to meet the demand. Easter and calla lilies were in abundance and moved fairly well. Valley was also one of the more important factors, and the demand was just about equal to the supply. Southern lilac continues to be in the market, but the demand is limited.

The demand for indoor gladioli was good. Peonies are making their appearance this season; the quality is exceptionally fine. They have been bringing from $12 to $15 per hundred. Iris is also an important factor in the market and the demand is just about equivalent to the supply. The supply of American Beauty roses has been large; the demand, however, is limited. The Mothers' day sales surpassed those of any previous year.

members present, in view of the fact that a great many of the retail men as well as the wholesale men have contributed to the advertising fund. The advertising fund has not grown much since the last meeting, there being only one new subscriber to report; namely, Fred Perti, $15. The growers and retail men have been pretty well canvassed, and there are but a few who are unable to see the benefits to be derived through advertising.

Another new member was added to our list.

Regardless as to whether or not the florists hold their annual meeting in Cincinnati, the association is making arrangements to hold a florists' picnic, probably during the month of June. This idea seemed to meet with the approval of the retail men and, if it materializes, we hope all will attend.

The next meeting will be held at the establishment of L. F. Murphy, Wednesday, June 7. Joseph Imholte, Sec'y.

ADVERTISING AT OMAHA.

Of the vigorous advertising campaign carried on by the Omaha and Council Bluffs Florists' Club at Omaha, Neb., the latest manifestation is a huge "Say It with Flowers" sign, electrically lighted, placed on the top of a 3-story building right in the heart of the city. This is one of many such signs put up by the club. When it is known that between 50,000 and 60,000 people pass this sign every day, its pulling power can be realized. They are wide-awake at Omaha.

poses. Since the ban was placed upon the importation of these plants Mr. Loeben, in common with many other florists throughout the country, has been experimenting with a view to growing them in quantity in this country. Mr. Loeben reports success in his efforts, stating he has about 35,000 large and small plants ready to house next fall. He says that his plants grow and flower better than azaleas do in Belgium or in Germany, and he should know his field pretty well, having had practical experience in growing the plants in both those countries.

HARRISBURG, PA.

Florists in the capital city made heavy preparation for the demand for flowers brought forth by Mothers' day.

Fred Ridenour, the North Third street florist, had his establishment well filled Friday, May 12, with carnations, roses, valley and potted plants. Taking the stock as a whole, it was extra fine.

Similar conditions prevailed at the Berry Hill Flower Shop, Charles Utley's, Mader's and Charles L. Schmidt's. Carnations were bringing about $3 per dozen, roses from $2.50 to $4 per dozen, and, of course, potted plants varied greatly, according to variety, quality and size.

It would seem that a little more publicity was given Mothers' day this year than for a number of seasons past. Some of the city pastors announced Mothers' day on the previous Sunday, suggesting special floral decoration in the churches and likewise emphasizing

WORCESTER, MASS.

"No increase in price of flowers" worked wonders for Mothers' day.
Sales have been made on an unprecedented scale, as compared with other years. Beautiful, plentiful and in many varieties, the stock handled and sold cleaned right up in several of the big stores, both in cut flowers and potted plants.

Randall's Flower Shop had one window devoted to gloxinias in 6-inch and 8-inch pots.

Lange's had the radio and telegraph instruments for the delivery of flowers in working order, doing business with the outfit and operator in the store window. Each and every florist in the city seems to have done his best for a comeback. The slogan, "No Increase in Price," should prevail all the year around, as seasons permit.

Nurseries are busy in this locality.
Demands are unusually heavy and stocks are readily sold.

Forest fires still rage throughout New England. It is estimated the damage will amount to $100,000 in Worcester county alone.

Huntington, Ind.—Peter Morgen has bought back the place he owned previous to his departure to Roanoke, Va., whence he has returned, to go into business.

Melissa, Tex.—Nearly every issue of The Review contains one or more items showing the unusual business combinations of those who are florists only part of the time. Flowers and fruit are common, as are flowers and candy and flowers and undertaking. Not long ago there was reference to a florist whose side line is dog and cat remedies. Here in Melissa George W. Taylor is a leading florist and anthropologist. He makes Pyorene Pellets and Pyrene Dentine. Every now and then we hear of a florist who is "sore." If his soreness is of the gums and teeth, tell him to take it up with Taylor.

Sweet peas came out in tremendous numbers and few sold above $2 per hundred. Yellow marguerites were more in favor at $1 to $3 per hundred. There were a good many gladioli in probably a dozen varieties, such as Mrs. Francis King, Augusta, Halley, America, Blushing Bride, Peach Blossom and The Bride, but they dragged considerably and buyers seemed somewhat chary about buying them. There was a nice lot of delphiniums and annual gypsophila, which sold well, but callas and lilies were largely neglected. Antirrhinum continued in big supply and few of the flowers made over 75 cents per dozen spikes. Small lots of outdoor narcissi and Darwin tulips came in, but these cut little figure. There were also small advance batches of ten weeks' stocks and other Memorial day flowers. It was a most satisfactory Mothers' day market.

May 15 saw a fairly good supply of flowers, but carnations were in rather short supply, while prices showed considerable recessions. No great slump is probable with these, with Memorial day only two weeks away. There is an abundant supply of sweet peas, daisies, gladioli, snapdragons and other flowers and roses are in heavy supply, favored by the clear, bright weather we have enjoyed of late. There are fair numbers of cattleyas still coming in and plenty of valley, but gardenias are getting scarce.

Growers and retailers both report a big sale of plants for Mothers' day. Geraniums were much called for, also pansies, double daisies and forget-me-nots, while pelargoniums, hydrangeas, roses, calceolarias and made-up baskets were all in large demand. Some of the retailers said the plant demand reminded them of Christmas and Easter.

Various Notes.

The great show of native ferns and flowers staged at Horticultural hall by Albert C. Burrage finally closed May 14, with a gross attendance of nearly 85,000, which far exceeded any previous records here. Flowers were frequently renewed and on the closing night everything looked nearly as fresh as when first staged. It was an inspiration to see the way the crowds poured in, especially when the clear, delightful weather was luring them to the arboretum. Public gardens and parkways are now smothered with bloom and the apple and peach orchards in the country are sheets of white and pink flowers.

A gold medal was awarded to Douglas Eccleston, superintendent to Albert C. Burrage, for skillful reproduction of natural-growing conditions for New England ferns and flora at the exhibitions. The Appleton gold medal was also awarded to Fred Pocock for valuable assistance rendered.

William E. Endicott has been elected a trustee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, in place of the late Richard M. Saltonstall.

Chester Paine, of Paine Bros., Randolph, and one of the directors of the Boston Flower Exchange, met with a painful accident May 14, when a tractor he was driving got out of control and ran over him. He sustained serious injuries and one wound was ten inches long. Over a dozen stitches were necessary and it will be at least a fortnight before Mr. Paine can leave the house again. At this busy season the accident is most unfortunate and Mr. Paine's many friends hope he may have a speedy recovery.

are already heavy and, from the way orders are pouring in, it will be a question where to secure all the cut flower material needed. There will be, as usual, enormous numbers of "metallie sympathies" offered for sale, and some firms expect to sell more than ever of these. It would, of course, be impossible to furnish cut flowers and deliver them fresh to the remote points where a large proportion of these artificial creations go.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

To produce the 35,800 carloads of cantaloupes grown commercially in 1921 and valued at over $17,000,000 required 160,000 pounds of seed.

IMPORTERS of French bulbs are awaiting with considerable interest the outcome of the meeting of producers at Ollioules, France, which has been set for May 18.

MOST of the large bulb importers were in Washington at the beginning of the week for the conference on quarantine 37. Full report of the proceedings is on a forward page.

THE well known horticultural writer, William T. Miller, who went to Los Angeles some time ago on account of Mrs. Miller's health, is entering the mail order seed business at that city.

In planting the 30,000 acres devoted to the commercial production of lettuce in 1921, which yielded a total of 9,431,800 crates, or nearly 19,000 carloads, valued at $12,689,441, there was used 90,000 pounds of lettuce seed.

THE exports of seeds from Denmark to the United States were 159,190 pounds in 1913, 1,775,700 in 1919 and 7,656,888 in 1920, according to a report of the Department of Commerce. The value of the 1920 export was $1,346,491.

THE weather for the last three months has been favorable for growing onion seed in the Canary islands. If there are no unfavorable developments during the next three or four months, a crop of at least average size—about 75,000 pounds—will be harvested.

By agreement the matter of the sale of the assets of the Everette R. Peacock Co. was laid over for a week when the receiver appeared in court May 11, in Chicago, with the probability that another week's delay will be allowed. No bid was offered the receiver within the time set by the court, as published in The Review of May 4.

J. P. WYATT & SONS, of Raleigh, N. C., have for years been known as efficient merchandisers of farm implements, with seeds as a side line. Four or five years ago, a northern man took charge of the seed department and, if the season of 1922 keeps up, the implement business will be a side line of the seed department. A week or two ago, Mr. Keil, the seedsman in charge, said that he was glad the season was over, as it will give him a chance to breathe. He says the business has been extremely satisfactory, and plans for enlarging the seed department are now under way and will probably be executed during the summer.

IMPORT PERMIT CANCELED.

The following notice was sent out from Washington, D. C., May 12, by C. L. Marlatt, chairman of the federal horticultural board:

"The federal horticultural board has secured evidence that the National Bulb Farms, Inc., of Benton Harbor, Mich., in a shipment made in April, 1922, by special permit under regulation 14 of plant quarantine 37, substituted for the varieties authorized by such permit certain other varieties abundantly avail-

"After discovery by the federal horticultural board of the fraud, a representative of the company admitted the above facts.

"In view of the evidence above referred to, the board, believing this to be a violation of the plant quarantine act and of the rules and regulations supplemental to plant quarantine 37, under the provision of regulation 13 for the cancellation of permits for violation of the regulations, has ordered as follows:

"(1) The shipment containing the substituted material is refused entry.

"(2) All existing permits issued for importations by the National Bulb Farms, Inc., Benton Harbor, Mich., are canceled.

"(3) Further permits for importation by the National Bulb Farms, Inc., will not be issued until the board is convinced, from satisfactory evidence submitted by the company, that similar fraudulent practices will not be repeated."

CONFISCATE DICKSONS' STOCK.

The entire seed business in southern Ireland of Alex. Dickson & Sons, Ltd., has been confiscated by the boycott department of the Irish "Republican" army. On the afternoon of Tuesday, April 11, armed raiders took possession of the metropolitan establishment of the firm, situated at 61 to 63 Dawson street, Dublin, carrying away all the books of the company, and ordered the business to be closed down. Orders in course of execution were not even allowed to be completed, and all the company's book debts and stock-in-trade are at the disposal of the army. The business is completely paralyzed and in a state of absolute chaos at the moment. Under these trying circumstances the firm asks that all communications pertaining to the Dublin house should be directed to the northern headquarters, at Hawlmark, Belfast. A claim has been lodged with the authorities for damages, amounting to £50,000.

IOWA SEED DEALERS TO MEET.

The annual meeting of the Iowa Seed Dealers' Association will be held Wednesday, June 7, at the Savery hotel, Des Moines, Ia. The meeting will not be exclusively for members of the association, but anyone whose interests are in any way affiliated with those of the seed dealers are invited. Seed dealers from other states are especially invited to attend the meeting. Representatives from the agricultural colleges, growers and shippers of seeds and grain, those who have to do with shipping or who in any way come in contact with seeds and like products are also invited. A representative of the Iowa food and dairy commission will speak regarding the application of seed laws in Iowa. The meeting will be decidedly informal and everyone present is expected to feel free to talk, as things which all have in common will be discussed.

The officers of the association are as follows: President, J. T. Hamilton, of the Hamilton Seed & Coal Co., Cedar Rapids, Ia.; vice-president, W. H. Talbott, of the Talbott Grain Co., Osceola, ### SEED CROPS IN FRANCE.

According to the latest bulletin of Joseph Paquet, of Nice, France, regarding the seed crops of that country, many varieties of flower seeds are short, and some firms are buying from growers all that they have from the last crop. It is feared that the crop of this year will not be sufficient for the demand; at least, for certain biennial and perennial species.

Incidentally the writer of this bulletin makes the following pointed remark: "One of our correspondents in men, we must take better care to ship orders promptly. Formerly one could export all qualities of seeds, but that time is no more. Now we must sell good and valuable seeds, or we shall do no more business."

Regarding the vegetable seed crop the bulletin states as follows:

Beet—Many young plants have been destroyed by frost. Plantings are restricted. Under such conditions the crop is bound to be small, even if the temperature proves favorable.

Carrot—Many plants have been transplanted and it is not expected that there will be the shortage previously announced.

Celery—There are not many plantings.

Endive—Much has been sown.

Common chicory—The usual plantings have been made.

Garden cabbage—Many plants have been destroyed by frost and the crop promises to be small.

Cauliflower and broccoli—Many plantings have been destroyed and the heads have been sold for consumption.

Swedish turnip and Buda kale—Except in the Saumur country, where there are some plantings, nothing has been planted.

Cucumber—Seed plots will be an important feature.

Spinach—Except in Vaucluse, not much cultivation is being done.

Broad beans—Apparently the crop will be about medium.

Beans—Important seed plots are to be made.

Corn salad—The crop will be almost insignificant.

Melon—Much will be sown, but this does not signify that many seeds will be harvested. Melon growers will sell for consumption, if the prices are high enough.

Turnip—Few vegetable varieties have been planted. The crop will be small.

Onion—Nearly everywhere growers have sold their bulbs. There are few plantings.

Sorrel—There are few plantings.

Parsnip—Cultivation is almost insignificant.

Parsley—Cultivation is normal.

Dandelion—Cultivation is small.

Leek—Cultivation is small.

Peas—Much has been sown.

Radish—Winter varieties will produce a small crop. Varieties for every month have been sown to a great extent.

Salsify and scorzonera—Little cultivation has been done.

Tomato—Much has been sown.

Recapitulation—The crops on certain items will be deficient. The crop of many others will be abundant, if the temperature is favorable.

The report of the flower seed crops on the Cote d'Azur is as follows:

Nice winter stocks—This year, on account of the economical crisis, not many stocks have been sold and the single flowers have not been gathered. This will increase greatly the seeds that will be harvested, but there will be many second-quality seeds, because the plants have not received necessary care with a view to seed production.

Asparagus plumosus nanus—The crop is about completed; it is much better than was expected. Asparagus Sprengeri—The crop is considered bad.

Chrysanthemum indicum and japonicum—The crop from the colonies is a middling crop.

Primula obconica—The crop continues and promises to be good.

ROWE'S RAMBLES.

Southern seedsmen report a good volume of trade since the first of the year. P. F. Keil, manager of the seed department of J. P. Wyatt & Sons, Raleigh, N. C., says that 1922 has been far and away ahead of 1920 or 1921. This is both in number of orders and in gross sales. "You would not quite believe me," said Mr. Keil, "if I told you how much the trade has increased, but things have got to the point where the present store and warehouse are too small. I'll have to push out the walls and hang the roof on an airship next season."

W. R. Hastings, of Atlanta, Ga., has not yet made his usual northern trip, because of the great quantity of seeds going out of the warehouse of H. G. Hastings & Co. Sales were a little slow in starting, but when they did start they "hit high" on the first jump. In spite of the low price of cotton in the midsummer of 1921 and previously, the agitation for reduced acreage, and a tight money market, southern farmers have bought about the usual amount of cotton and other seeds.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE annual meeting of the California Association of Nurserymen will be held at Sacramento June 1 to 3.

REPRESENTATIVES of the principal nurserymen's organizations were in Washington at the beginning of the week to attend the conference on quarantine 37, held May 15. A meeting of nurserymen was held Saturday evening, May 13, at the New Willard hotel. Report of the conference proceedings appears on a forward page.

ADVERTISING EVERGREENS.

Among the spring advertising done by nurserymen, some single-column insertions, three and one-half inches deep, in the Chicago newspapers were particularly good business-pullers for Swain Nelson & Sons Co., who have a loop office in the Marquette building and 250 acres in nursery stock at Glen View, just northwest of the city. One of these little advertisements of Swain Nelson & Sons Co. reads as follows:

BUY EVERGREENS NOW!

They make wonderful backgrounds for glorious flowers. Right in their prime, ready for transplanting from our 250-acre nurseries. In all types, sizes, sturdy, strong and beautiful. Come to our nurseries, just off the Waukegan road, west of Glen View, or write for interesting booklet.

Another advertisement of the same size carries the following message:

EVERGREENS PRODUCE IMMEDIATE EFFECTS.

The indispensable evergreens give formal effects with true warmth of decoration. We have thousands of wonderful trees to select from. All types and sizes. Hardy and everlasting. Now is the time to select and transplant for years of enjoyment to come.

Visit nurseries by appointment or send for booklet.

IRIS SYMPOSIUM.

Bulletin No. 5 of the American Iris Society, dated May, 1922, is an iris symposium. It is in the form of a vote by twenty-three members of the American Iris Society as to the relative values of varieties of bearded irises. The experience of the American Peony Society in its effort to obtain a symposium of value led the officers of the American Iris Society to base this symposium upon the verdict of twenty-five carefully selected jurors. The symposium was initiated by President John C. Wister and carried out under the direction of C. P. Connell, of Centennial park, Nashville, Tenn. The other members of the jury and the states in which they are located are given in the following list:

A. C. Army, Minn.	Sydney B. Mitchell, Cal.
S. Stillman Berry, Cal.	B. Y. Morrison, D. C.
James Boyd, Pa.	Harry A. Norton, Quebec.
Lee R. Bonnewitz, O.
Sam P. Burchfield, Mich.	William A. Peterson, Ill.
Mrs. Jennett Dean, Cal.
Bertrand H. Farr, Pa.	Charles Phillips, O.
Dr. H. C. Glen, Tenn.	W. E. Saunders, Ontario.
C. W. Hubbard, Ill.
T. A. Kenning, Minn.	Grace Sturtevant, Mass.
Mrs. H. G. Lloyd, Pa.	R. S. Sturtevant, Mass.
F. B. Mead, Ind.	John O. Wister, Pa.
Mrs. E. P. McKinney, N. J.

Two of the jurors originally selected declined to serve, so that the final number was twenty-three. The symposium, which contains the names of several hundred varieties of bearded irises, is of much interest and will be wanted by all those who are interested in this flower.

IRIS SOCIETY MEETING.

The American Iris Society will hold its annual exhibition in coöperation with the Horticultural Society of New York in the Museum building, at Bronx park, New York, Saturday and Sunday, June 3 and 4, from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. Notice of entry should be sent to Mrs. George V. Nash, at the New York Botanical Gardens, at least two days before the opening of the show. The society has provided a silver medal to be awarded the commercial exhibitor making the most comprehensive display. There are, in addition, twenty-one classes open to commercial exhibitors. At the same time the Horticultural Society of New York will offer prizes for peony blooms and some miscellaneous flowers.

A luncheon for the members of the American Iris Society will be held at 12.30 Saturday, June 3, in the Mansion. At 2 p. m. the annual meeting will take place, in the same building, when the election of officers will be held and other business transacted. The meeting will then adjourn to the test garden nearby, where there are over 1,000 varieties of irises and where the extensive plantings of 1920 should give splendid bloom. A large gathering of commercial and amateur iris enthusiasts are expected to be present.

PAINESVILLE, O.

Many nurserymen in this locality have stopped planting, owing to the dry weather. With little or no rain during the last three weeks, the ground has become hard and dry.

The shipping season of nursery stock is about to close and reports are unanimous that the spring sales of 1922 were the largest ever.

The Storrs & Harrison Co., notwithstanding the heavy loss caused by hail last year, has had an exceptionally prosperous season.

Thomas J. Murphy has had a busy spring season, having sold out entirely in pansies, perennials and shrubs.

T. R. Norman & Sons have purchased

Prices Slaughtered

Roses, Own-root, from 2¼-in. Pots

Such headlines as the above and similar ones would lead a prospective buyer to believe he was about to get something for nearly nothing but an order placed these days on a basis of Slaughtered Prices usually results in his getting almost something for a heap of his hard earned dollars.

The facts are, Slaughtered Stock can be bought any time of the year at apparently low prices, but every producer who keeps even a check book record on production costs knows that under conditions of the past few years, reasonable prices must be paid for reasonable quality and that the only real bargain is Fancy Stock at a Fair price.

We have no kiln-dried runt stock to offer, neither do we claim a quantity sufficient to supply the world, but are usually in a position to ship one or two carloads of real, live, healthy, growing plants that will prove their value to the planter at digging time and if you want both quality and service at a Fair price, we are here to serve you.

You will find all the big boys and a lot of little ones who know real quality and service, recorded in our customers' rate book and if your name does not already appear in this book, we are ready to add it to a long list of satisfied customers.

In the face of the lowest price advertised on Own Root Roses from 2¼-inch pots for Forcing and Lining Out, we can save you money and your request for prices on large or small quantities will receive our prompt and careful attention.

We have ready for immediate shipment, varieties as listed below in quantities of Fancy Stock, also a large number of other standard kinds for forcing and bedding. We will be pleased to submit a complete list of these with prices.

There will be no surplus of Field Grown Roses this fall or next spring and even though space for planting may be limited, it will pay you to plant the limit.

Producers of Plants that Grow and Bloom

Springfield, Ohio

a new touring car, which will be delivered this week.

George Martin has added several acres of land to his nursery recently and will be located on Elm street.

Mark Welch says that he has had the largest spring sales this year that he ever experienced. Mr. Welch has over sixty acres of nursery stock and grows exclusively for the wholesale trade.

The Donewell Nurseries have a large force of men putting in landscape work. Many choice evergreens are being used and this class of plant will be a specialty with this firm.

C. C. Hallinan has purchased several acres of land on Elm street near his present location and is busy planting.

Widgren Bros. have leased land on Mentor avenue and are growing perennials, strawberries, grapes, etc.

Joseph F. Martin has begun work on his new land, purchased last year, and has several acres under cultivation.

The Painesville Garden & Greenhouse Co. had an exceptionally heavy demand for flowers for Mothers' day. E. H. Hawley, manager, says that business is increasing steadily in this line and prospects are favorable for growing cut flowers and plants more extensively next year.

In this locality it is hardly necessary to ask how business is; almost every firm, large or small, is branching out this year. T. J. M.

ROWE'S RAMBLES.

Religion and Roses.

It is not at all uncommon to find English clergymen who are enthusiastic rose growers, and a rose garden is almost as important to the British curate as a "flivver" is to his American cousin. On this side of the water most of the preachers take up golf, tennis or some other form of exercise. Only now and then does one go in for roses, or irises, or peonies, but when he does garden he gardens just as effectively and efficiently as he preaches.

So now we can introduce as a real rose-growing American preacher the Rev. Edmund M. Mills, D.D., of Syracuse, N. Y. To the titles that are at present attached to his name should be added another, "R.L.," which means rose-lover, and the Rambler reckons that the latest degree would please the reverend gentleman fully as much as, or even more than, the theological titles.

For several years Dr. Mills has been president of the Syracuse Rose Society, and his efforts have made that organization of real value in the Salt City and to rosarians everywhere. It is quite possible that the Syracuse society is the largest rose society in the country. A couple of years ago he allowed some of his enthusiasm to escape to Rochester; result, a thriving society in that city.

Dr. Mills' residential city has now decided to disprove the old proverb, "A prophet is not without honor save in his own city." A municipal rose garden is soon to be established in one of the Syracuse parks and to bear the name of the E. M. Mills rose garden—a most fitting testimonial to the character and ability of this veteran preacher and rosarian.

Dr. Mills took his first charge at Elbridge, N. Y., in 1872, and for fifty years has been an active pastor in the central New York conference of the Methodist church. At the general conference of 1920 he was unanimously course, we are trying to make them customers for fall. We try to work on the principle of 'he profits most who serves best,' and a transaction is not closed until the planting is a success and a source of pleasure to the owner."

O. Joe Howard, of the Howard-Hickory Co., Hickory, N. C., says that the weather man did not consult him before ordering spring weather. In spite of this, Mr. Howard says that the firm has had a rattling good season in landscape work, direct mail, and agents' sales. Both Mr. Howard and Mr. Throneburg have had a quarter century's experience in the nursery business, and their efforts and ability are making this new firm known not only in North Carolina, but in other states, and down the Mississippi valley.

From the Keystone State.

B. H. Farr, of the Wyomissing Nurseries Co., Wyomissing, Pa., told the Rambler that his spring business would come pretty nearly up to the average fall business. This is a bit unusual, as most of the trade is in peonies, irises and other perennials, which are usually sold for planting in the fall. The demand for perennials is increased yearly, and planters are demanding larger stock than in the old days. For instance, at one time it was possible to sell a peony root with only one eye, but at the present time the wise buyer will pass up such stock and demand a root with three or four eyes. Mr. Farr says that the peonies will be in the prime of their blooming season about June 4. During the blooming season Wyomissing is the Mecca for peony fanciers. Some days 100 or more visitors come by motor and train from long distances to inspect the fifty acres or more devoted to these wonderful flowers.

In addition to the peonies, the visitors can see a special collection of irises, including Mr. Farr's own seedling productions, which he has called the Wyomissing hybrids. One special variety is Anna Farr, with white standards bordered with pale blue, and with pure white falls. Other varieties produced by Mr. Farr are Seminole, which received honorable mention from the American Iris Society in 1920; Glory of Reading, Chester Hunt, Mount Penn, James Boyd, Wyomissing, Nokomis and a score or more varieties named and unnamed.

PRIMULA OBCONICA

PRIMULAS AS CUT FLOWERS

By using our December sown stock, you can have the Primula obconica commence blooming in September, and in full bloom by November, which the later sown stock will not do, as they are not old enough. A half dozen more flowers per plant, used as cut flowers, just adds that much more profit and still leaves a salable plant and they are a cut flower that lasts.

Get your plants now from December-sown stock, grow them on in pots or, better, plant them out; the results will surprise you, they will average just double as much.

The Strain that Leads

has proven its quality; there are none better. Prompt shipment now from 2-inch pots, $7.50 per 100 in any quantity and any color of the grandiflora or gigantea.

A new flower shop, under the name of the Washington Flower Shop, has been opened at Thirtieth street and Washington boulevard. The shop is in a small, new bungalow, erected for the purpose, and is owned and operated by Mr. Horn.

Tom Hepler has sold his stand in the city market. Mr. Hepler is operating a flower store in the 300 block on Massachusetts avenue.

Lee Rickenbach is the first to cut peonies here and has some good ones.

Baur & Steinkamp have been cutting some good gladioli.

Fred Bates, of Lincoln, Ill., formerly with Gillett's, is now with E. E. Temperley.

Indianapolis is having a fire prevention campaign, combining "clean up" week with "safety first" week. It has taken for its motto, "Let's make our city cleaner, safer and healthier." There are five separate campaigns, including a city beautification campaign, going on here at present. Fifteen prizes are being offered for the most attractive yards and for the yards that show the most improvement. Talks will be given with the aim of educating the people concerning what flowers to grow and how to care for them. Talks on landscaping will also be given.

The "home complete" show held in the Manufacturers' building at the fair grounds brought into play a great deal of florists' decorative stock. It was a good advertisement for the trade, as exteriors and interiors were not complete without plants and flowers. A. Wiegand's Sons Co., Bertermann Bros. Co., the Lowry Nurseries and Brayton, landscape architects, had attractive individual exhibits. E. E. T.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

The first reports of Mothers' day business at Newark are quite satisfactory. There was a large sale of flowers and an increased demand for Mothers' day specialties, including mottoes to go with orders.

Prices were high, carnations being sold at from 30 cents to 50 cents each, retail. Many retailers complain that this is too much and say that they could do more business at a lower price. Growers, on the other hand, report that prices of coal and other supplies that go into production are still high.

Various Notes.

Philips Bros. report a satisfactory Mothers' day business.

James J. Plunkett states that he has had an unusually large amount of wedding work for this season of the year. He has also had a great amount of funeral work.

The Rosery Floral Co. reports the best Mothers' day business ever. The sale on novelties began early and was unusually large.

Previous to Mothers' day the Rev. Frederick George Willey, pastor of the Sandford Street Methodist Episcopal church, issued a statement protesting against the high prices that have been charged by florists for Mothers' day. He appealed to his congregation to wear a white ribbon instead of flowers, and suggested that the money saved might be contributed to the near east relief fund. In his statement he said that if one-half of the population of New Jersey, 3,155,900 people, would sacrifice a carnation and give the price to the relief fund, it would amount to $473,385, nearly a half-million dollars.

Newark florists, supplied with white carnations by New Jersey growers, were able to undersell those who were dependent on the New York wholesale market for their blooms. There was $1 difference in price per dozen between New Jersey growers and New York growers.

R. B. M.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

In general, business has been good. Bedding stock is now one of the most important items. All flowers for planting out are moving well. On account of the backwardness of the season, the demand for this stock has come all at once. Decorations for social events have also been a feature. The usual prenuptial parties and weddings have caused cut flowers, corsages, etc., to be popular. Some new spring stock has also appeared; this stock includes delphiniums, gladioli and peonies.

Mothers' Day Business.

Business at Mothers' day was exceptionally good. Carnations were in big demand. The supply was large, but the demand was so great that the supply moved rapidly. Carnations sold at from $12 to $15 wholesale, with Laddie bringing from $18 to $20. The retail price ranged from $2.50 to $4 per dozen, fine Laddies bringing the latter price. Roses and sweet peas ran a close second on sales, but all other flowers sold well. Potted plants were also in big demand, but the supply was limited. Flowers

RAIN WHEN YOU WANT IT

SKINNER SYSTEM

This fellow is independent. Independent of sky rain.
Skinner System rains exactly when he wants it.

He Bet On the Wrong Thing!

Heard the other day of a man who lost his house, barn, tools—everything—by fire.

The pitiful part of it is that he didn't have a cent of insurance.

He is beyond middle age—hadn't saved any money—so there he is a helpless, beaten man, just because he took a chance.

"How foolish!" you say.

More criminal than foolish, for this man had a family who will suffer because of his poor judgment.

He took the small end of a 200 to 1 chance of not having a fire, and lost.

By the same token, what kind of a bet are you making right now with the weather? Still trusting to rain, which seldom comes when it is most needed?

Say, friend, what's the use of taking chances with weather any more than with fire, when you can insure against fire and fully protect yourself against dry weather?

There is no reason why you can't have a Skinner System, when our Sectional Portable lines cost so little and can be put up so easily.

They water big areas for little money.

$19.75 buys a 50-foot Sectional Portable line. $39.75 for 100-foot.

You can bet your bottom dollar, we'll ship it promptly.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

BOILER NOT ADEQUATE.

My boiler is a Furman, size 226. It has five sections and its grate area is 18x30 inches. There are two outlets at the top, and two inlets; that is, one inlet on each side, all using 3-inch pipe. There are two greenhouses, 18x70 feet and 21x70 feet respectively. The walls of the houses are five feet high, with one foot of glass in each wall. The greenhouses run east and west, and the boiler is located in a service building at the east end of the greenhouses. The temperature to be maintained in one house is 60 degrees and in the other it is 50 degrees when the outside temperature is zero. Is the boiler large enough for the purpose? How should the piping be arranged?

H. K.—N. Y.

Our experience with the Furman boiler of the size mentioned is limited, but from what we know of other sizes of this boiler, and of boilers of the same size made by other firms, we judge that the Furman, size 226, will be rated by its manufacturers at about 1,000 square feet of hot water radiation. This is almost exactly the radiation required in the two houses described above, provided the larger house is kept at 50 degrees.

However, no allowance has been made for mains, and it is always advisable to use a heater rated for at least twenty-five per cent more than the actual radiating surface, even when hard coal is used, while for soft coal it is customary to use a boiler rated at from fifty to seventy-five per cent more than the radiation to be covered. If the house is well built and somewhat sheltered, it would probably be possible to maintain the temperatures mentioned, but it would be at the expense of fuel and would require frequent firing.

ATTACHING ADDITIONAL LOADS.

I have one greenhouse, 16x160 feet, with a boiler which has a 24x30-inch grate. Is it possible to heat another house, built adjacent to the first house, with the heating system already in operation?

D. Z.—Pa.

The temperature which it is desired to maintain in the second house is not stated, neither have we any means with which to determine the amount of glass in the walls. It may be stated, however, that for a temperature of 50 degrees in a section of the country where the outside temperature does not go below 10 degrees below zero, 800 square feet of radiation would be required, provided that there is no glass in the walls. With thirty inches of glass in each wall, nearly 1,000 square feet of radiation would be required for one house. To heat two houses about 1,800 square feet of radiation will be needed, using hot water.

The capacity of a boiler, with a grate of the size you mention, will depend upon the amount and arrangement of the tubes or other fire surfaces. Thus, if it has a deep fire pot, with a large amount of fire surface and a tall or large smokestack, it can be made to handle considerably more radiation than would be ordinarily possible, but this arrangement would not prove economical in the use of fuel or in the amount of labor required.

Ordinarily a boiler rated at about 1,600 square feet of radiation would be ample for the needs, but if soft coal is to be used, it will not be advisable to attach more than 1,000 or 1,200 square feet of radiation. Even if the houses have no glass in the walls, it will require about 1,280 square feet of radiation for 40 degrees when it is 10 degrees below zero outside.

HEATING FOR ROSES.

I expect to construct, within the next few months, two rose houses and one carnation house, each of which will be 36x200 feet, running east and west. There will be two glass gables in each house. The side walls of these houses will be eight feet high, with five feet of glass. The two rose houses will open together, but there will be a glass partition between the rose and carnation houses.

It is my intention to use two 1½-inch returns under each of the five benches in the carnation house, on the north side, and also two 1½-inch returns on the north wall. The rose houses will each have six benches, with two 1½-inch returns under them.

Do you think two 2½-inch mains will be sufficient, in each house, to take care of this amount of radiation in returns? I will place one 2½-inch main on the purlin posts down the middle of each half of each house, to distribute the heat overhead from the mains more evenly.

The temperature required in the rose houses is 60 degrees, when the outside temperature is 15 degrees below zero, and the temperature required in the carnation house is 55 degrees. Low-pressure steam is to be used.

W. R. C.—Minn.

The radiation suggested for the carnation house and for the inside rose house would be ample, and it could be supplied by two 2½-inch flow pipes in each house, but for the outside rose house, with over five feet of glass in the exposed wall, a slight increase in the radiation will be desirable, and an additional 2½-inch flow pipe should be put in on the outside wall plate. Two additional returns should be placed on the south wall, and the returns under the south bench connected with the third flow pipe.

The arrangement of piping is an excellent one, but it is preferable to use 1¾-inch pipes for the coils in houses less than 250 feet in length. This merely calls for two additional returns in each house, which will make it possible to place two returns under each gutter, and will be helpful in melting the snow in the gutters. For the same purpose, it would be well to run the flow pipes on the gutters instead of at the purlins, especially as the heat is needed there featured and, in every instance, attention was called to the fact that prices would not be raised for Mothers' day. A number of retailers also carried similar advertising in their own advertisements.

SEATTLE NOTES.

The Seattle Fern & Moss Co. notes an increase in business over last year's shipping activities.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop developed an attractive telegraph delivery window for the early part of Mothers' day week. A large globe in white and green, about six feet in diameter, revolved in the back of the window, while poles and bright copper wire ran along the sides to the front corner, where a telegraph instrument and a typewriter stood. Placards calling attention to the value of the service the F. T. D. is in a position to offer was set in among the suggestions of baskets and cut flowers.

A. B. Matthiesen reports that he has been unable to cut enough carnations to keep pace with the demand for stock.

McCoy's has enjoyed a fine run of funeral work and the attractive window displays have served to increase the demand for corsages and cut flowers.

A general rearrangement of the display window at the Pinchurst Floral Shop has been effected, and some new combinations have been worked out through the use of a large wall mirror. Benjamin del Fante, until recently with the Orpheum Floral Co., is now attached to the staff of this shop.

Business at the Bon Marche flower shop has shown enough of an increase to require an addition to the sales force, according to Irving Harris. A part of the Mothers' day display of this department store was given over to flowers.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

There was a good, healthy demand all last week for flowers, both cut and growing, and several of the firms had sufficient calls for funeral and wedding work to contribute materially to their activities. Prices, which have approached normalcy since Easter, began to work up gradually about the middle of the week, anticipatory of Mothers' day, but not sufficiently to curb the public's desire for flowers.

Last year prices in some instances were outrageously high and there was a popular protest voiced regarding them. But this year the dealers have been more conservative and, while prices went nearly double the range of a week ago, they were not so high as to jar the sensibilities of the patrons. The result was that everyone did a big business, cleaned up well and reaped a satisfactory harvest. The coöperative advertising plan was again followed and again proved its effectiveness. With Memorial day a little more than two weeks away and numerous graduations, commencements and other events scheduled for the coming few weeks, the dealers anticipate a busy wind-up of an active season.

Various Notes.

Fisher the Florist, 355 Westminster street, made a special feature of flower-filled baskets at $3 each for Mothers' day.

Charles H. Bishop, Hartford avenue, Johnston, lost several greenhouses, as well as his dwelling house and numerous sheds and outbuildings, in a bad brush fire which swept over his estate last week.

William E. Chappell, of Branch avenue, furnished the table decorations for the semiannual dinner of Orpheus lodge of Masons May 10, at the Masonic Temple.

Charles Smith was in New York and Philadelphia last week in the interests of the Eastern Wreath Co., of this city.

W. J. Sword, Valley Falls, is planning considerable new work and alterations at his houses this season.

W. A. Bowers, Inc., Washington street, has taken additional space in an adjoining building for its wholesale department.

TORONTO, ONT.

Business for Mothers' day was good; in some respects it was better than Easter. Advertising was well looked after by the advertising committee of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club. Sufficient funds were collected to take a quarter-page in the four dailies and the two weekly papers. There is no doubt about the effectiveness of the advertising. All the stores were busy. Flowers were fairly plentiful and prices reasonable. The demand for carnations was enormous, but when these were sold out, people bought daffodils, tulips, roses, etc.

The Canadian National Telegraph Co. coöperated with the club in its advertising campaign. Each telegram delivered during the week contained a folder stating that any florist would telegraph flowers to any part of the world. These folders were supplied by the Toronto F. T. D. members. The telegraph delivery business was heavy last week.

The regular meeting of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club was held May 8, with a good attendance. Advertising plans were arranged. A resolution was passed expressing the sympathy of the club to Miller Bros. in the loss of their mother. The annual picnic of the club will be held July 5, at Exhibition park. All florists, retailers and growers are invited. J. J. H.

A Moderate Priced Power Mower for Medium Sized Lawns

Here is a Power Lawn Mower that will be welcomed by thousands of home owners who have large lawns to care for.

We call it the Ideal "Junior." It is a machine that fulfills a greater need than any power mower ever built. It is surprisingly moderate in price, absolutely dependable, easy to handle, and costs but a few cents per day to operate. It is a simple mower that anyone can run with splendid results.

In general principle, the Ideal Junior is exactly the same as the larger Ideal Power Lawn Mower which is giving universal satisfaction upon thousands of the best-kept lawns in the country. It is smaller and lighter in weight, having a 22-inch cut. It will mow from 3 to 4 acres of grass per day. Just the machine to use when there is too much grass to economically cut with hand mower, yet where the lawn is hardly large enough to warrant the purchase of a larger power mower.

Also used by golf clubs for work on putting greens, and by parks and cemeteries for close cutting, trimming around shrubbery and as an auxiliary unit to the larger power mowers.

The Ideal Power Mower for Large Lawns

For larger lawns the standard Ideal Power Lawn Mower has no equal. It cuts from 5 to 6 acres of grass per day, doing the work of 6 or 7 men. There are thousands of these machines in use on private estates, public parks, golf courses, college grounds, industrial grounds, cemeteries, etc.

For Large Parks and Golf Courses

For large parks and golf courses we build the Ideal Triplex Power Mower which cuts from 25 to 30 acres of grass per day.

DIETSCH

Character Greenhouse Materials

For nearly forty years this house has catered continuously to the Florists' Trade of America.

Jealous care of its good name and of the quality of its construction materials has made the trademark "DIETSCH" of equal rank with "STERLING" as a mark by which established worth may be recognized.

You might as well be protected by it, for Dietsch construction material costs no more than other good material.

CLEVELAND FLORISTS MEET.

One of the best get-together meetings of the club in months was the dance held Tuesday, May 9, at Conklin's hall, on Euclid avenue. The recreation committee, consisting of A. J. Borges, L. F. Charlesworth, Mr. Wilson, C. F. Kirchner and G. W. Mereer, deserves great credit. When these young florists set themselves to a job it is a sure success.

The dance was a real reunion, and those who did not dance had just as good a time. It was old friends meeting old friends. In every corner you could see growers talking things over. There was Mr. Merkel, Mr. Wilson, L. Utzinger and H. Lovell in a merry party. Our president, James McLaughlin, was on hand with his wife and a party of friends. Each meeting is also uniting the Cuyahoga florists into a real working organization.

The meeting also brought assurances to our president that the membership committee will have enough new names at our next regular meeting to pass the 100 mark which they set out to make. The next regular meeting, June 5, at the Hollenden, will be important, as we expect to have a good report from the publicity committee.

One of the real events of last week was the wonderful Mothers' day window put on by the Knoble Bros. Co., an account of which was published in last week's issue.

The wholesale houses also reported a good clean-up on all flowers. There was a great call for lilies. A. T. F.

PROPAGATING BEGONIAS.

At what time of the year are begonias propagated, in order to have them for fall and early winter sales in from 4-inch to 6-inch pots? What are the best varieties? L. M. S.—Mich.

The best winter-flowering begonias are Gloire de Lorraine, Glory of Cincinnati, Melior, Mrs. Peterson and Peerless. These are secured mainly by means of leaf cuttings in October, November and December and to some extent from stem cuttings later in the winter. They are not grown from the seed, which they seldom or never pro-

King GREENHOUSES

Another King 40-ft. Steel Frame Erection

A size and type of construction fast becoming popular among the leading growers of the country is The King 40' Steel Frame House. The many advantages in both its size and construction and the manner in which many growers are turning to this form of construction proves that the standards are right and that the details have been worked out to meet the most exacting conditions in commercial growing.

Mr. Andrew Christensen, Reading, Mass., Secretary of the Boston Flower Market and one of New England's most prominent growers, is known as an exceptionally keen buyer. He has built a range of greenhouses and his knowledge of greenhouse construction is exceedingly varied. He has recently taken his son into business with him, and feels now a duty to build with a future in mind.

And so he made a very thorough study of the types of various constructions, materials, workmanship, etc. The initial cost was not the first consideration because he appreciated the cost of the house would be based on the years of service it would render.

Accepting two King Steel Frame Houses, with a connecting passageway, is sufficient proof as to what he found.

Each house is 40' x 200' and affords a very efficient detail of arrangement.

You, too, will find as Mr. Christensen found that for Quality of Design, Quality of Materials and Quality of Workmanship, King Greenhouses are unexcelled.

When you think of good greenhouses, think of KING.

KILLING MEALY BUGS.

I have been and am now troubled with mealy bugs on my coleus, begonias, sultanas and various other plants. Please advise me how to control or exterminate these pests. J. R. A.—Ga.

The force of water from a hose, well directed through a fine spray nozzle, is the best cure for the mealy bug. It may be necessary to lay some of the plants down to clean them thoroughly. Hydrocyanic acid gas will kill the mealy bugs, but it must be used with great care, and the higher the temperature, the greater is the possibility of injuring the plants. C. W.

Who Is to Blame?

Last fall several owners of ranges had to suddenly change their growing plans, because of delays in finishing the overhauling of their heating.

Who was to blame?

A number of others—one a notably big range—came near losing their entire crop because of last-minute boiler trouble that the owners knew was likely to happen almost any time, and still had put off doing anything about.

Who was to blame?

You remember early last spring how we commenced urging florists to start in overhauling their heating systems the very day firing stopped?

You remember how a lot didn't do it, thinking that pipe and other things would be lower?

But they were not!

So they had to pay the price for pipe, besides the extra cost of a last-minute rush job—which is always mighty expensive.

Instead of saving money, they actually gave a lot of money away, for which they got no real benefit.

So this season, the same as last, we urge growers to have their heating overhauled at once.

Send for us to come and look it over, make recommendations and submit an estimate.

After which, don't put off giving us the go-ahead order until the last minute and then expect us to do the impossible.

How To Increase Your Business

Some florists are continually sending out sample flowers, running clever advertisements and making many other constructive efforts to get more business.

—And not very strange to say, this is the man who is ordering additional AGMCO Houses.

Don't wait for business to come to you—develop it. First be sure that your growing conditions are ideal, that you are not wasting time because of poor greenhouse methods.

Perhaps you need a display house. It is the best advertising medium there is.

Take advantage of AGMCO scientific study of how to operate a successful greenhouse. Then we won't have to urge you to increase your capacity. You'll come right in and demand designs for a comprehensive enlargement.

If you don't understand, our experts at the nearest branch office will aid you in every way possible without obligation on your part.

Why Build One That's Not So Good When For The Same Price You Can Have One That's Better?

Why spend your money for a Semi-Iron, pipe frame, or half iron frame house, when for the same money we will build you a complete full Iron Frame, with everything in it strictly L & B high quality?

Of course we appreciate the fact just as much as you do, that merely because a house is iron frame, it doesn't necessarily make it the best house to build.

It's what make of an iron frame that's important.

There was a time, when to say iron frame, meant an L & B house.

Meant an L & B house because we were the first to design and build an Iron Frame, just as Eastman was the first to design and make a snap-shot camera, which he named a Kodak. But now all snap-shotters are called Kodaks, regardless of what firm makes them.

Happily for you, however, when you say you are going to build an L & B Iron Framed, at once everybody knows you are building the best house that can be built.

In widths of 40 feet and less we recommend the Number Two construction.

In widths above 40 feet, then the Number One is the one.

But whichever one we build for you, it will be strictly L & B high standard throughout.

Another thing—a lot of growers are coming back to narrower houses.

Looks like 40 feet is going to be a favorite again.

(Extract from Florists' Exchange, Issue April 22, 1922)

By FRITZ BAHR

RUBRUM LILIES

"Did you ever plant too many? For the average florist it means just this: He can get along without rubrum Lilies, even not miss them. On the other hand, those who once get into the habit of using them usually find them such a profitable and at the same time easily handled crop that they try each year to do all possible to prolong the flowering period, which with the help of cold storage bulbs is not hard to do. Every florist with a retail trade should grow rubrum Lilies. There is nothing finer for decorative work, for the corsage or the floral design. A plant grown in a pot makes a showy plant, and if not sold as such will frequently furnish you with flowers for three weeks from the time the first flower is ready to be cut until the last bud begins to open. The further away you are located from the larger cut flower markets, the more valuable are rubrum Lilies in your own establishment, the more necessary it is for you to try and have a few plants to cut from. To plant cold storage bulbs now into 5-in. or 6-in. pots is about all the work you will have with them, outside of watering. They will grow almost anywhere in or outdoors, and bloom in late Summer. Try this for a change: Plant in 6-in. pots now; let the plants come along in a cool house. About May 15 take them outdoors and plant pot and all in a bed or coldframe, deep enough to cover the top of the pot about 4 in. When in flower use the individual blossoms, or if you plant out leave them out all Winter. Every plant will flower again the next year and better than before."

Mr. Bahr is a "live" florist-grower in Highland Park, Ill., and a recognized authority on matters horticultural.

SWEET PEA SEED

For July and Early August to December Delivery WINTER-FLOWERING ORCHIDS AND SPENCERS

During the past season we have made a special study of Sweet Peas and have selected the following varieties as the best for the Commercial Grower that the market affords, and we have every reason to believe the seed offered below is as true to name, color and type as any offered.

	Oz.	¼ lb.	Lb.
Snow Storm, Improved. finest early white.....	$1.25	$4.00	$14.00
Early Sankey. Pure white.....	.75	2.50	8.50
Watchung Orchid. Best pure white black-seeded.....	2.00	6.00	18.00
White Star. A first-class, black-seeded white Sweet Pea, lacking any suspicion of pink or other coloring. The flowers, of enormous size, are freely produced in fours, and all beautifully waved and well placed on the stem. The plants are robust and branch freely and therefore should be allowed plenty of room in the row to avoid overcrowding. We consider White Star to be the last word in black-seeded white varieties. Ounce, $10.00; ¼ lb. $37.50, postpaid.
Bridal Veil. Frilled, pure white.....	.75	2.50	8.50
White Orchid. Large pure white.....	.75	2.50	8.50
Venus. White with pink edges.....	.75	2.50	8.50
Mrs. M. Spanell. Curly white.....	.75	2.50	8.50
Peach Blossom 1921 novelty, packets only 50 cts.
Early Helen Lewis. Large orange salmon. Should follow the earliest sorts, as it is semi-early.....	1.00	4.00	12.00
Mrs. Kerr (Burpee's). "The best early flowering salmon." Mrs. Kerr has all the desirable qualities which go to make up a perfect flower. In addition to its unique and dainty color, the plant is of most vigorous habit and extremely floriferous. The flowers, of immense size and exquisite shape, are a most pleasing shade of rich salmon overlaid or suffused with orange. Mrs. Kerr produces flowers which are bold in the extreme; the standard is broad, deep, and charmingly waved; the wings are well placed, as are also the three, or more often four, flowers on their long stiff stems. Oz., $10.00; ¼ lb., $30.00.
Flamingo (Burpee). The broad and well-waved standard is light orange, with a suffusion of bright salmon, and the wings are a delicate shade of orange-pink.....	8.00	30.00	.....
Primrose Beauty. Deep primrose.....	1.00	3.00	10.00
Loveliness. White suffused soft pink, picoteed rose-pink.....	.75	2.50	8.50

Rising Sun. Rose-pink on cream.....	1.25	4.00	14.00
Early Gem. Rose-pink on cream suffused amber and orange.....	1.50	5.00	18.00
Sunburst. Rich pink suffused salmon.....	1.00	3.00	10.00
Mrs. A. A. Skach. Beautiful, clear light pink.....	.75	2.50	8.50
Miss Flora Fabing. Pink, some yellow and salmon.....	.75	2.50	8.50
Rose Queen (Genuine). Best light rose-pink. Grown heavily by leading Pea growers.....	1.50	6.00	18.00

	Oz.	¼ lb.	Lb.
Pink Beauty. Rose-pink on white ground.....	$1.00	$3.00	$10.00
Rosebud. Bright shining rose of largest size.....	1.00	3.00	10.00
Fordhook Rose, Improved. Rosy carmine.....	.75	2.50	8.50

Cherry Ripe. Glowing cherry self (½ oz., 60 cents).....	1.25	4.00	14.00

Early King. The finest crimson, of large size....	.75	2.50	8.50
Lavender King. Rich, true, deep lavender (½ oz., 50 cents).....	1.00	3.00	10.00

Early Heather Bell. A rich mauve-lavender.....	1.00	3.00	10.00
Zvolanek's Blue. Large bright blue-jay.....	1.50	5.00	18.00
Lavender Orchid. Lavender pink.....	.75	2.50	8.50
Mrs. Warren G. Harding (Burpee's). This distinct early or winter flowering novelty is a great and decided advance; it is really a pronounced acquisition to its color class. Mrs. Warren G. Harding is a deep shade of silvery blue—the color that is already so well known as the "Harding Blue." The color is pure throughout, with no suspicion of mauve or rose. The flowers are immense in size, with a broad and much frilled standard. The wings are also well waved, and a large proportion of the flowers are duplex or double, which lends weight, size, and beauty to the bunch. Oz., $10.00; ¼ lb., $36.00.

This patented, exclusive Contactor Thermostat—the heart of Lipman Automatic Refrigeration—never fails. It cannot get out of order or adjustment and will last indefinitely. It is not subject to corrosion, deterioration nor contamination from any cause whatsoever. When it is realized that any automatic refrigerating machine is no better than its thermostat, you know why no other machine can approach this one for year-in and year-out reliability.

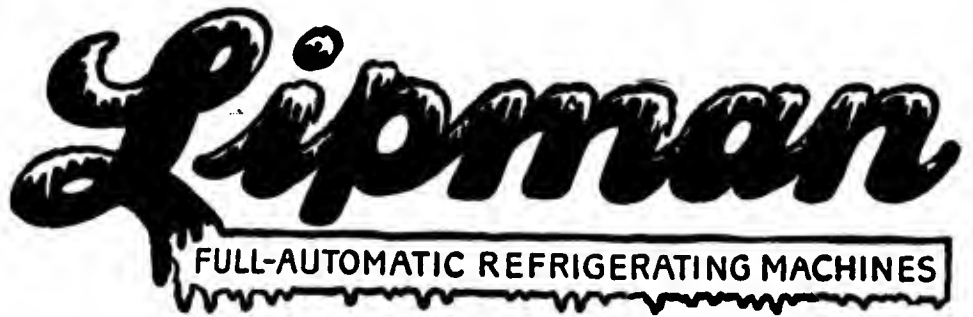

The Contactor Thermostat is punctual to the fraction of a second—starts the motor the instant the temperature in the ice-box varies 2 degrees from what you want it.

A New “Automatic Ice Man” for Every Florist Shop

JUST set this Thermostat for the degree of cold you want in your boxes—then forget it! The Lipman maintains any desired temperature, night and day, for years, with no attention other than occasional oiling.

Flowers won't wilt or fade in the crisp Lipman cold. They'll last weeks—even months—longer. And the tremendous saving by eliminating ice more than pays for the machine.

Send a postcard for free information. A Lipman Refrigerating Engineer from the nearest of our 50 distributing points will call on request to investigate your refrigerating problem and prove how much you can save. No obligation.

PEONIES SERVE MANY PURPOSES

In greater variety and better quality, annually in larger quantity, peonies have ceased to be only a Memorial day flower. If you are not using them in their many useful ways, read this article and note how you can add variety to your offerings to customers.

LONG strides of progress lie between the few bunches of peonies which a few years ago florists obtained from gardens to eke out their Memorial day supply and the tremendous quantities which are shipped annually from peony farms comprising hundreds of acres operated under one management in localities from Mississippi to Minnesota, supplying the market with this flower for as many weeks as the number of days they were formerly obtainable. In the same period that the growing of the peony for cut flowers has progressed so markedly in regard to quantity, it has progressed no less importantly with regard to the selection of varieties, methods of cutting, handling and shipping, and the marketing. In former days there were white peonies and there were pink peonies, without other distinction. Each season in recent years, however, has seen a better selection grown, and while the old varieties are still produced in considerable numbers, others are grown which have shown themselves better adapted to florists' use. Today, for anyone who is particular, there is a wide assortment of peonies to be found in the large cut flower markets, and the numbers handled by various houses run up each season into thousands of dozens.

Better Varieties.

Part of this increased popularity must be credited to the efforts of nurserymen in conducting experiments to determine which varieties are best adapted for use as cut flowers. Two or three articles have appeared in The Review, for instance, by William A. Peterson, who is nationally known not only as the grower of probably the largest number of varieties in this country, but also as an authority on the flower, in which he has given freely the results of his experiments and study that those who grow peonies for cut flowers might benefit. Other nurserymen have done similar able work.

At Market.

Furthermore, there has been marked improvement in the methods of handling the flowers for market. Today these are far different from what they were when a florist gathered a few armfuls from a neighboring nurseryman's patch in order to provide visitors to the cemeteries on Memorial day low-priced cut flowers with which to decorate the graves. Now the large acreages which are grown solely with a view to producing cut flowers are so cared for that the blooms will come from the plants in the best condition possible. After they are cut they are placed in water until they become completely laden with moisture and then are carefully packed for the long ride to distributing centers, which are sometimes a thousand miles away, though usually much less.

Storage facilities have been provided in which the cut peonies may be stored against the big demand for them, which is still principally at Memorial day. Some are kept for weeks after that holiday and come out of the chilled chambers in excellent condition. Visitors to the S. A. F. convention at Washington last year will remember the vases which a Chicago house displayed, the third week in August, of blooms which had been in a cold storage warehouse more than two months.

Too frequently retail florists regard peonies as something necessary to Memorial day, but not otherwise useful—a sad mistake. More wide-awake members of the trade have learned that these flowers can be used in a wide variety of ways and make an excellent showing at reasonable prices. This season, particularly, the last factor appeals strongly to customers.

Every florist knows that peonies make good-looking bunches of flowers, with their own foliage setting off the blooms, but that is the least of the ways in which they may be used. In basket work they can be employed to good advantage either by themselves, as shown in the illustration on this page, or mixed with other flowers. The big, full blooms, if used at the right stage, give an effect not unlike American Beauties. The striking baskets such as used to be made in large numbers of this famous rose can be formed of peonies.

In Boxes.

Of course, the boxes of flowers at popular prices, such as those used in week-end sales, provide a good outlet for peonies, which lend the effect of giving the customer much for his money.

In funeral work peonies can also be effectively employed. The white buds make most pleasing funeral sprays. The flowers may be all of white or a few red may be included. Both arrangements have given much satisfaction to customers. Not many blooms need be used to give an artistic display; too many are apt to make the arrangement seem bulky. Peonies are one of the best additions to the magnolia or galax wreath and have thus been used on Memorial day by many florists. They do as well for funeral wreaths.

The large size of the peony head excludes it from corsages, but presentation bouquets of these flowers, especially the red ones, please both donor and recipient. They are fine flowers to give to girl graduates in June.

For home and church decorations for weddings, be they in May or in June, peonies can be used as well as, and perhaps better than, most other flowers available at the time. The creamy white or blush varieties are especially appropriate for this use. Nothing adds more to the festal appearance of a wedding than a large number of full-blown peonies of this color.

These are a few suggestions as to how florists can make use of the large supply of peonies available at this time of the year. The flowers are too useful to be relegated to Memorial day. Our customers want variety. The easiest way to give them it is by the use of flowers in season. The rose crop in many greenhouses is off now that Mothers' day is past. Peonies may well be pushed in their place. If you have not tried doing so before, now is the time to begin.

ELIMINATING TRANSPLANTING.

I have a method of growing garden plants, especially tomatoes and salvias, which, after several years' experience, I have found eliminates the necessity of transplanting. I was about to discontinue a rather extensive plant trade when I hit upon this scheme, and I believe anyone doing a large shipping business will find this method of value. When the plants are two or three inches high, pot them off, placing six or seven plants in a 2½-inch pot. It is about as easy as potting rooted cuttings, and the plants never wilt; they harden readily and are ready for sale in about a week. Another advantage is that by withholding water, the plants can be kept for several months, as they do not grow to any great height. They make better looking plants than those that are transplanted; they can be kept on a bench or in a coldframe. I believe that this method requires only one-tenth of the amount of labor required by transplanting and only one-tenth the space is necessary.

same time it was agreed the growers should receive some increase to help compensate for the frequent long periods of low prices.

A CURE FOR POISONING.

I notice that one of The Review's correspondents in the issue of May 18 asks for a remedy for sweet pea poisoning. I have never noticed the sweet pea trouble particularly, but I have been annoyed with plant poisoning in general, which, I have found, yields to a treatment of witch-hazel and carbolic acid, used as a wash on the affected parts of the skin. I purchase a bottle of witch-hazel and have the druggist mix in a small quantity of carbolic acid, enough to cause a slight burning sensation when applied. I have never known this to fail to cure the poisoning. I hope this may prove of benefit to the reader.

ROSARIANS TO ARLINGTON.

June 2 has been set by the American Rose Society as the date for the annual visit of the rosarians to the Department of Agriculture rose gardens, at Arlington, Md. The tentative program of the organization calls for the visitors to gather, as in past years, at the store of Gude Bros. Co., about 10 a. m., proceeding from there to Arlington, which will be reached about 11 a. m.

The rose gardens at Arlington are especially magnificent this year. Officials of the department declare that the climbers are just coming into full bloom and, while the tea roses will be past their best when the society meets, the gardens will be in considerably better shape than was the case last year.

QUARANTINE NO. 43.

The federal horticultural board has made a second revision of quarantine 43, which applies to the European corn borer, effective May 1. This quarantine applies to florists only as regards cut flowers or entire plants of chrysanthemums, asters, cosmos, zinnias, hollyhocks and cut flowers or entire plants of gladioli and dahlias, except the bulbs thereof, without stems, from infested areas in Massachusetts and New Hampshire. Although the quarantine extends over the so-called infested areas in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan, it applies in those states only to corn and broom corn, sorghums and sudan grass from infested areas and not to the flowers and plants mentioned above.

HOT OR COLD.

Some day the equipment of every up-to-date greenhouse establishment will include, perhaps, a cooling plant as well as a heating plant. A future day may see pipes of cooling brine carried through the greenhouses in the same way that pipes of hot water are today. Then the grower will be able to advance or retard his plants at will. He will be able to hold back or advance the plants so that his blooms will hit a holiday to the dot, regardless of the adverse or favorable conditions of the weather from day to day.

This possibility is suggested by the way in which Peter Pearson, one of Chicago's leading plant growers, saved

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

John F. Horn, of J. H. Horn & Bro., Allentown, Pa., was busily engaged in picking out plants for the city, a large annual affair, and commented upon the value of the contract from the viewpoint of publicity. The several beds of Darwin and breeder tulips fronting the greenhouses are a source of delight to the thousands of passengers along the Lincoln highway. "Mothers' day was big, Memorial day will be even larger," is the opinion of Charles Horn, in charge of the store.

"We will try to overcome the shortage experienced on Mothers' day when Memorial day arrives," observed Mrs. Ashley, of the Ashley Flower Store, Allentown, Pa. Ernest Ashley has the greenhouses in fine shape and is beautifying the grounds with shrubbery and cannas in four varieties, The President, King Humbert, Gladiator and Eureka. A fine strike of the new hardy carnation, Allwoodii, was noted. It is a highly promising addition to this popular class of plants. A handsome illustration of it appeared in Dreer's annual for this year.

John H. Sykes, Allentown, Pa., had a fine, home-grown supply of carnations for Mothers' day, which sold at a reasonable figure, and he did big business. He now has patrons in line for Memorial day, which is quite promising, both in demand and supply.

"Oh, boy!" exclaimed Andrew Geiger, Allentown, Pa., "you should have seen our pile of deliveries on Mothers' day! Then you would realize why we continue in business. Now for Memorial day!"

W. W. Kennedy & Sons, Red Bank,

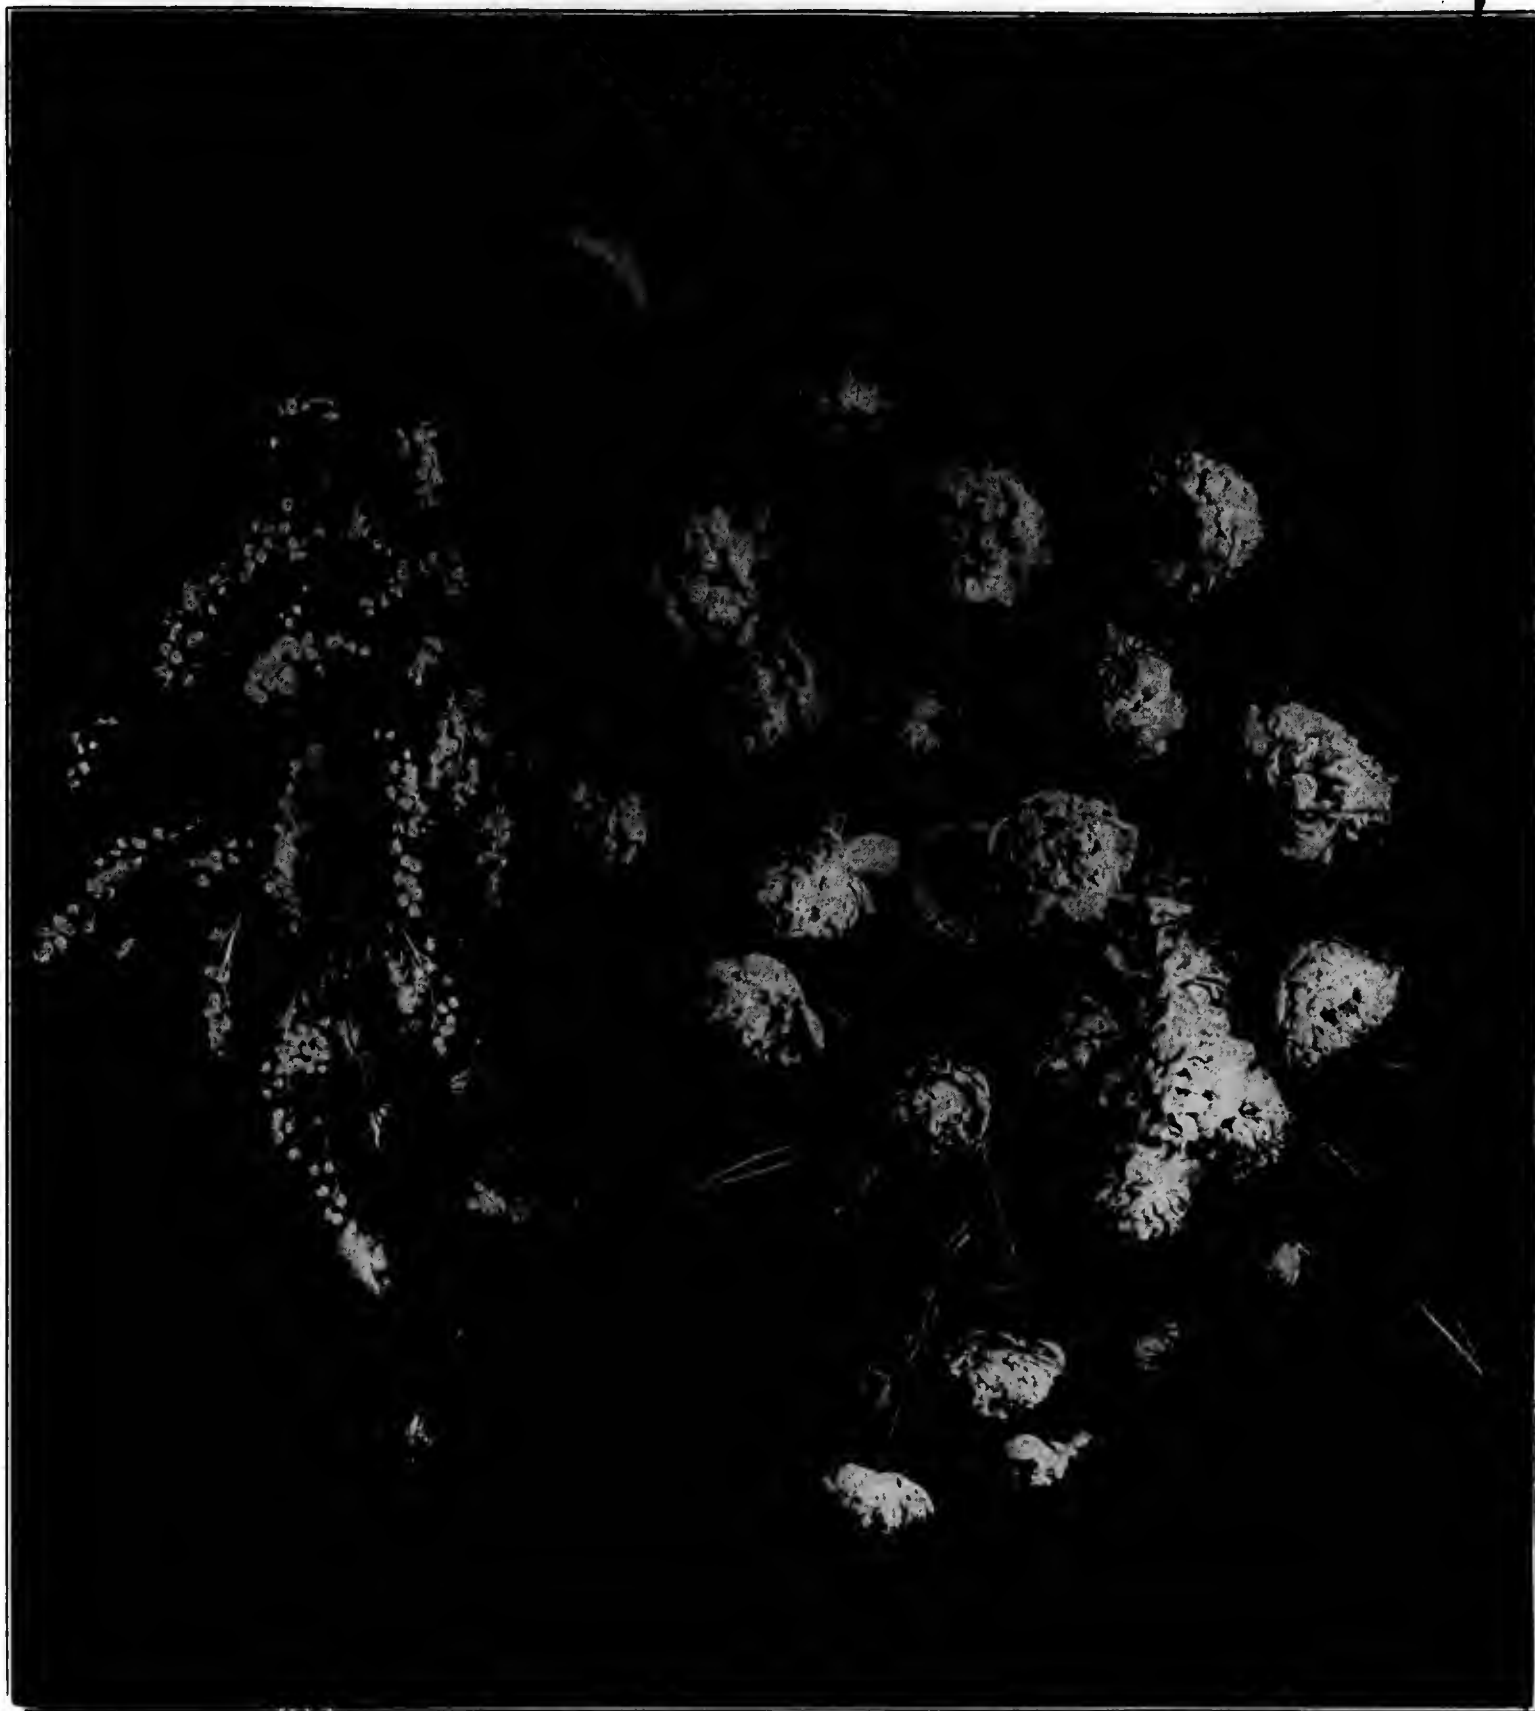

N. J., had the best Mothers' day business on record, according to John A. Kennedy, who has charge of the store, and handled a fine line both in cut flowers and pot plants. Alterations, including a larger office to accommodate more help, are in progress at this store; incidentally, the Pink Part of The Review is credited with bringing about this necessity. Dahlias are a specialty; the soil and atmosphere appear to be ideal. W. W. Kennedy is recuperating from the effects of inhaling nicotine while fumigating; he has been a sick man.

Charles H. Buening, Easton, Pa., has a fine stock of bedding plants. The rush to plant outdoors is on. Mothers' day was perfect in weather, supply of cut flowers and demand.

Anson V. Norton, Somerville, N. J., commenting upon the new house added, coincidental with the entry of his son, Harold, into the business, admitted that the infusion of younger blood is the cause of so much expansion taking place. The old-timers naturally are conservative and somewhat circumscribed; the younger members have a larger vision. The combination works admirably.

Charles L. Doerrer, Westfield, N. J., is in the conservative class, with two active sons doing the expanding. The establishment is a model of cleanliness, the delight of the fair patron who loves to wander among the flowers, and with whom it often pays to be a little patient. Commenting upon the excellent business around Mothers' day, one fact that was well known was the slight advance in the price of carnations. At the several hundred dollars at Mothers' day. Mr. Pearson had a fine lot of bulbous stock, which a glutted market would not take at any price. Putting the cut jonquils in cold storage at the warehouse used by the wholesalers for their peonies, he conceived the idea of placing there also pans of tulips. These were taken out just before Mothers' day and were seized by the retailers as a highly desirable bit of variety for the holiday. After Mothers' day had passed, when hardly a blooming plant could be found at a downtown retail store, some of the tulips which Mr. Pearson had held back a little too long for flowering at the holiday proved to be welcome indeed. The success of this experiment on the part of Mr. Pearson opens up possibilities for better profits for a discerning and foresighted grower.

INCREASING WATER PRESSURE

The city water pressure here is not great enough for my purposes. I was considering the installation of an automatic engine and pump to increase this pressure. Do you think this plan would be feasible and advisable? How large a pump and engine would be required? What firms deal in these outfits?

— J. V.—Ky.

If an automatic engine and pump are installed, it would be desirable to use a large pressure tank. Such outfits are made by the Delco Co., and also by Vaile & Kimes, Dayton, O.

For use with the present water system, we can see little advantage to be derived from a pumping plant under automatic control. The size of the engine and pump will depend upon the number of leads likely to be used at one time. A 3-horsepower engine with a duplex pump having 3-inch cylinders would probably be able to supply all of the water that would be required with fifty pounds' pressure at the nozzles; if a higher pressure is desired, use a 5-horsepower engine and a triplex pump.

Unless a pressure tank with an automatic cut-off is provided, it will be necessary to have a pressure relief valve for use with a manual-controlled engine.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

“Pay Up, Gentlemen.”

Proofs of the campaign advertisements to be used in the national magazines during June, July and August are going out this week to all subscribers to the campaign fund, to the members of the S. A. F. and others interested. These advertisements are arranged for column spaces and will appear in the following magazines: Red Book, McLean's Magazine (Canadian), Life, Collier's, Outlook, Vanity Fair, Atlantic Monthly, World's Work, American Magazine, Literary Digest, Century, Scribner's, House Beautiful, Sunset, Independent, Harper's Magazine and Review of Reviews.

There is nothing to prevent a vigorous prosecution of the campaign from now on, excepting the one thing which has operated against it all along—shortage of funds, most of which has been subscribed, on paper, but is subject to a tardy remittance. It might be well, right here, to impress upon all delinquents that the publicity committee can no longer prejudice personal credits, in order to maintain the good work of the campaign. A pledge is a pledge, or should be, and the committee has a moral right to depend upon it, especially when arrangements for publicity must be made months in advance. Nobody now questions the immense amount of good created by the use of our slogan, nor could the question arise. One has only to look over the advertising pages of a national magazine to see how the influence of flowers has been sought to give emphasis to sentiment expected to arouse interest in other lines—and this influence has been brought to the notice of those who seek to use it by our campaign work. Observe how the flowers are featured in the illustrations. Realize the value of the delicate uses flowers are put to in the various exemplifications. It is getting so that a prominent advertisement must in some form feature flowers. All this is publicity for our products and costs the florists nothing.

Slogan at Work.

The slogan, “Say It with Flowers” works in countless ways, too many to make specific mention possible; still, our committee has to beg for subscriptions and, further, urge many who have sent in pledges to make them good. Is this right? Is this the return the committee should expect for its work, unselfishly performed?

Every delinquent in the matter of a campaign pledge should pride himself that he is no longer going to withhold from the campaign the support that he tendered. The most remote neighborhood in these days is reached by the various magazines the committee uses, and there should be satisfaction when a florist turns their pages to find the campaign his own—advertisements flashing their messages, all to the good of the industry from which he makes his living. Pay up, gentlemen, if you please!

Exhibition Space Going.

The space in the section to be devoted to the trade exhibition is being rapidly taken up. At the present time, practically all of the space in the oval, or center of the hall, has been reserved and the arcade space is moving satisfactorily. There are two arcades, east and west of the oval, and all space in them is good; in fact, there is not a space laid out anywhere in the hall that suffers from a disadvantage of any kind. The outlook is that all available space will be taken up, and the exhibition will rank with the best ever staged by the society. Prospective visitors should lose no time in communicating with the secretary.

Among the contracts completed are some from such concerns as the Lord & Burnham Co., American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago; M. Rice Co., Philadelphia; McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa. Rate Reductions.

The necessary applications have been made to the different trunk line associations for railroad rate reductions, and we are assured that they will be granted. The Trans-Continental Passenger Association has agreed to make excursion rates from Pacific coast points between the first of June and the last of August, the rates being only slightly in excess of one fare for the round trip from San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, Portland, Seattle, Tacoma, Vancouver, B. C., Victoria, B. C. and Spokane. The tickets permit stopovers at all points going and returning. Visitors from these points should confer with their home ticket agents for detailed information.

COVERING THE CASKET

MAKING A CASKET BLANKET.

Selecting the Materials.

The casket blanket or pall, while one of the most pretentious of funeral arrangements, is yet one of the simplest to prepare, if handled properly. The blanket may vary from a simple green cover with a cluster of flowers in the center to an elaborate one, densely covered with blossoms. It may be inexpensive or costly, depending upon the quantity and kind of flowers used.

One of the most important things, in the preparation of a well executed blanket, is the selection of a suitable backing upon which to fasten the flowers. Whatever material is selected should be flexible, but with sufficient body to support the weight of the flowers. It should also be of a rather open weave, so that wires and pins may be pushed through readily. Wire cloth or screen is sometimes used, but lacks flexibility. The green netting used lacks body. One of the best materials is green burlap; green is selected because it blends with the color of the foliage and so is easier to hide. Rigid wire frames which entirely cover the casket are to be had, but have the disadvantage of being usable in just one position. The flexible blanket has the advantage of being suited to draping in various ways.

Making the Stretcher.

The size of the blanket will be determined by the size of the casket and the amount of the casket to be covered. If the entire casket is to be covered, the blanket should be six or seven feet long and three feet wide. The foliage and flowers extending over the edge will increase the width and length by six to eight inches. A cover for the lower half of the casket would be just half this size. For smaller caskets the size must be decreased.

The blanket will be difficult to make unless one has some way of stretching the burlap and holding it above the worktable, so that the wires may be fastened on the under side without difficulty. A simple stretching frame may be made of two pieces of board (2x4's will do) seven feet long as runners for a base. The supporting frame may be made by cutting four blocks from a piece of lumber six to ten inches wide and two inches thick. The blocks should be cut square at one end and sloping at the other, so as to give a long nailing base, but a short top. Two pieces, two inches wide by one inch thick and three and one-half feet long, complete the material necessary for the frame. The frame is easily assembled by securely nailing one of the 2-inch strips to two of the blocks, placing the blocks almost at the end of the strip. This frame is then set on the two long runners and toe-nailed, driving the nails only part-way in, so that they may be easily removed. The other two blocks and crosspiece are nailed together, but not fastened to the runners until the burlap is ready to be stretched.

By H. B. DORNER.

Arranging Materials.

In preparing a blanket, 3x6 feet, a piece of burlap twice the length should be used. This is folded across the center and the creased end tacked to the header, using for the purpose eight-ounce carpet tacks, but driving them only halfway in, so that they may be easily withdrawn. The free end of the upper half should be turned in three-quarters of an inch and tacked in the same manner to the other cross frame. The lower half of the burlap is allowed to hang free and is later used as a cover for the wires showing on the under side of the part to which the flowers are fastened. The burlap is tightly stretched by pulling on the lower frame and then nailing it to the runners.

After the cloth is stretched, it may then be covered with flat or fancy ferns to give a background and so save on the more expensive greens. These ferns are best placed lengthwise and fastened in place by means of ordinary pins. The first row is placed in position across the top and the ferns are pinned near the tips. The bases are pinned to the cloth with the tips of the second row, in order to save time. If a heavy green backing is desired, the ferns should be doubled.

After the fancy ferns are in place, an edging of Sprengeri, plumosus or other greens is placed in position. The tips are allowed to extend five or six inches beyond the edge of the burlap. This foliage and all the flowers should be fastened in place by hooks made like greening pins, but of soft No. 22 or 24 wire. The hook is slipped over the stem and through the burlap, drawn down tightly, twisted several times, and the ends bent back against the cloth. Where pins are used there is danger of their coming out. If this were to happen with the fancy ferns, it would make no difference, as they would be held in place by the flowers. When the edging is in place, the flowers are fastened on and with them such foliage or green as is needed. The flowers should be worked in from the sides and ends toward the center.

Fastening the Flowers.

If the blanket is to be made of roses or carnations, the stems should be shortened to five or six inches and strengthened with No. 24 wire, to keep the head from breaking off. Roses should be wired through the base of the petals and carnations through the calyxes. For convenience they may then be fastened together in groups of three, care being taken that the cluster is irregular; a few may be used singly to fill in.

Small flowers, such as peas, valley or violets, should be arranged in small, irregular clusters. The clusters should be open, so as to cover better. Where the flowers have a distinctive foliage,

The hook is slipped over the stem and through the burlap, drawn down tightly, twisted several times, and the ends bent back against the cloth. Where pins are used there is danger of their coming out. If this were to happen with the fancy ferns, it would make no difference, as they would be held in place by the flowers. When the edging is in place, the flowers are fastened on and with them such foliage or green as is needed. The flowers should be worked in from the sides and ends toward the center.

Fastening the Flowers.

If the blanket is to be made of roses or carnations, the stems should be shortened to five or six inches and strengthened with No. 24 wire, to keep the head from breaking off. Roses should be wired through the base of the petals and carnations through the calyxes. For convenience they may then be fastened together in groups of three, care being taken that the cluster is irregular; a few may be used singly to fill in.

Small flowers, such as peas, valley or violets, should be arranged in small, irregular clusters. The clusters should be open, so as to cover better. Where the flowers have a distinctive foliage, such as the valley, a little of it should be used in the clusters.

The method of arranging the flowers will depend somewhat upon the type of blanket desired. If it is to be entirely of roses, the flowers will be scattered somewhat evenly over the entire surface, with sufficient foliage to give a pleasing effect. The rose clusters should be laid in position and fastened down by means of wire hooks over the stems where they are joined. Each flower should again be fastened down just below the calyx, so that when the blanket is draped over the edge of the casket the flowers will not lift up from the burlap.

If large and small flowers are used together, such as roses and peas, the small flowers may be used as a fringe about the edge as well as to fill in between the large ones. Valley also makes a beautiful combination with roses.

The center may be finished off the same as the remainder of the blanket or may be built up as a central panel. The central flowers may also be arranged as a simple or double-header spray and then fastened in place. For best effect the center must not be built too high.

After the last flowers are in position, the blanket should be removed from the stretcher, the under half of the burlap straightened out and the edges pinned together; the under side should be smooth and with no wires showing. This second layer of burlap is not absolutely necessary, but gives a finish that all first-class work should have.

The Market.

The cut flower market is taking on a summer aspect. Arrivals are somewhat in excess of the demand, but clearances are fairly good, although values are not well established. Almost every item on the list of available flowers has declined in value, but this was to have been expected and was in line with business in former years at this season.

Peonies are arriving freely now, from southern points, but the absence of the old varieties, usually forerunners of an avalanche, is particularly noticeable. Most arrivals are of salable quality, and the movement is fairly good, within a price range of $1 to $1.50 per dozen.

Iris, usually in big supply at this season, is in poor evidence, but there is an abundance of other materials.

Roses are abundant, and prices have suffered. With Mothers' day out of the way, summer conditions have brought roses down to a much lower range of prices. American Beauty is selling at $15 to $40 per hundred for specials, and hybrid teas are moving slowly at $1.50, for No. 2 grade, to $12, for extras.

Cattleyas are in good supply, but the demand for them is not active. The price range is $75 to $150 per hundred, the latter figure for the best gigas.

Lilies are not overplentiful, but quite sufficient for the small demand. Lilies of the valley continue in oversupply, with a price range of $1.50 to $6 per hundred sprays.

Carnations are in heavy supply, with quality deteriorating. Prices are anywhere from $1.50 to $4 per hundred. Laddie is bringing $8.

Herbaceous stock is more than plentiful and the list of items is large. Daisies, gladioli, myosotis, cornflowers, centaureas, calendulas, pansies, delphiniums, lupines, snapdragons, candytuft, mignonette, bouvardia, iris and shrub flowers command a fair patronage.

Various Notes.

Frank M. Johnson and Arthur Anderson, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, were visitors last week.

At the meeting of the New York Florists' Club, June 12, S. S. Pennock, president of the S. A. F., will lecture on "Six Months in Europe with the Friends' Relief Committee." He will also tell of visits to various European horticultural establishments during the period of his visit. He will show numerous screen pictures in connection with his discourse. An exhibition of peonies will be staged on this occasion.

The American Iris Society has advanced the date of its annual meeting and exhibition, to be held at the New York Botanical Garden, to May 27. All exhibits, to be staged in the Museum building, must be in place on the preceding day. J. H. P.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are pleased with the interest Manhattan is showing in their new store, at 146 West Eighteenth street. Manhattan's attitude was voiced by Max Schling, when he said: "I don't need anything, but here is an order just to show we are glad to see you."

The Market.

Rose stock is scarce. There are a good many sweet peas and carnations. Both are better than they were a week or two ago. The nights have been cool and the days bright and these favorable conditions have brought on good stock. Peonies are at their best, but the early varieties will be gone before the end of the week. Some of the best varieties are now in cold storage, or will be within a few days. Gladioli, cornflowers, daisies, larkspurs and calendulas, all good stock, are coming in plentifully.

Club Meeting.

The Kansas City Florists' Club met Wednesday, May 17, at 1228 Grand avenue. This location will be the meeting place of the club through the summer months, and perhaps permanently. On motion of W. J. Barnes, the dues of employees were reduced from $5 to $1 per year. W. L. Rock, general chairman in charge of arrangements for the S. A. F. convention, announced that the list of committees was complete and would be mailed to the various chairmen and all members of the club in a short time. Each chairman will also be instructed specifically as to what is expected of him and he will be held personally responsible for his work. These committees are as follows: General chairman, William L. Rock; convention hall and business meetings, W. J. Barnes, chairman; Samuel Murray and William L. Rock; entertainment committee, looking after barbecue and music; Ed. A. Humfeld, Glenn K. Parker, M. E. Carter,

It was decided to make the June meeting of the club a social affair and bring out a good attendance so that arrangements for the S. A. F. convention may be gone over.

R. S. Brown & Son said that Mothers' day surpassed all previous holidays, including Christmas and Easter. This season's business throughout is the best in six years. Good stock, in plentiful quantity, has been handled and cleaned up. R. S. Brown is again at active work after four months' illness.

Joseph Austin's business for Mothers' day was thirty per cent better than that of a year ago. Many more baskets were sold this year than before. Geraniums and ageratums combined with other plants were used. These baskets will be good in the home or for porch decoration all summer. Carnations, sweet peas and snapdragons, from the Austin greenhouses, sold well.

FLOWERS ALWAYS APPEAL.

In war time the growing of flowers was admitted to be an industry essential to the well-being of the public. In hard times pocketbooks have still been opened to buy flowers. Like the poor, the appeal of flowers is always with us, and with all of us.

The recent wild flower show in Boston again demonstrated this truth. So thoroughly demonstrated it that the Boston Traveler was moved to comment, May 16, in the following vein:

ONLY A POSY SHOW.

Just as one is about to decide, from the crimes and misdemeanors, the suicides and divorces and other evidences seen on every hand, that civilization is headed for the demolition how-ows, comes the information that 80,000 people attended the wild flower show at Horticultural hall during the two weeks of its continuance.

This is a big record, even for a free show. The exhibition was remarkably well conceived and executed. The visitor, passing through a veritable indoor glen of rocks, trees, ferns and flowers, with cascades and streams added to stimulate nature, found much of the refreshing delight of a journey through some out-of-door beauty spot—with the particular point in favor of the indoor exhibit that nature does not produce so many varieties all blooming at one time as were assembled here with the aid of hothouses and artificial forcing.

When a splendid idea is thoroughly carried out, as the wild flower show was, there is no lack of popular interest. The people want good things. Some of the best things, such as fine paintings and some forms of literature and music, are a bit difficult for the person of untrained mind and tastes to comprehend unless some genius spans the gulf.

Everyone instinctively loves flowers. And wild flowers in particular exercise a charm unmatched by the more conventional posies of the cultivated sort.

When 80,000 residents of Greater Boston attend an exhibit of wild flowers the soul of the city is not dead nor even dying.

FUMIGATING WITH GAS.

We are losing a large number of plants and are at the mercy of a moth worm. We have applied the remedies known to us, with little effect. Can you help us rid our benches of this pest?

F. G.—Pa.

If you have tried fumigation with nicotine papers and it has failed to dislodge the pests, the best method of securing relief will be hydrocyanic acid gas. The formula for this gas has often been given in The Review. I should advise a light all-night exposure; select as cool nights as possible for the operation, and it would not be well to do the gassing before 9 p. m. Two or three applications a week apart should relieve you of these pests, which are annoying and destructive. Once you have learned how to use the cyanide, I think you will find it the most certain and inexpensive of all fumigants, but great care is necessary in applying it, as the gas is deadly.

green, with a small leaf, which is called aurea nana, but I at one time had an alternanthera that had a large leaf and was yellow and green in color. I also had one that was chocolate color. Can you give me the names of the last two varieties?

C. E. H.—Ill.

There are not less than fifty species of alternantheras, but probably not over a dozen are in general cultivation in the trade. Most of the garden forms are varieties of A. Bettzieckiana and the best known and most popular varieties are: Brilliantissima, aurea nana, aurea pieta, paronychioides, maguifica, versicolor, aurea, jewel, turvel and tricolor. The best of these I think are: Jewel—red shading to crimson, yellow markings, a fine and rather new variety; aurea nana—bright yellow, probably the finest of the yellows; paronychioides—reddish orange and crimson with green shadings, quite dwarf in habit; brilliantissima—a broad-leaved red and yellow sort; versicolor—vigorous habit, crimson, with olive and chocolate colorings. I have never grown alternantheras from seed nor seen offers of seed, not because they do not produce seed, but probably on account of propagation from cuttings or divisions being so simple.

MOVING TIME AT FALLON'S.

Down in Lynchburg, Va., is the J. J. Fallon Co. And at Easter time things with this company were moving! The rapidly rising tide of business moved the delivery trucks to the limit; moved the manager and the entire staff to speed, speed, speed; and moved Mrs. Annie Cressey, a member of the force, to poetry—as follows:

NIGHT BEFORE EASTER AT FALLON'S.

'Twas the night before Easter and all through the store
Every creature was stirring as never before.
The boxes were piled up high in the air,
Awaiting the flowers that would soon be in there,
While matrons and maidens slept in their beds
And visions of corsages danced in their heads.
When sudden there sounded outside such a clatter,
We flew to the door to see to the matter;
The trucks were unloading cut flowers galore,
Thirty thousand, I know, if there were a score.
'Don't stop to admire them, but get down to work,
'To get them all out no one here can shirk.
'Here Doyle, here Cressey, come make a corsage,
'Do be quick about it and see that they're charged;
'George, make up some boxes; Claire, fix up some bows,
'Run find me some valley, while I wire a rose;
'What! 500 orders still on my file!
'I thought I had made up and finished that pile.
'Steve, put out the front lights and make it quite dark,
'I don't want another darn order—Oh, hark!
'Twelve o'clock! Work fast! We'll never get through.
'Sweet Briar orders must be made up, too;
'Uncle Tom, are you still coming in with the green?
'I must have some fern and there's none to be seen.
'Don't answer the phone; we have quit for today;
'Send somebody down to the Whitehouse cafe,
'I must have some coffee and please make it hot;
'Don't send just a cupful, make it a pot.
'Two o'clock; we'll never get through this, I know,
'With half the force sleeping, and where now is Bo?
'In the hotel asleep? Well, let him alone.
'When we finish these orders, he'll not be a drone.
'Five o'clock! Yes, I know, we're all getting dizzy;
'But speed up there, people, let's see you get busy—
'Come, make your corsage; we'll all have a race;
'Here Lizzie, colonial, with big paper lace.
'The pansies are gone? Well, use a few stock,
'Don't tell me now it is past six o'clock.'
'Twas thus that I left them at quarter to seven,
Let's hope there's no Easter when we get to heaven!

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

An unusually large number of announcements of engagements were features in the social world here last week and called for considerable decorations, with cut flowers and table favors. The social calendar for the coming month contains a large number of weddings and already the florists have many orders for these occasions. These, with graduations, following Memorial day, are expected to keep florists busy until the end of the season.

The demand for potted plants, which has been showing a marked increase in the last few years, has exceeded all previous demand this spring and the handling of potted stock has become a decidedly substantial feature of the store trade. Pansies have been in the market by thousands and geraniums, heliotrope, ageratums, verbenas and many others have been handled by the hundreds. Prices, too, have been a great incentive to liberal buying and there is evidence that the florists are coming to a realization that small profits and quick sales are the solution of the problem.

FULBRUGE'S WIRE WINDOW.

"The illustrations tell the story," says C. R. Fulbruge. Here are two views, on this page, one of the outside and one of the inside of the store of Fulbruge's Flowers, Inc., 90 East Sixth street, St. Paul, Minn., when the telegraph window display for Mothers' day was getting in its best work.

A special Western Union wire was run right into the window, and there was an operator in constant attendance, both receiving and sending orders for Mothers' day flowers. Customers saw their own orders transmitted, and the public was informed just how the telegraph delivery of flowers is accomplished.

In the illustration showing the store interior will be seen the young lady on duty as the Western Union operator. Also in view is a Western Union messenger in uniform operating a radio receiving apparatus. Thus both the telegraph and the wireless were represented. By arrangement with a sending station, messages and concerts were heard over this radio outfit.

A crowd was constantly in front of the window, as the illustration above indicates. "There is no doubt," states Mr. Fulbruge, "that an entirely new element of flower buyers sent orders to other cities, induced to do so simply by seeing what florists' telegraph delivery means and how it is done. The public was greatly interested in knowing just how to send flowers to mother in a distant city, and a little explanation usually landed an order."

COHEN'S TELEGRAPH WINDOW.

More than one florist reports an unusually large number of telegraph orders at Mothers' day. Their explanation is that the public is becoming better acquainted with florists' service by wire and makes correspondingly greater use of it.

Max L. Cohen, proprietor of the Jackson Floral Shop, at 748 East Sixty-third street, Chicago, staged a window display at his store at Easter that won the notice of the local manager of the Western Union Telegraph Co. there is evidence that the florists are coming to a realization that small profits and quick sales are the solution of the problem.

pany's offices in Englewood, Woodlawn and Hyde Park. The district superintendent complimented him on the displays and expressed much satisfaction over the arrangement.

Mr. Cohen's view is expressed in the following statement: "By advertising in The Review we have tripled our telegraph delivery orders for Mothers' day. We had to have a separate clerk at a desk all day Saturday, until midnight, just to take care of the outgoing and incoming telegrams. We also had the Western Union offices take orders for flowers and then transfer them to us, an excellent idea."

TRANSMITTING LEAF-SPOT.

To determine the cause of the presence of a spot disease on the leaves of geranium plants at certain seasons of the year, the University of Maryland agricultural experiment station recently conducted an investigation at various greenhouses in the state of Maryland where the disease was prevalent. The disease was brought to the attention of the experiment station by the rejection of several shipments of geranium plants by a consignee, who gave as the reason for his refusal to accept the plants that the plants were affected with a disease. The plants were then examined and found to be infested with a severe insect stigmomose and a number of fungous troubles. One of the insects doing considerable damage was found to be the pallid mite, Tarsonemus pallidus. Accompanying this trouble was a spot disease, which it became advisable to study carefully, in order to determine whether the presence of the spot and mite were related in any way.

The investigators went about their experiments in a most thorough manner. Every known means of growing the plants was adopted; some of them were covered with large, glass bells when watered; others were left entirely open; some were covered with cloth, while still others were inoculated with the disease and placed in the same benches with good, healthy plants, in order to determine how the disease traveled and what effect the insects had upon it. After these experiments were made, the authorities took measures to find out how the disease could be combated and how the insects could be exterminated. The investigations brought out the fact that the geranium leaf-spot was caused in part by a true fungous parasite, Cercospora Brunkii; that stigmomose is caused by several insects, the most common of which are red spiders and white flies, and that the injury caused by them may be distinguished from the spot caused by the fungus. It was determined that one of the principal means of spreading the cercospora spot lies in the method of watering; that insects play a small part, if any, in the transmission of the disease.

In searching for methods of eliminating the disease, it was learned that control of the spot may be obtained by the application of Bordeaux mixture to the stock beds and cuttings; that fungicides other than the Bordeaux mixture have not proved so successful in combating the disease as has this latter mixture. It was also learned that the discolored foliage resulting from fungicide applications may be largely avoided in plants ready for shipment or setting out in beds if the cuttings are dipped in Bordeaux soon after removal from the stock plants. Plants so treated will grow out of the marks of the application by the time they are ready to ship or set out. The facts were also established that good ventilation must be provided wherever possible and every precaution must be taken to prevent excessive humidity or dampness in the houses where the plants are growing, in order to avoid the disease.

GERANIUM BLOOMS SPOTTED.

"I have a fine lot of S. A. Nutt geraniums. They are all ablaze with flowers, but every flower has a dark or withered part in the center. Could you tell me the cause of this premature decay? I have used no fertilizer. The plants are growing in plain loam, containing about one-fifth sand. The plants were wintered at about 50 degrees and kept on the dry side. At this time of year the temperature goes high during the day.

R. F. C.—Neb.

It would be advisable to apply a light shade to the glass over your plants; a thin coat of whitewash, or kerosene and white lead, sprayed on thinly, would answer. The trouble may be due to burning; this is much more liable to occur to plants under glass than to those in the open air. Give the plants abundant ventilation and do not keep a damp atmosphere or spray overhead.

C. W.

"DISEASED" GERANIUM LEAVES.

I am mailing you some of our geraniums, which are diseased. Kindly examine them and advise me, if possible, what is the matter with them. What treatment can I give them to help them along? Gas got into our place last December. Do you suppose this is what caused the trouble? Our potting soil was in the greenhouse at that time. These plants seemed to do all right as long as the weather was cold, but as soon as the warm weather came the leaves turned as have those we mailed you.

L. & G.—Ill.

If gas was the cause of the geranium leaves dying, the trouble would be most acute while the temperature was low outdoors and the houses ventilated only a little. It would be much increased with tight ventilators and materially reduced when they were kept open all of the time. Your leaves are similar to many others received at this season of the year and the real cause is not easy to determine. Avoid overhead spraying; it softens the foliage and makes the plants more subject to fungous affections. Keep a dry atmosphere and new plants a little on the dry side. If they seem starved at the roots, give a watering with nitrate of soda, a tablespoonful to a 3-gallon can, and give each pot a light top-dressing of fine bone. Keep diseased leaves picked off. Give plants plenty of fresh air. Ventilators should never be closed at this season. Do not throw any diseased leaves or flowers below the benches; it will only aggravate matters. "Cleanliness is next to godliness" with plants as well as with human beings.

C. W.

GERANIUMS UNRECOGNIZABLE.

I have mailed you a geranium, the name of which I have been unable to discover. Can you advise me whether or not it is an uncommon variety?

S. G.—O.

The flower truss and foliage were too badly dried up to make the naming of the variety possible. It is difficult to send geraniums by mail and have the flowers arrive in such a condition that they can be named with accuracy. In your case the small box was crushed flat and recognition was utterly impossible.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Chicago, Ill.—Further postponement has been made of the sale of the assets of the Everette R. Peacock Co., no bids having been received.

Price, Utah.—Creditors of the Carbon Floral Co. have received less than one per cent of their claims against the former owners of the concern, the amount paid being the proceeds of the sheriff's sale held May 29. Both former owners of the company have left the town, and W. F. Olson, the new proprietor, is only responsible for obligations incurred since March 8.

Alameda, Cal.—A voluntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed by C. Kooyman, as the C. Kooyman Co. The liabilities are stated to be $37,919 and the assets: $13,023; claimed exempt, $4,750. It is understood that Mr. Kooyman wished to be rid of some heavy overhead expenses. He believed that by filing the petition he could protect his creditors better, who will, he assures them, be paid in full in due time. It is understood that the business will be sold for the benefit of creditors, but no date has been set.

Lebanon, Pa.—The Court of Common Pleas of Lebanon county appointed Clarke M. Seltzer as receiver for John L. Bernstein, to conduct the business until June 15, 1922, and then to dispose of the real estate and personal property of the insolvent. "The liabilities are about $24,000 and the assets do not exceed $10,000," says Receiver Seltzer. "The assets consist almost exclusively of real estate worth between $8,000 and $10,000, which is encumbered by liens to the extent of about $12,000. It would therefore appear that the entire assets will not be sufficient to satisfy the lien creditors, and that the common creditors will get nothing."

BEST OF THE LILACS

LILACS AT ARNOLD ARBORETUM.

Popular Flower.

Of all the many beautiful deciduous flowering shrubs suitable for cultivation in our colder states, none is more universally popular than the lilac. Lilacs have many factors in their favor—hardiness, floriferousness, fragrance, a wide range of colors, the fact that they produce their foliage early and retain it late and the added fact that by planting early, mid-season and late varieties, a flowering season of two months' duration is possible. Old, overgrown plants can, if necessary, be cut down close to the ground and, if a few of the strongest shoots are selected, fine flowering plants will be produced in a few years. Lilacs are singularly free from the attacks of insect pests. San Jose or other forms of scale sometimes attack them, but spraying with lime-sulphur or a soluble oil, while the plants are in the dormant stage, easily controls these scales.

Planting can be done in either spring or fall with equal success. The early part of November and April are probably the two best months for planting. Large specimens are best moved with frozen balls and, when carefully watered and mulched, soon become established. It assists the plants much if, after flowering, the old trusses are removed; this applies equally to rhododendrons, azaleas and kalmias.

There are over 200 named varieties of lilacs. A great many of these have been raised by that most noted of all European hybridists, M. Lemoine, of Nancy, France. Some good varieties have been raised in America by John Dunbar, of Rochester, whose famous collection in Highland park attracts great crowds of visitors annually.

Lilacs Have Their Day.

The Arnold Arboretum collection comprises about 140 varieties, planted in grass on a sloping hillside, with a wide cultivated circle around each plant. Many thousands of people visit the arboretum while the lilac display continues. The collection is to be found at about a 5-minute walk from the Forest Hills gate, which is conveniently near the terminus of the Boston Elevated railroad and surface and railroad terminals.

While in some years lilacs in Massachusetts are at their best early in May, in 1916 lilac day was as late as June 15. An average date is on or about May 25. This season the height of the flowering season was from May 12 to 23.

The varieties oblata and hyacinthiflora plena are the earliest bloomers here, while the villosa types, followed by the tree lilacs, Syringa peginensis and S. japonica, are the latest bloomers. The following varieties are selected as the best in the Arboretum collection: Taking the single-flowered varieties first, there is no pure white superior to Marie Legraye, Vestale and Mont Blanc, all new, promising varieties, with round trusses. Frau Bertha Dammann has large, sweetly scented pan-cles. Virginalis alba is a pretty, graceful white, with smaller individual flowers and trusses. Princess Alexandria is a beautiful white variety, coming close to Marie Legraye. Alba grandiflora is a pretty white, but not equal to Marie Legraye or Princess Alexandria. Of the dark-colored singles, Philemon is still one of the finest; its large trusses are of a deep reddish purple color and the flowers are not too tightly packed in the trusses. Congo is a fine deep purple and so is Negro. Each of these is often classed as superior to Philemon, but a close-up comparison fails to prove this.

Souvenir de Louis Spaeth is another excellent and popular dark purple, often used for forcing. President Massard is a dark and promising variety. Edmond Boissier, comparatively new, gives one the impression of a winner. The color is dark purple. De Miribel also shows up well in this class. Charles Joly, one of the older varieties, continues to be one of the best. Volcan is another excellent dark purple.

In the pinks, Lavaliensis, with small, dense trusses, is extremely graceful. Waldbeck Rousseau flowers heavily, with good-sized trusses. Lucie Baltet, a new variety with round trusses, is a distinct pink of an exquisite shade. Fürst Lichtenstein is a lovely pink with handsome trusses, but the queen of the pinks continues to be S. macrostachia, with immense trusses not too heavily crowded with flowers and of a delightful pink color. S. nigricans is a good pale pink and the name is not appropriate and would be more befitting a dark-colored variety. Marechal Larbet is a promising sort and Ambroise Verschaffelt, while carrying a truss of only medium size, is of a lovely pink shade. Professor Sargent carries rather deep pink flowers in strong, erect trusses. Mme. Francisque Morel, another pretty single pink, has a delicious fragrance, as has Ambrose Verschaffelt.

Lilac-Purple Beauties.

is a nice pale purple; of similar color is Prince Imperial. Docteur Von Regel is pale purple, while S. gigantea is more of a lavender shade. Mme. Kreuter is a fine medium purple. Mareau carries a remarkably strong truss and is of medium purple color. Of fine quality in the medium purples is Prince Camille de Rohan; the name is reminiscent of one of the most beautiful crimson scarlet H. P. roses. Boussaingault, dark purple in color, is a really excellent variety. Melide Lampert carries a beautiful, round truss, medium purple in color. Beaumur, of a nice even purple shade, is fine.

Blues and Lavenders.

In the blues or lavenders are some fine things. Christophe Colomb has a large, round truss, densely packed with lavender blue flowers. Spectabilis, with small, slender trusses, is of a pretty pale blue color. Gloire de la Rochelle carries pale blue flowers in slender and graceful trusses. Lila-Rosa, with pale lavender trusses, makes a beautiful show. Marlyensis pallida is a most beautiful lilac, covered with large trusses of a pale lavender color. Justi, porcelain blue, is effective. Blenatre is an older sort with small trusses, but carried in great profusion and of a lovely blue shade.

The double varieties are now about as numerous as the singles and many people seem to prefer them, but personally I think they are too heavy; however, their keeping qualities surpass those of the singles. In the double white section Mme. Lemoine would still be choice, with Mme. Casimir Perier a good second. Edith Cavell is a promising semi-double white. Dame Blanche is another new and excellent white.

Seas of Pale Purple.

Jean Mace is a pretty double pale blue, while Souvenir de L. Thibault is a nice double lavender. Prince de Beauveau is of medium purplish blue color. The buds are of a rich purple red color. Pierre Joigneaux carries narrow pointed trusses, light purple in color. Charles Sargent, a new variety, as yet does not show up especially well; the flowers are of a pretty porcelain blue shade. Small trusses are borne on Docteur Maillot and the color is pale blue. Renoncule is a nice pale lavender, as also is Mme. Jules Finger. Condoreet is a nice light purple and Maxine Cornu a charming pale pink, one of the best doubles.

President Grevy and Lemoinei are two fine pale blues. Jean Bart, with small-sized trusses, is a medium purple. Michel Buehner is a rather dwarf grower of a pale lilac color. President Carnot and Viviani Morel are both pale lavenders. The last named is especially fine. Beautiful is Langois, also lavender blue. Of a distinctive shade is President Loubet; the red buds open to a deep lilac shade. Somewhat similar in color is Comte de Kerchoue. Charles Baltet is a fine dark purple and Mare Micheli is a lovely pale lavender. Of similar color is Maurice de Vilmorin.

Chromatic Creations.

Mme. Leon Simon carries nice, erect trusses of a purple crimson shade. Marechal de Bassompierre is a fine medium purple, while Mlle. Le Page is of a pretty medium blue shade. Similar in color is Paul Therion, and Le Printemps is of a beautiful lavender color. Docteur Maesters carries magnificent spikes of pale lavender flowers. Louis Henry is medium purple in color.

William Robinson has exceedingly double flowers of a lovely lavender color. The objection to this would be that the trusses were too densely packed with flowers, which were in themselves too double. George Bellair is a nice medium blue, not unlike Jules Ferry. Des Fontaines is a pretty semi-double purple. Guizot is a lovely pale blue. Colbert, lavender, suffused with red, carries a medium truss. Grand Duc Constantin is a lovely lavender. President Poincaré has extra large trusses, pale blue in color. Deuil d'Emile Galle is a good semi-double pale blue and Gaudichaud is a distinct shade of steel blue.

Additional to the foregoing numerous varieties of Syringa vulgaris are rothomagensis, the Rouen lilac, and its white form; the Persian lilac, S. persica, in purple and white colors; S. Josikaea, the Hungarian lilac; the beautiful, sweet scented and graceful S. pubescens, S. villosa and other desirable species, all of which make beautiful shrubs and help to prolong the lilac season, always one of the most delightful and eagerly looked forward to periods of the year.

ACTIVE AT AUSTIN, TEX.

At 722 Congress avenue, Austin, Tex., is the store of the Austin Floral Co., just recently incorporated. This used to be Connelly's Austin Floral Co., but since it ceased to be conducted under that style many improvements have been made.

Besides this store, the firm has other holdings. Flower Acres, one of them, consists of five acres of land with an excellent irrigation system, electric lights, a 6-room house for the grower and a garage for two automobiles. This place is devoted to the growing of Shasta daisies, gladioli, Asparagus plumosus, stocks, calendulas, dahlias, etc.

Just recently the company closed a 5-year lease of the Seiders Greenhouses and these are now operated under the name of Flower Home. There are three houses, each 21x120 feet, at 1106 West Thirty-eighth street, Austin. These are all fully equipped in the most modern way as to light, heating and irrigation. This place is devoted to sweet peas and potted plants and will be filled with mums and other stock for the fall trade.

The manager of the firm is E. Paxton Daviss, Jr., who came from Waco, Tex., to Austin March 10. He is a native of Houston and has had wide experience in the florists' business, at one time owning a firm at Dallas. He now owns a half interest in the Austin Floral Co.

No sooner had Mr. Daviss gone to Austin than he received an order for forty-two baskets, similar to the one shown in the illustration on this page. This the firm calls a "Pax" basket. It is made to carry on the arms of bridesmaids or supported on the shoulder by a strap of ribbon. In this case the bouquet is made of Butterfly and Sweetheart roses, valley and spray orchids, all gracefully tied with appropriate ribbon, in this case a pastel shade of metallic ribbon. These bouquets may be used with or without the shower.

Fifty baskets of a new style were recently purchased, but, when they were received, the firm found they would not do at all for its work. So Mr. Daviss took them to pieces, reduced the size and changed the shape of the framework, had the bottom boards reshaped at a planing mill, put the pieces together in a new way, refinished the baskets and used them for the attendants at the Anglers' dance to carry. The original intention was to have the baskets carried by a ribbon over the opposite shoulder, but the firm from whom the ribbon was ordered failed to send the proper club colors and the baskets had to be carried on the young ladies' arms. In this way the baskets are used at Austin weddings.

The firm is using this basket, without the showers, for table decorations in units of three baskets, the new shape making practically a circle when so used, and the effect being that of a mound of flowers growing from the center of the table. It is useful, also, for the mantel or a table against the wall.

TEXAS FLORISTS TO CONVENE.

At Dallas in July.

The date for the 1922 convention of the Texas State Florists' Association is rapidly approaching and the attention of everyone who may be interested in this convention is called to the fact that preparations are being made for a large number of trade exhibits and the largest attendance in the history of the organization. The dates for the convention are July 5 to 7, and all florists in Texas and other states who can be with us are urged to do so.

A considerable number of the leading supply houses and equipment manufacturers have already assured us that they will be on hand with large displays and others are expected to make their reservations within the next few weeks. All of those who have not reserved space for their exhibits are requested to do so as soon as possible, so that ample space may be provided for all who wish to exhibit their goods. Space will be furnished free to the exhibitors, but each one will be expected to stage his own exhibit and care for it throughout the convention.

Attendance Should Pay.

Those who have been making trade exhibits at our Texas conventions in the past have been well repaid by the business done, to say nothing of the profits derived from an advertising standpoint. Our members have been requested to withhold their orders for their supplies, for their fall and winter needs, until the convention dates, and to place their orders for their requirements with those in charge of the exhibits which will be there at that time. This custom has been quite largely observed by the members of the Texas State Florists' Association in the past and those who have done so have found that they can more nearly secure the goods they want, by reason of the fact that they have greater assortments to select from.

Invitation is extended to all supply houses, wholesalers, greenhouse manufacturers and any others who may have goods of any kind to offer to the florists' trade to be with us and especially are they urged to make exhibits of their goods at this meeting.

Louis J. Tackett, Sec'y.

SHERMAN, TEX.

There were excessive rains here last month; the winter was unusually warm, but the spring has been damp and cool. Flowers and plants, especially violets, were in abundance all winter. The holiday trade this year has been about twenty-five per cent better than that of a year ago and the Easter trade was about thirty per cent greater than that of last year. Outside roses have been in abundance. Easter lilies are in abundance and carnations are still good. Sweet peas grown outside, with long stems, are in good supply. Two wholesalers' prices for carnations one week before Mothers' day were 4 and 5 cents. One week later these same carnations were wholesaling at from 12 to 15 cents each. Such increases may go all right in a large city, but not in a city the size of this, thinks H. O. Hannah. Two merchants in this city advertised as follows: "Mothers' day, say it with candy, no advance in the price." "What shall the florists do?" asks H. O. Hannah. "Hold the price down to some extent or lose the fight?" Outgoing telegraph business, says Mr. Hannah, is growing rapidly, as are incoming orders also.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The Lancaster County Florists' Club held its monthly meeting May 18, at the office of W. B. Girvin, Leola, Pa. The county was blessed with a much-needed rain that day and the club attendance was not up to its usual par. President H. K. Rohrer presided.

An invitation from the Reading Florists' Club to attend its picnic in July was accepted with thanks. On motion by Elmer J. Weaver, the club will hold

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE AND WHY

VERNER J. DAVIS.

WHEN the Texas State Florists' Association assembled last year, at San Antonio, with its membership increased forty per cent over that of the year previous, its activities augmented proportionately and its ambitions for the future with all sails in the wind, the members realized the importance of electing a man to the presidency who could keep the pace intended. They succeeded. They elected as president Verner J. Davis, of the Greenwood Floral Co., Fort Worth. Mr. Davis has always been a live wire. In 1920, as president of the Fort Worth Florists' Association, he was the major influence back of the success of the big gathering at Fort Worth. At that time he was described as "the man behind the Texas florists' biggest convention." Mr. Davis has lived up to the Texans' expectations, and under his leadership the Texas association has flourished. At the coming Dallas convention, at which Mr. Davis will preside, reports of achievements are expected that will add to the bright name of the Lone Star state organization.

an automobile run to the Henry A. Dreer establishment, at Riverton, N. J., in June, the exact date to be announced later. The committee arranging the trip is composed of Elmer J. Weaver, A. K. Rohrer, B. F. Barr and Albert M. Herr. The club will also hold its annual picnic in August.

The club went on record as filing a protest against the exorbitant rates charged by the transportation companies, and forwarded the protest to John Young, secretary of the S. A. F.

The speaker of the evening was Professor Holdridge, of the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Department, who gave an exceptionally interesting talk on insect life and its relation to the florists' business. Many questions were asked and much valuable information was gained.

Two new members were elected.

Prior to the meeting, the greenhouses were inspected, most of which are planted to roses. One house is planted to Asparagus plumosus and several houses to ferns and miscellaneous stock. All were found in good condition.

Various Notes.

Peter and Mrs. Braun, pansy and geranium specialists, will sail for Europe in June.

The Iris Club held its annual spring flower show May 20, under the direction of Mrs. Albert M. Herr. The clubrooms were filled with tables of choice vases of flowers from the gardens of Lancaster county's lovers of flowers. The iris section surpassed anything of its kind ever attempted here before. The judges were Mrs. Martin Cumbler, of Harrisburg; Albert M. Herr and Harry K. Rohrer. Florists who sent complimentary exhibits were Charles B. Herr, Ira K. Landis, H. D. Rohrer Sons, Miss Carrie Steckman, Elmer J. Weaver, B. F. Barr, the Rosery and others. A special sweepstake prize, awarded by popular vote for any amateur's exhibit, consisted of a silver eup presented by the Lancaster County Florists' Club. The show was a grand success and a credit to the Iris Club. H. K. R.

The Market.

From all reports, Mothers' day exceeded all expectations; it is becoming a great rival to Easter, as far as dollars and cents are concerned. Monday and Tuesday after Mothers' day the demand was exceptionally good, and the wholesale houses cleaned up. Toward the middle of last week, however, the demand decreased and plenty of flowers were left over daily.

The supply of carnations, especially white, is in excess of the demand. Roses have been good and have cleared fairly well. American Beauty is not much in demand, except the shorter lengths.

Peonies are coming along nicely and are bringing fair prices. Snapdragons are plentiful, especially in the shorter lengths. Sweet peas are both good and bad, the majority being bad.

The demand for Easter and calla lilies continues heavy, although the production seems to be a little greater than the demand. Valley is on the market and is being sold at a fair price. Yellow daisies continue popular and are practically cleaned up each day, especially those with long stems. Iris is also to be had and moves out regularly. Paper White narcissi are now coming in, but the demand is limited. Indoor gladioli are in great demand, and southern gladioli are moving out readily.

Various Notes.

Frank M. Johnson and Arthur M. Anderson, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, were visitors in Pittsburgh Friday, May 19.

Mr. Allen, superintendent of the Homewood cemetery, is confined to his bed, due, no doubt, to a combination of the excessive work preceding Memorial day and the inclement weather.

T. W. Duggan, of the Dale Estate, Brampton, Ont., was a recent visitor.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. has let a contract to the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago, for three greenhouses, 21x170 feet each. They are pipe-frame houses. A contract has also been let for a complete hot water heating system. These new houses are to be used solely for the growing of orchids.

A new florists' establishment has been opened at 1710 Carson street by Kirk & Sweeney. Mr. Kirk was in business on the south side several years ago and is known to the trade. Mr. Sweeney is a new man in the business. H. J. H.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Louise C. Fields.

Mrs. Louise C. Fields, 53 years old, died at her home, Tenth street and Splitlog avenue, Kansas City, Kan., May 5. Her death was the climax of ten years' illness, the last two years of which she was perfectly helpless and suffered intensely all the time. The resignation with which she bore her suffering was typical of her fine character and was an inspiration to her family and friends.

Mrs. Fields was a native of Kentucky. About twenty-two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Fields moved to Kansas City, Kan. They bought a home with a large tract of ground at Tenth street and Splitlog avenue. Because she loved everything that was beautiful, she planted flowers and the place soon blossomed into a garden. In this she found so much pleasure that each year the garden was larger. Friends admired the flowers. Many were the bouquets that were given away, especially to the sick and unfortunate. Those who could afford to pay were willing to do so, and soon in a small way the home garden became a commercial venture. In 1906 a small greenhouse was built. Later other houses were added and L. C. Fields, the Tenth street florist, became one of the leading florists in Kansas City. Mr. Fields was associated with his wife in the business, but because she originated the idea, the firm was always in her name. As her family grew they, too, became interested in the work and she had the satisfaction of seeing her own efforts grow into something that now passes on to her children. Ten years ago, when Mrs. Fields' health failed, she was forced to retire and turn over the active management to her husband and son. Her home was so close to the greenhouses that she knew at all times what was being done. Until a day or two before her death, no large order was made up and no old customer called that Mrs. Fields was not told of it. She maintained her interest in everything that went on, and her splendid cheerfulness of spirit, to the last. It seemed peculiarly fitting that her death came so close to Mothers' day. Funeral services were held at the home, Saturday afternoon, May 6. Burial was in Mount Hope cemetery. Mrs. Fields is survived by her husband, Robert Fields, her son, Robert Fields, and two daughters, Mrs. Margaret Smith, Kansas City, Mo., and Mrs. Lucy Lennert, Kansas City, Kan. J. E. K.

Frank O'Reilly.

Frank O'Reilly, one of the oldest and most well known members of the florists' trade in Rhode Island, former member of the Pawtucket city council and tree warden of that city for more than a decade, died at his home, 94 Oak Hill avenue, Pawtucket, R. I., Friday afternoon, May 12, following an illness of only about twenty-four hours. Although not in good health for several years, Mr. O'Reilly regularly attended to the duties of tree warden.

Born in county Cavan, Ireland, in the early '40s of the last century, Mr. O'Reilly was apprenticed to a landscape gardener and florist. After completing his apprenticeship, he secured a position as an assistant gardener on a large estate in England, but after a few years, while still a young man, he came to this country and settled in Central Falls, R. I., where he engaged in business, but removed to Pawtucket about 1879. In Pawtucket he established a considerable range of greenhouses on the east side of the city; these he maintained until the time of his death. He was one of the early members of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island and maintained his membership until its discontinuance a few years ago. When the American Florists' Association held its annual convention in Providence, in 1894, Mr. O'Reilly was one of the most active workers in connection with the entertaining of the members.

Mr. O'Reilly took an active interest in politics and was for years prominent in city and state councils of the Democratic party. He represented the Fifth ward of Pawtucket in the common council from 1887 to 1890, inclusive, being president of the council in 1890 and alderman from that ward from 1891 to 1894, inclusive.

He is survived by his wife and three sons, one of whom, Frank O'Reilly, Jr., was associated with him in the business. W. H. M.

H. H. Meeker.

H. H. Meeker, one of the oldest citizens of Crown Point, Ind., and long a nurseryman, died quite suddenly while at his noonday meal Saturday, May 6.

Mr. Meeker was a remarkable man for one of his years, being 88 years of age. He was active and attended to his nursery business up until the time of his death.

He is survived by three daughters. The funeral was held Monday afternoon, May 8, from the home.

Frank F. Benthley.

Once more, in the passing of Frank F. Benthley, Chicago has lost its oldest florist. Mr. Benthley, who died May 21, at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. L. C. Coatesworth, 4310 North Hermitage avenue, was 71 years of age. He retired from active business only about a year ago, after having spent half a century in the trade. His recollections went back almost to the beginning of commercial floriculture in Chicago and he took an active part in the development of the Chicago wholesale market, having at various times been connected with many of the pioneer firms. Some twenty years ago, associated with his son-in-law, L. C. Coatesworth, Mr. Benthley built a range of glass at Newcastle, Ind., which was a model of up-to-dateness for that day. The Benthley-Coatesworth Co. at that time operated a wholesale store at 30 East Randolph street, in Chicago, and for some years the establishment was a leader in the trade. After Mr. Coatesworth retired from the business the wholesale store was closed and the greenhouses were conducted by one of Mr. Benthley's sons, Frederick E. Benthley, who not long since sold the establishment to Forest H. Meek.

Mr. Benthley was one of the charter members of the Chicago Florists' Club and was its second president, having occupied the chair in 1887. Subsequently he continued active in the affairs of the club and served for many years as a trustee. He leaves ten children, four sons and six daughters. The funeral was held on the afternoon of May 23 from the residence of Mrs. Coatesworth, with interment at Rosehill, beside his wife, Lulu Lee Benthey, who predeceased him. The pallbearers all were members of the trade and acquaintances of many years' standing—A. T. Pyfer, H. B. Kennicott, A. Lange, H. N. Bruns, John Degnon and T. E. Waters. There were many flowers to attest the high esteem in which the deceased was held by all who knew him.

John Gollan.

The Review has lost one of its oldest subscribers in the death of John Gollan, of Downers Grove, Ill. The office records show that he had been a subscriber without interruption for more than twenty years. Mr. Gollan also was one of the original stockholders of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, to which his establishment shipped Sprenger and snapdragons, a part of the cut also being handled by Erne & Co., as successors to E. H. Hunt, to whom the old firm of Gollan & Wolf shipped for many years.

Mr. Gollan was about 63 years of age. Always an active worker, he was busy about his greenhouses to within a few days of his death, which occurred May 20, as the result of pneumonia. Mr. Gollan is survived by two sons and a daughter.

Max Ringier.

Max Ringier, for many years a well known figure on the Chicago market, died May 16 after a breakdown which had caused him to drop from sight some months ago. The deceased was a native of Switzerland and a brother of the late Arnold Ringier. He had at various times been in the employment of well-known Chicago wholesale houses, his last connection having been with A. L. Vaughan & Co. He is survived by his widow and several children.

John Loeser.

John Loeser, a popular salesman for the Joseph Foerster Co., Chicago, died May 17 most unexpectedly as the result of an attack of pneumonia. His first appearance in the Chicago market was as a telegraph messenger boy, his obliging and energetic disposition soon earning him a permanent place in the trade. As a salesman for the Foerster concern he ranked as one of the best in the Chicago market. The funeral was held May 20 and there were many flowers. Mr. Loeser is survived by a wife and daughter.

Thomas Hicks.

Thomas Hicks, in the florists' business for many years on Owaseo street, Auburn, N. Y., died May 10, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charles A. Pace, 154 Owaseo road. He was 85 years of age. The deceased is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Charles A. Pace and Mrs. Thomas Adams, and one son, Walton T. Hicks.

Mrs. George H. Tyler.

Mrs. George H. Tyler, of Los Gatos, Cal., died suddenly a few days ago, while spending the summer at Santa Cruz. The young woman was the widow of George H. Tyler, the Los Gatos florist, who died last summer of pneumonia, after overworking in the heat to build a swimming pool for the boys of the neighborhood. The couple left no relatives in this country and cables have been sent to relatives in Australia, who are coming to settle up the estate.

Nelson F. France.

Nelson F. France, 77 years of age, a Civil war veteran and a senior member of the firm of France & Vandegrift, of Monroe, Mich., passed away at his home Monday evening, May 15, after a lingering illness.

Mr. France was an esteemed citizen. He served during the Civil war in the Seventy-ninth regiment of New York and was a member of the Joseph R. Smith post of the G. A. R.

The funeral was held from the family residence Wednesday afternoon, May 17. There were many floral offerings.

WILL FOLLOW HIS FATHER.

When F. B. Patterson, president of the National Cash Register Co. and son of the late John H. Patterson, was asked as to his future plans, he firmly stated that he fully expects to devote his life to advancing and carrying out the ideals which were established by his father. He said:

"The policies which have developed our business from a one-room factory to an organization employing more than 10,000 people in all parts of the world will be continued. I also will devote a portion of my time to promoting all uplifting activities in this community. I am especially interested in the progress of Dayton and will do all within my power to further community betterment, welfare work, and anything that will help improve the conditions under which we live."

The children's gardens and civic beautification work at Dayton was one of the achievements of which the late John H. Patterson was most proud.

AN INSPIRED AD WRITER.

Under the heading of "Newport's Delirious Florist," the following advertisement from the Newport, R. I., Herald is going the rounds of the eastern papers:

For Sale—Hundred thousand more Sunset Pansy plants than last year. We live so near Atlantic ocean and the beautiful Narragansett bay, the electricity in capers is creeping out of the bay. First it stops in Alex MacLellan's nursery; that's the reason his trees grow so glossy, tall and square. Everybody should buy one or two to plant them on the lawn or yard. They soon will grow to the moon and then you can climb to the top of the tree and see Elijah pass in space in his chariot, and if it happens you should tumble down you will come right in the middle of my pansy bed; the eagles will sing and play the harp and cornet—the public is invited to see my pansties now; the best in town at A. Brandt's, Van Zandt avenue.

GROWING CALENDULAS.

Kindly advise me how and when to plant calendula seed in order to have flowers Thanksgiving day.

T. D. S.—Pa.

The seed is sown as early as July 1 for the main crop. The seeds should be placed twelve or fourteen inches apart in a rich, deep soil, and a temperature of about 50 degrees should be maintained. For fertilizer any balanced manure will serve the purpose. Early-sown calendulas have been grown until Christmas in a north bench almost completely shaded by sweet peas. The only requirements are two feet of head room and a deep solid or ground bed. A raised bench will grow good flowers, but does not produce the strong growth required for long stems unless strong forcing is resorted to.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

COLLECT the bills for holiday sales before they get cold.

MEMORIAL day will bring heavy business, it is anticipated. Then a long wait till the next big trade day. But don't wait; push sales every day.

WHO wished carnations on mother? Ninety-nine women out of 100 will choose roses if you give them the run of a flower shop. It is usually a man who picks carnations.

MOST business men have legitimate need to borrow money occasionally, but it is a mistake to conduct business expansion too largely with borrowed capital. It is wiser to earn the money before it is spent.

BEDDING stock of best quality is none too plentiful at this time, when planting is just getting under way in many places. Unfavorable weather has delayed it to a considerably later date than usual.

HERE'S a hint for the local coöperative publicity organizations or florists' clubs: Get some of your best talkers to give radio-phone addresses on seasonable flower topics from the broadcasting station in your city.

THERE are evidences of a gradual slowing up in the payment of bills, notably in the cases of florists who do not make special effort to collect accounts when they are due. In order to keep one's own record good, it is necessary to make others pay promptly.

HAVING benefited the S. A. F. and the growers' organization by his extensive tour of the west, J. F. Ammann is starting this week on a missionary trip among the retailers, covering the southern states as field manager of the F. T. D. Mr. Ammann still holds his office as executive secretary of the National Flower Growers' Association.

MORE would be done to dispel the idea that the carnation is the "official" flower for Mothers' day if the sketches of carnation blooms were omitted from florists' advertisements at this holiday. It is a queer freak that nine-tenths of the advertisements in which florists declare that the carnation is not the only flower with which the day may be observed, include a sketch of three or four carnations in a prominent place.

REPORTS of this Mothers' day business, on page 68 and following, contain some suggestions for bettering the holiday's trade next year.

DON'T let summer creep upon you with your ledger full of uncollected accounts. Spring flowers are long dead when the vacationists return in autumn.

CORRESPONDENTS and advertisers are asked to send copy for next week's issue one day early, so that The Review may be put in the mail at the usual time. The holiday, May 30, makes it necessary to advance the printers' schedule one day.

WONDER if they got the example from our F. H. B.? "As a quarantine measure against agricultural pests," reads a dispatch, "the Peruvian government has prohibited the importation of cotton seed into that country. This prohibition will be strictly enforced."

PERHAPS SOME READER CAN.

"Can you tell me where I can get a pair of pruning shears which has two cutting blades instead of the usual one cutting blade?"

AFTER MOTHERS' DAY.

From reports regarding Mothers' day this year, two lessons appear conspicuous. One is that merchants in other lines of business are somewhat envious of the way in which florists have cornered practically all the business occasioned by the holiday, and the candy men, in particular, will not be slow to take advantage of an opportunity to divert some of our business to themselves by pressing the charges of profiteering which crop up annually. Miss Anna Jarvis is no longer much listened to by the newspaper editors, but the candy merchants who use extensive advertising space are able to make their influence felt when there appears just provocation.

The other lesson is that the carnation must be put still farther into the background at this day, since it is on this flower that the charges of profiteering are, in almost every instance, based. We must seek to remove the idea that the carnation is mother's favorite flower—which was never the case, since nearly every woman will choose a rose, while a man picks a carnation—and make the observance of the day cover any and all flowers alike.

The attitude of the public press is indicated by the following paragraph, which appeared in a column of comment on the back page of the Chicago Evening American, May 18:

PROFITEERING ON MOTHERS' CARNATIONS.

If certain florists profiteer again on flowers as they did last Sunday, we molders of public sentiment may start a move to have Mothers' day observed with candy rather than flowers. We are slow to protest on prices, but when mothers' carnations are marked up to $2.50 per dozen we throw away the horn and reach for a brick.

If we take to heart the two lessons above noted, we shall not be called upon to dodge bricks.

HOW ABOUT YOUR HANDS?

Perhaps you remember about the little boy who came to school with hands and face that looked as though he had collected all the dirt on the street? The teacher said to him, "Ben, hold up your hand!" And Ben obediently raised one hand high in the air, stuffing the other under the desk meanwhile.

After lecturing him on the glories of cleanliness until his uplifted arm was like to drop off, she said to him:

"Now if you can find a dirtier hand than that in the room, I won't send you home to wash yours."

Whereupon Ben pulled his other hand from under the desk, raised it and won the argument.

Undoubtedly there is a greenhouse dirtier than yours, unless it is excessively ill kept, but customers' association of cleanliness with flowers, not to speak of the freedom of your plants from insects and disease, requires that even the slight untidiness apparent in your establishment be remedied. We can't be too scrupulous about it, in store or greenhouse.

SELLING MORE FLOWERS.

The florists' trade has advanced rapidly in the last half-dozen years, so rapidly that, for various causes, it is coming more and more into the public's notice. In the last year and a half merchants in other lines of business have regarded us with unusual attention, because sales of flowers kept up at profitable prices when other merchandise was gathering dust on the shelves.

Undoubtedly one of the most potent factors in this advance of the trade to the limelight has been its collective advertising. Much has been said about the influence of our slogan, but its greatest power lay in making advertisers out of florists who had never used printers' ink before. The local coöperative campaigns have had a notable influence also, both in the effects they themselves have produced on the public and in their stimulation of individual retailers to more extensive use of newspaper space.

Some recognition of this progress on the part of florists was made in a Chicago newspaper last week in the following paragraph:

ADVERTISING BRINGS PROSPERITY.

Florists tell me the people are buying more flowers now than ever. It is the result of advertising. Trade advertising, mass advertising, is as important as individual advertising. Each line of business should have its own publicity bureau, its own central agency, which should be working to secure favor and prosperity for that whole line of trade.

"THANK YOU."

One of the pleasant features of publishing The Review is that so many advertisers in paying bills add some word of appreciation for the service rendered. Usually it is the seller who says "Thank you" when the money passes; readers will agree that in their business experience it is quite unusual for the buyer to say "Thank you" when he pays. But it is a daily occurrence with Review patrons. Like this:

Enclosed find check to cover April invoice. I am sold out, thank you, so please cancel ad and send bill to date.—H. E. Meader, Dover, N. H., May 15, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

BRIEF ANSWERS.

S. W., O.—Pack well and send to this office.

H. H. K., Tex.—Selaginella Emmeliana.

P. M. G., Ill.—You have a heavy infestation of chrysanthemum midge. Measures for its extermination have been given lately in The Review.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

In the week following Mothers' day the market was only moderately active. As frequently occurs, the week started fairly well and ended briskly, with a couple of dull days between. Early in the week the receipts of greenhouse flowers were light, but the market was deluged with peonies from southern Indiana, Illinois and Missouri. These shipments ended abruptly and then the market began to pick up. There were no heavy cuts of roses or carnations and a moderate demand served to keep the market fairly clean. Prices were not high, but they were not low for the season.

The present week started with the dulllest Monday the market has experienced in many months. Apparently without explanation, the shipping demand fell away to small proportions. The only thing that saved the market was an unusually active city trade, largely occasioned by a heavy run of funeral work.

The peony occupies the leading place at present. It has been said that no two seasons are exactly alike as regards the peony and certainly this season is different from any other. It seems not to be a good season for anyone. Those who had planted in the south, for an early crop, cut practically nothing. The Tennessee crop was extremely light. A heat wave hit the Evansville growers just at the critical time and the season there was the shortest ever known. Practically all the buds popped open within a space of five days, where the season frequently covers two weeks. The flowers opened so fast they could not be cut and bunched with the usual care and in the usual condition. The result has been that a great deal of the southern Indiana crop was unfit for storage. This has been particularly true of festiva maxima, the flowers of which fell when they were taken from the boxes here. The Illinois and Missouri peonies were cut under somewhat similar hasty conditions, but these growers never used festiva maxima to the extent that the Evansville growers have. The quantity of peonies in storage for Memorial day is not large. None of the cuts have been of usual size and the condition of the stock on arrival here has made immediate sale advisable. Unless the local peonies are ready, which does not often happen, there will not be large supplies for Memorial day. The first cut at Onarga was made May 20.

The principal interest at present centers on Memorial day. A satisfactory number of orders has been received and the file is growing with every mail. Most of the wholesalers say they have received a greater number of orders than were on file at a corresponding date last year, but some of them indicate that the orders are not so large as they thought they were going to be. However, there seems little doubt that the demand will equal the supply of stock unless another heat wave should be encountered within the next few days. Stock is much better than it was at Mothers' day.

The shipping for Memorial day will begin May 26, but Sunday, May 28, will be the big day. The market will be open as on any other day, not only all day Sunday, but as far into the night as conditions require.

Growers' Meeting.

The after-effects of Mothers' day and a spring rain cut down the attendance at the regular meeting of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago, at the Hotel Randolph, Thursday evening, May 18. It was an interesting meeting, nevertheless. One of the features was provided by Charles H. Porter, who, as representative of the Allied Florists' Association, has been responsible for the large amount of publicity which flowers have had on the reading and pictorial pages of the Chicago newspapers in the last three months. Mr. Porter gave a report on Mothers' day newspaper publicity, which was substantially that delivered to the directors of the Allied Florists' Association and printed in The Review last week. He told of his strenuous fight to keep adverse propaganda out of the newspapers before Mothers' day, a vastly harder job than getting favorable propaganda in, and described the proceedings of the aldermanic high cost committee which led to the publication of the "fair price list" on flowers in the Chicago papers the day before Mothers' day. Mr. Porter mentioned a number of plans for stimulating interest in Mothers' day, which could not be carried out in the short time his service covered this year, but which may be used with beneficial results next year.

In the discussion regarding the Mothers' day market which followed this report, the growers of various flowers showed how fortunate had been the occurrence of the holiday this year. It turned a glutted market into a profitable one for most of the growers. Some indications of what happened will be seen from such statements as that jonquils which were worth nothing the week before sold for as high as 4 to 8 cents for Mothers' day; sweet peas which were thrown into the ash can the first part of the week moved out at quite satisfactory prices the latter half, and roses which were bringing returns close to unprofitable moved high enough to give growers a most satisfactory average. For comparison with conditions a year ago, it may be stated that some rose growers cut twice as many flowers as they did in the same week in 1921, though they got about the same returns in cash, while sweet pea growers picked fifty per cent more blooms than in the same week a year ago, though their returns averaged one-third of what they got in 1921; in other words, they furnished half again as many flowers as they did last year and got about half the number of dollars they did twelve months ago.

Another occurrence of interest at the meeting was the appearance of H. W. Logsdon, an insurance broker, who showed the growers how, by united effort, they might obtain a material reduction in their fire insurance rates from the local board of underwriters, so that it would be feasible for them to carry such insurance. The present rates, he stated, established years ago, are not warranted by the low loss ratio. Upon the accumulation of the necessary facts for presentation to the board of underwriters, he thought the organization would be able to secure a much lower rate, as the woodworkers, laundrymen, lumber yards and others have done. Upon motion made by Joseph Kohout and seconded by Andrew Benson, President Peter Pearson appointed a committee to inquire into the possibilities of Mr. Logsdon's plan and to gather the necessary information for the reduction of fire insurance rates. The committee named consists of Joseph Kohout, George J. Ball and Henry D. Neve.

A communication was read from J. F. Ammann, giving for growers' information the name and address of the secretary of the Florists' Hail Association of America. Apparently too few members of the trade are acquainted with the fact that this strongly organized florists' mutual organization is always ready to serve them through the secretary, John G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J.

Another communication from Mr. Ammann asked for an expression of opinion on quarantine 37 which would enable the officers of the National Flower Growers' Association to declare the position of that organization when called upon to do so. Some discussion of the subject made it plain that opinion differed widely, and it was decided to lay the matter on the table for fuller inquiry at a later meeting.

Since the next meeting, Thursday evening, June 15, will be the annual meeting of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago, it has already been planned to hold a banquet and invite the ladies to be present. As a committee of arrangements for that evening, President Pearson appointed Otto Amling, Andrew Benson and Rudolph Ellsworth.

Wholesalers' Session.

The Chicago Wholesale Cut Flower Association held its annual meeting at the dinner table at the Sherman House, Thursday evening, May 18, President Klingsporn in the chair. At the April meeting C. J. Michelsen, though absent, had been nominated for president. He stated that it was his understanding that Eric Johnson was to be advanced from the vice-presidency, which he has held for a year, and withdrew in Mr. Johnson's favor, making the election unanimous. A. T. Pyfer was elected vice-president to succeed Mr. Johnson. Treasurer Schupp and Secretary Kohlbrand were reelected. C. J. Michelsen, Eric Johnson and Paul R. Klingsporn were named as the wholesalers' representatives on the board of the Allied Florists' Association.

The committee, consisting of C. J. Michelsen, P. C. Schupp and Eric Johnson, appointed to investigate the credit and collection system used by New York wholesale florists and to prepare a plan for such a system in Chicago, reported progress. President Klingsporn reported on a similar system employed by wholesale milliners in Chicago. It was the unanimous view that some such plan should be put into operation here and a further report was requested for the June meeting. Probably the first step to be taken will be to consolidate the past-due accounts of all the wholesale houses, thus showing how much each debtor owes on this market.

Bedding Out.

This is a busy week for all those who sell bedding stock. The public wants bedding work done before Memorial day, but this year practically nothing had been done May 22, as the weather had been unfavorable. The parks had planted nothing until this week. First-class bedding stock is not plentiful. There doubtless will be enough in late June, but now most of the stock is small and good geraniums in bloom are hard to find. Also, petunias are having a run for window boxes and the supply at present is short of the demand; planters are scouting among the growers to find petunias, preferably pink, showing bloom.

The A. B. C. Picnic.

American Bulb Co. employees and their wives and sweethearts to the number of fifty couples were piloted by Secretary Albert Kochler, via automobile, to Morton Grove, May 21, the guests for the day of Mr. and Mrs. Guy French. After a bountiful repast, various games were indulged in, followed by a ladies' beauty contest, judged by Coroner Peter M. Hoffman, who is candidate for sheriff. After holding a "post-mortem," Mr. Hoffman was unable to choose a winner from the galaxy of beauty in attendance and therefore declared a draw, presenting a box of Rosie's famous Morton Grove marshmallows to each lady, the same being toasted on an old-fashioned bonfire in the forest preserve, which closely adjoins the French residence. An added feature was a Coney Island wienerwurst eating contest between traveling representatives of the firm, French, Rosnosky, Neil, Neilson and Degnan. "Ros" won by three links. A well sunburned party motored back to Chicago after voting the French family royal hosts and having enjoyed the time of their young lives.

Frank Oechslin's Fire.

At about 5 a. m., May 20, fire was discovered in the sheds at Frank Oechslin's establishment in Harlem. City fire fighting apparatus from three stations responded to the alarm, but was unable to render effective assistance because of the distance to city water. The fire soon put the greenhouse pumping apparatus out of commission. The packing shed and boiler room were completely destroyed. The adjoining greenhouse runs parallel to the service buildings and about half this greenhouse was destroyed. The second house also suffered considerably. The stock in these houses was largely ferns in the finest of shape and ready for market. This stock was badly damaged, but stock in the other houses was not injured. This range is the one at which Mr. Oechslein is building several new houses. These were not damaged, but much new equipment which was being installed in the service building will have to be replaced. There were new pumps just put into operation and a new motor which had never been run. Including the loss on stock, the damage may run from $25,000 to $35,000.

Various Notes.

A. J. Zeeh calls attention that there will be no regular delivery of mail in the market from Saturday noon to Monday morning and that in the interval the greater part of the Memorial day shipping will be done. He says that those who use the mail on orders to reach this city later than Friday will do well to employ special delivery stamps; otherwise it is far safer to telegraph or telephone.
The George Wittbold Co. has decided to discontinue greenhouse operations at the old stand in Chicago. Shortly after Memorial day the stock remaining in the greenhouses on North Halsted street will be removed to the Edgebrook establishment, where all plant growing and shipping operations will be conducted in the future. that rose's first year are being thrown out at the greenhouses of the A. F. Amling Co., at Maywood, and are being replaced partly with Columbia and partly with Premier, the latter being of the company's own grafting. The work of replacement, which involves about 90,000 plants, is expected to be completed by the end of this month. The store which bears the name of the University Florist, at 6302 University avenue, is to be closed at the end of the month. The icebox has been sold.

In spite of increasing competition of the kind that keeps open evenings and Sundays, the E. Wienhoeber Co., on Elm street, pursues the even tenor of its way. The store does not open on the Sabbath and the curtains are down. The Wienhoeber service has been consistently of the highest class for such a number of years that new stores in the neighborhood draw little from the Wienhoeber clientele, but find success in the rapidly increasing population of the near north side.

Five steel-frame houses, 31x100, three lean-to houses, one 12x80, one 12x92 and one 12x167, also one flat-rafter conservatory, 20x55, with vestibule entrance, are to be built for the Forest Home cemetery, in Forest Park, by the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. All these houses are steel-frame and represent the most modern construction.

home to St. Joseph, Mo., from Boston, where Mr. Stuppy had undergone a second surgical operation. High hopes now are entertained for his complete recovery.

Ove. Gnatt, of La Porte, Ind., was at his Chicago office May 22. He said that the morning mail at La Porte brought the biggest run of mail orders in the history of his company and that business for Memorial day promises to exceed all previous records. Mr. Gnatt was recently in the east and considers the florists' business there as distinctly on the up-grade.

Jacob Dietrich, well known in the Los Angeles section, who sold his establishment to Roy F. Wilcox, passed through Chicago last week on his way to Germany. He was here just long enough to eat three meals, one with C. L. Washburn, one with H. N. Bruns and one with Frank Oechslin.

Among last week's visitors was Dave Hill, of Pittsburgh, who has the reputation of doing a larger business per square foot of store space than any other retail florist in America. Mr. Hill has been a heavy buyer in Chicago for several years, but this was his first visit to this market and he enjoyed it thoroughly.

M. H. Lockyear, of Evansville, Ind., spent May 22 in the market. Not only is he a considerable buyer here, but last week he shipped a cut of peonies to be sold on this market. As with other Evansville growers, he said his flowers opened so rapidly that it was impossible to handle them all and the shipments, therefore, were less than usual. He thinks festiva maxima will be dropped by the Evansville growers.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The last week in May began well and closed well, with a dull three days between. The stocks were exhausted on Mothers' day and had to be replenished on Monday, while the May processions in the churches on the following Sabbath explained some of the activity at the close of the week. For these processions all kinds of flowers are used at a low price.

Peonies are coming forward as the leading flower. Southern peonies are still coming in strongly, but the local peonies have commenced and they are so fine that every peony buyer wants them. The southern peonies are good, but they come from a warmer climate; they are travel-worn and there is no comparison with the superb local stock, aided by the unusually cool weather during the bud-developing stage. So far this market is taking the entire production, both southern and local, at fair prices.

Roses are in fine form for the season; they are selling pretty well for the season; prices are lower than they were one year ago. Carnations have hardly recovered from last week's excitement. Prices are back to normal, with the deep colors in the lead. Quality is absolutely necessary to effect sales. Sweet peas are in many cases unsatisfactory. They don't keep. The frame-grown outdoor stock is all right. It is fragrant and durable. So, to a lesser extent, is some of the indoor stock, but much of the latter is of little value. Easter lilies are at last recovering their poise. The supply is smaller; prices are better. Callas and snapdragons are nearly over. Delphinium and double cornflowers are popular. There are some stocks, candytuft and lupines. Beauties and orchids are in light supply; valley is dull. There is some outdoor valley from the north. Darwin tulips closed their season poorly.

For Memorial Day.

The prospects are bright for a good supply of flowers for Memorial day. The local peonies will be in full crop and they promise to be fine. The late frost here ruined the peony buds in some places, but this will not be noticed in the general market, so heavy will be the supply. There will be a fair cut of carnations and a heavy cut of roses. Other flowers will be in light supply. The supply of geraniums in bloom is likely to fall far short of the demand.

week from Bernard Eschner, president of the M. Rice Co., written in Berlin under date of May 4, gives a startling picture of working conditions in Germany. Mr. Eschner writes that the day he went to a large factory to give an order the workmen went on a strike for higher pay; that they attacked the factory and smashed the windows with stones; that they had already received two large advances in their pay this spring; that they are paid in marks; that the mark is of uncertain value inside Germany and of little value outside of Germany; that thrift is going; there is no advantage in saving, so everything is spent. Mr. Eschner fears that "efficiency is going."

Lilium Multiflorum Nobile.

A good deal of interest has been aroused by this showy Easter lily. It is exceedingly handsome and naturally the growers want to know whether it is a good thing.

Joseph Goetter, of Lansdowne, grew some of these lilies for Easter and grew them skillfully. They were magnificent, but they are too soft. Mr. Goetter says that if there was no other variety of lilies to be had, he would not grow Lilium multiflorum nobile.

Carnations in Tennessee.

Robert Q. Shoeh has just returned to the city from the south. He attended the Florida state convention, at Lakeland, and then spent Mothers' day at Knoxville, Tenn. There, in honor of his mother he wore a white carnation in the lapel of his coat Sunday, May 14. Three white carnations for two friends and self cost R. Q. S. just 30 cents; 10 cents apiece.

The point of this story lies in the history of those white carnations. Somewhere about the end of March the carnation plants from which those flowers had been cut were let loose. They were allowed to run wild. They were not disbudded. The plants produced a great crop of short-stemmed blooms. These were picked early in May, packed dry in small pasteboard boxes, 1,000 to a box, and put in cold storage in a temperature of 37 degrees. They came out of cold storage in fine condition and, Mr. Shoeh says, were most satisfactory. Why can't we do it here?

Mr. Shoeh's story was submitted to a few of our leading wholesalers. John Berger said, "There is nothing like a perfectly fresh carnation." George Aeugle said, "We have tried it; it won't do." Loyd Reid said, "That sort of thing will do for the street; the stores want good flowers."

After the Battle.

The facts regarding the popularity of flowers on Mothers' day, the second Sunday in May, appear to be, briefly stated, as follows: The use of flowers is increasing. It did not increase in proportion to the effort made to interest the people, but that will come with continued effort. The white carnation is still looked upon by many people as the flower for the day. The retailers are making intelligent effort to change this idea.

The market was better supplied than usual with flowers in general. This was partly due to the arrival of southern peonies and southern irises. Prices, except on carnations, were lower than last year. The retailers, as a body, did better than they ever did before on this day.

Various Notes.

Edwin J. Fancourt, chairman of the essay committee, says that unless something unforeseen prevents, the mayor will address the Florists' Club Tuesday evening, June 6, in the Adelphia.

Robert Craig returned from Porto Rico Sunday afternoon, May 14. Mr. Craig says that the season has not been so favorable to growth as it was last year.

William Warner Harper received the students and friends of the Women's Horticultural College, of Ambler, at his

OUR NEW STORE AND GREENHOUSES AT 600 HARLEM AVENUE, OAK PARK, ILL., A RESIDENTIAL SUBURB OF CHICAGO

FOR SALE

A place in one of the finest suburbs of Chicago that can safely be called one of the best establishments in the country doing a retail and wholesale florists' business; a sound, successful business that has thrived for forty years, serving a high-class retail trade and doing wholesale business with Chicago's leading florists; everything new and in best of condition, the entire place having been rebuilt recently and new equipment installed; there are eight new and modern Moninger iron-frame greenhouses covering 30,000 square feet, equipped with a new heating plant and devoted to a general line of pot plants; the spacious store at the greenhouses is equipped along modern lines with new fixtures and is connected to the greenhouses by a large, well arranged service building; at the rear of the range is a fine 10-room residence and a heated garage big enough for six cars; there are three motor trucks and all other necessary equipment; in addition there are thirteen 50-foot city lots next to the store and greenhouses; another store is operated on Lake Street, the main business street of the suburb; not far from several very large cemeteries; there are steam railroads, Chicago elevated railroads and trolley lines and many other things that make for an ideal location; the amount of business that can be done is limited only by production, for there is a ready market for all that could be produced in a place two or three times as large.

ALL ABOUT MOTHERS' DAY

SAVING MOTHERS' DAY.

Cutting the Carnation Demand.

So much has been said regarding the prices of flowers for Mothers' day and regarding the use of the carnation for that day that I desire to say something that might help us hold on to Mothers' day as one of the big flower days, since it is feared that the profiteering that is going on in different sections of the country will eventually have the effect of killing this occasion, first in one section, then in another, until after a while it will eventually reach this state.

As my firm, the Idle Hour Nurseries, grows flowers, I know that we are not put to any extra expense, as we are at Christmas time, to get up a stock that will meet the demand for Mothers' day. We know it does not cost us one cent more to grow a flower that sells for 15 cents the week before and the week after Mothers' day. Then, where do we get the right to run the price up in the night and advertise to the world at large that we are a set of robbers?

Gladioli Did It.

Last year we sold for Mothers' day about a thousand gladioli at $3 per dozen. This year we decided we should campaign against the use of the carnation as the only flower suitable for Mothers' day; so we cut the price of gladioli to $1.50 per dozen, which is the price we have been charging for carnations, and we disposed of over 10,000 of them. In addition, we pushed plants for all we were worth, and our efforts along that line were most successful.

Carnations were sold at the holiday for $1.50 per dozen, which was the price asked the week before and the week after Mothers' day. What carnations we had left, after picking them over, we relieved of stems and put on our counter in the store Sunday morning along with other short-stemmed flowers for boutonnieres, and they were bought for 10 cents each. I use the word "bought" because we told the customers we were not selling them, but that they were buying them.

Worked at Macon, Ga.

In preparation for our campaign against carnations at Mothers' day, we sent out this "Special Notice" on our letterhead April 26:

Owing to the mild winter we have had this season, we find Carnations are getting softer this year earlier than heretofore and are therefore hard to ship to arrive in good condition.

To meet this condition, we have decided to cut the price of our Gladioli to the price of Carnations; namely, $1.50 per dozen.

The Gladiolus is the Queen of all Spring and Summer flowers, and we are prepared to furnish them from now on till the close of Summer.

Push Gladioli for Mothers' day—Sunday, May 14th.

They will be extra fine and gorgeous by that time.

Then, May 2, we sent the following circular letter to our agents to emphasize the matter:

We note in looking over our records that you sent us quite a few orders for carnations to be shipped you last year for Mothers' day.

Mothers' day this year comes on Sunday, May 14, and as we notified you a few days ago, Carnations are getting smaller and softer every day, which is attributable to weather conditions we had this winter.

We therefore urge you once more to please urge your customers to take Gladioli, which we can ship to arrive in good condition, and which we are confident will please and satisfy your trade.

Price per dozen, $1.50.

Will appreciate early orders.

For our customers we got up an attractive folder in colors, which carried this suggestion as its heading, "Make Home Beautiful for Mother with Spring Flowers," and this message:

Instead of a few loose blossoms, add a touch of fresh Spring Beauty to the home by letting us send her fifty or a hundred plants for the porch box or the garden.

These she can cherish, watch and care for all spring and summer.

Special price, 75 cents per dozen; $5 per hundred. Fifty at hundred rate.

Then followed a list of suitable plants, such as ageratums, coleus, salvias, verbenas, sweet alyssum, heliotropes, petunias, zinnias, snapdragons, sultanas, calendulas and feverfew.

We handled more orders this Mothers' day than we have ever handled at the attention of the public from carnations to other flowers.

"Supply and demand govern the prices of flowers the same as it does in all other commodities," read the advertisement. "Due to the extraordinary demand for carnations in previous years for Mothers' day, the price on them has soared accordingly. But why should only carnations be used to honor Mother? Her favorite flower would be much more appropriate to send her, but if you do not know her favorite flower an assortment of flowers."

A special Mothers' day box was advertised at $2, "to dispel from the minds of customers that prices on all flowers are unjustly advanced on Mothers' day." The usual Saturday special dollar box of cut flowers was also offered the day before Mothers' day.

AT CHITTENANGO, N. Y.

Advertising copy which pulled business this year at Mothers' day seems to have been that which put down in black and white the fact that prices of flowers and plants would not be increased for the occasion. This is easily understood, for a customer who has his fingers burned once is not apt to take hold of the iron rod a second time without first making certain that it is perfectly cold. A small advertisement inserted in the local paper and carrying a reassurance that the supply of flowers and plants was ample and that no increase in the price of these would be made for Mothers' day proved its worth for A. R. Ellis, of Chittenango, N. Y. Mr. Ellis said that he had never sold so many plants and flowers in the history of his business as he did this year at Mothers' day. People came sixteen miles from the city and from other towns to take advantage of the stock he had to offer. "Made my first sale Saturday morning about 6 a. m., May 13, and the last sale got me out of bed at 10:30 p. m.," said Mr. Ellis.

ALBANY, N. Y.

Several of the florists of Albany, N. Y., ran the American Legion advertisement supplied by the S. A. F. publicity committee in the local newspapers, so that it appeared almost every day during the ten days preceding Mothers' day. The other advertising was liberal and most effective, and the sales for the holiday reached a high mark.

After working at it for more than five years, the Albany florists have at last succeeded in getting the public away from the idea that the white carnation is the only flower for Mothers' day. William C. Gloeckner reports that he sold more pink and red carnations than he did white ones. He sold 1,000 pink roses and only fifty white ones. He held prices on both roses and carnations at $3 a dozen and consequently met few complaints as to prices. Sweet peas also sold well at reasonable prices.

The manager of a local hotel placed a hand-painted card, bearing a carnation and an appropriate verse, in each

Must Obey Economic Law.

The fellow who runs his prices up not only loses the increased revenue he seeks, but drives away normal trade and makes a world of enemies who stand ready to retaliate. Students of economy will tell you that a price can be fixed on a commodity or a service so high as actually to reduce instead of increase the amount of revenue. The law of diminishing returns applies whenever we fix the price of a commodity so high that it drives away trade.

Dan C. Horgan.

SOFT-PEDALING CARNATIONS.

The Golden Rule department store, in St. Paul, Minn., contains an enterprising flower department on the main floor. This department ran a special advertisement in the local papers just before Mothers' day, in which was made the best effort yet noted to turn

TAMPA, FLA.

According to William A. Knull, of the Knull Floral Co., Mothers' day is getting better and bigger each year in Tampa, and it has been so ever since the day came into existence. This firm is pushing its advertising a little more strongly each year, and this year the advertising campaign of this firm consisted of about 300 inches of display advertisements in the local papers and then a number of locals run on the society page of the papers, advising the public that there would be no increase in the price of flowers for Mothers' day. The firm also used large cards in its display windows, stating that there would be no increase in the price for Mothers' day. Mr. Knull states that there was not a single complaint heard in regard to excessive prices for flowers being charged. At Easter this firm sold a large number of plant hampers and blooming pot plants, and at Mothers' day even a greater number of these

About Clothing Ads And Ads that are Clothed

Pick up the last Saturday Evening Post and, looking at the clothing ads, what do you see?

Illustrations that mostly show impossible men looking as if they all had a million dollars and not a darn thing to do.

And couldn't do if they had.

When you read the text, it says something about "exclusive fabrics superbly tailored for men of discriminating taste."

Not a word about the quality or how made, or any of the many things that you and I want to know before we part with our good money.

They are not advertisements; they are just signs.

Sometimes I think most florists' ads are also pretty much just signs.

If not that, then they are strained attempts at sentiment. Yet you drop in and have a chat with the owners and in short order they will, right off hand, tell you a half dozen things about every-day happenings that would make corking ads.

Why is it that most of us are one person when we talk, and an all starched-up individual when we write?

Ask any expert advertising man what ads are most read and he'll promptly say: "The ones that are mostly like most folks."

Let's not be flippant, but let's be more friendly and folksy and see if our advertising won't do some real business building for us.

Don't forget your F. T. D. orders for Decoration Day, May 30th were sold than during the Easter season. This is an indication that such stock is coming into favor in that section.

WILSON, N. C.

Commenting on the business done for Mothers' day, Starr the Florist, of Wilson, N. C., says: "Prices down and business fine! We had all we wanted to do and then some. We could not supply the demand, either for carnations or for other flowers, after ordering almost twice as many as we ordered last year. Not believing in price-jumping on special days, we sold carnations for $2 per dozen, some of them costing us that. We advertised no advance in price for all flowers on Mothers' day and had loads of business to offset the advance, realizing double our sales of last year. Telegraph delivery business, both incoming and outgoing, doubled last year's. The prospect for the industry in the south is quite promising. We are preparing for a big business, having just moved into our new store."

"Consider the lilies of the field." How bountifully they bloom, how freely and fully they give of their loveliness and sweetness.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.

Mothers' day business was most satisfactory. Sales were larger than it was expected that they would be. Everything sold readily, while the price range was approximately twenty-five per cent lower than that of last year. The Rosemont Gardens handled about 8,000 carnations, all of their own growing. Roses, sweet peas, lilies and snapdragons all cleaned up well. Pot plants of all descriptions cleaned up after the supply of cut flowers was exhausted. The carnations were small, due to the exceedingly hot weather, but they were clean and sold readily. Although the price range was twenty-five per cent lower than that of last year, the Mothers' day business showed an increase of five per cent on the amount of sales. The parcel post shipments made by the Rosemont Gardens were larger than ever before; approximately 550 packages were mailed in three days, and not a single complaint has been received by the firm. The telegraph business was also good; there were 110 orders sent out and ninety-five orders received from other points by this firm. The telegraph orders received by the firm averaged $3.55, while those sent out averaged about $3.45.

by the judges as truly wonderful. The judges for these were John Moritz, H. C. Irish and W. A. Rowe. They had a hard task on their hands in placing the ribbons.

In the retail section the display was somewhat less than that of the two previous years. This section was non-competitive. Last year nearly all the leading retailers exhibited, while this year only seven made exhibits. They were M. S. Newman, Fred C. Weber, F. H. Weber, Julius Schaeffer, Grimm & Gorly, Windler's Flowers and Thomas C. Carr. The judges in floral arrangement were Miss Julia Armstrong and F. C. Weber. All exhibits were highly praised for arrangements and quality of stock used, especially those of Julius Schaeffer, Thomas C. Carr, F. H. Weber and F. C. Weber.

With the Commercial Growers.

The section for commercial growers, too, was smaller than in the previous two years. This section was open to growers within twenty-five miles of St. Louis. The plant sections, especially, had only a few entries.

The class for twelve hydrangea plants in not less than 7-inch pots was won by C. E. DeWever, of Clayton, Mo. Mr. DeWever also took first on a specimen hydrangea plant and first on twelve pot-grown roses.

Frank J. Fillmore took seven firsts and three seconds on his ten entries, as follows: Second on six marguerite plants; second on specimen plant of same; first on twelve pelargoniums; first on twelve geraniums; first on collection of geraniums; first on collection of coleus plants; second on twenty-five greenhouse-blooming plants; first on twenty-three bedding plants; first on

The judges in the commercial sections were L. Jules Bourdet, Carl Beyer and J. J. Beneke.

At the close of the show President R. M. Duggar and members of the Garden Club of St. Louis expressed great satisfaction at the successful results and thanked all who took part to make it such.

George H. Pring, L. P. Jensen and Paul Kohe had charge of the staging of all the exhibits and were complimented highly on the perfect arrangements.

The members of the Garden Club say that their next move will be to work for the success of the fall flower show, next November, at the Coliseum, when the Chrysanthemum Society of America will meet and exhibit jointly.

ers' day. There was plenty of stock at the markets to meet all demands. The demand had fallen considerably and prices with it. A considerable amount of funeral work during the week helped greatly to keep the retailers busy.

The market was long on peonies and many in the poorer grades had to be dumped. Choice stock brought $60 per thousand. A great many roses came in daily and the extra fancy alone held up in price. The quality of Columbia shows better than at any other time this season. Premier, Butterfly and White Killarney sell best.

Carnations held their own until the middle of last week, when the price dropped; these were not overplentiful, but were equal to any demand. Bright colors had the call. Extra fancy gladiolus spikes are having a good demand, with prices not high. Callas and Easter lilies are plentiful enough for all demands, at lower prices.

Sweet peas are not in heavy supply and the big cut is about over for the season. Cape jasmine shipments from Texas will be heavy.

Various Notes.

A special meeting of the board of directors of the St. Louis Flower Growers' Association was held May 16, at publicity headquarters, in order to talk over plans for Memorial day advertising in the daily newspapers. The secretary's report showed that there was enough available money coming in monthly, especially this month, as Mothers' day business was the heaviest ever known. After a lengthy discussion on what advertising did for the retailers Easter and Mothers' day, it was decided to use the four daily newspapers for a few hundred lines each. As all seasonable flowers will be plentiful, the publicity from these advertisements should create a heavy demand. The matter was left in the hands of F. A. Windler, H. G. Berning and the secretary, who compose the advertising committee of the board. Six members of the board were present, Vice-chairman W. J. Pilcher presiding. The next regular meeting of the board will be held June 6, at which the full board is expected to be present.

The membership of the St. Louis Florists' Club has reached 235. June 8 the club will celebrate the club's thirty-sixth anniversary and, if promises are

The St. Louis Association of Gardeners will hold its first outdoor meeting next week. Secretary Hugo Schaff will send special notices of the date and place to all members; a large attendance is looked for.

J. F. Ammann, with his new title of field manager of the F. T. D., will start activities at Atlanta, Ga., June 1. This trip will keep him busy almost until the time of the opening of the S. A. F. convention, at Kansas City, Mo.

George Kuehner, manager of the wholesalers' baseball team, and Oscar Ruff, manager of the retailers' team, say that their teams will start training next week for their annual game at the florists' picnic. The wholesalers' team is the present champion.

Eighteen florist bowlers of the "Say It with Flowers" bowling league bowled in the double and single squads May 17 and again the leaders were not disturbed, but F. A. Windler and George Berner, in the doubles, and A. Hoffmann, Jr., in the singles, got in the prize money with good scores.

H. G. Frey, representing the McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., spent several days here last week calling on the trade.

Oscar C. May, state vice-president of the S. A. F. for eastern Missouri, says anything regarding the next convention and membership should be addressed to him at Sappington, Mo. Mr. May has charge of the transportation for the St. Louis Florists' Club.

Oscar Ruff, of the Bergstermann Floral Co., will celebrate his seventh wedding anniversary May 26, at his home, 317 South Grand avenue.

Gorly; Haun & Weiss, and Miss L. E. Doussard stated that everything cleaned out early at reasonable prices and that plants had a greater sale than ever.

The officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club will hold their monthly conference June 1, at the home of Trustee A. W. Gumz; they will arrange a special program for the thirty-sixth annual meeting of the club.

Frank A. Windler, head of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., was born May 18, 1890. May 18 he celebrated. His next-door neighbor, William C. Smith, head of the Smith Wholesale Floral Co., celebrated May 19. The latter was born in 1881.

Several of the Belleville and Alton, Ill., florists visited the wholesale market last week. When asked for a report on Mothers' day, they said: "Tell them we were up to our necks in business; it was the greatest business day so far this year."

John Nyflot reports that he will cut 50,000 peonies for Memorial day from his county farm.

The program committee of the St. Louis district of the National Flower Growers' Association, consisting of J. F. Ammann, W. A. Rowe and J. J. Beneke, met May 16 and arranged for an attractive program for the district's big meeting July 18 and 19, at Rock Island, Ill. The Missouri membership

The Market.

Conditions in this market last week were anything but good. With the passing of Mothers' day, things are back to normal and the stock to be had is exceptionally good. There was a considerable difference in prices May 13 and 14. Carnations, which sold for $10 to $15 per hundred Saturday, May 13, dropped to $3 and $4 per hundred after May 14. The same can be said of roses. Roses are in good supply, easily taking care of all the demands. Sweet peas are a back number because of the extremely hot weather. Peonies are exceptionally early this year and it seemed that every interurban car and train brought peonies last week. Snapdragons are now at their best and move well at $8 to $12.50 per hundred. The first delphiniums of any amount reached here last week and moved well at $6 to $8 per hundred. Calla lilies are gone, but Easter lilies continue to arrive and move out quickly. Cornflowers have once more made their appearance and are readily picked up by the trade at $5 per thousand. Miscellaneous stock, including valley, jasmines, yellow daisies and stocks, move out well because of the limited supply.

Various Notes.

H. W. Sheppard reported an unusual amount of funeral work for last week. He has added a number of new decorating novelties to his stock.

J. C. Rutenschroer, of Price Hill, is contemplating touring several neighboring states with his new inventions. One is a patent twine carrier, with a cutter combined. This is a small aluminum holder and can be carried on or under the hand, thus doing away with getting the twine entangled, for instance, when bunching peas, etc. He has applied for a patent and has the assurance of a number of supply houses as to the good qualities of the tool. The other invention is a hanging basket hanger, which eliminates the drippings

The Market.

Mothers' day this year was undoubtedly the biggest yet, from more than one standpoint. In the first place, there were more carnations this year than ever before. The public was anxious to get any kind of flowers and, still more, it wanted to send flowers as a gift in addition to wearing them. There was little or no advance in prices, a policy in keeping with the sentiment of the day, and regarded as a good omen for "the bird that lays the golden egg," by thinking florists.

The expected slump this week did not appear. Shippers, especially, did a big business, due probably to early commencements in the rural districts. The bedding season is on now and shippers are experiencing a heavy demand for 3-inch stock. The outlook is good for more than the usual amount of cheaper stock for Memorial day this year. Most of the lilacs will be gone, but snowballs should be in and at least the early peonies.

Various Notes.

H. Claussen, of the Rockmont for Flowers, reported a big Mothers' day business.

Ernest Hill, carnation grower for Conrad Lengenfelder, reports that they cut 21,000 carnations Mothers' day week.

fire last week. The fire, having its origin in the paint room of the storehouse, completely destroyed the storehouse, with all its contents. The new shipping room and office building adjoining were scorched and a portion of the roof was burned. Some glass was broken in the adjacent greenhouse. The firm, in the midst of a big Mothers' day shipping business, was seriously handicapped by the loss of shipping boxes, etc. R. E. H.

Mothers' Day Business.

It was indeed a banner day for all concerned. The weather the first part of the week preceeding Mothers' day was stormy and cold, but plenty of warm sunshine the three days before May 14 helped to produce the biggest cut of stock ever put on the market for this day, and everything offered was cleaned up entirely, while more could have been sold.

The carnation supply was extra large, but far inadequate to take care of the demand. Carnation prices were considerably lower this year than last, both wholesale and retail. Fancy stock sold for $8 and $10 per hundred, wholesale, and the highest retail price was $2.50 per dozen. The flower-buying public has little reason to kick about florists profiteering. Prices on roses ranged from $8 to $25 per hundred, wholesale. The quality of the stock was exceptionally good, due to the cool nights prevailing. Hoosier Beauty, Dunlop, Columbia and Ophelia were most sought, but everything offered moved in good shape. Darwin tulips were sold in large quantities and all sweet peas offered were quickly disposed of. Pot plants were in good supply, and the demand for this item cleaned up everything offered. Pelargoniums, Boston ferns, Sprenger, plumosus, hydrangeas, fuchsias and marguerites constituted the bulk of the sales in this line.

Coöperative Advertising.

The florists of Salt Lake City and vicinity are beginning to see the benefits of coöperative advertising. Last year it was hard to obtain money enough to run a half-page in each of the three Salt Lake City newspapers. This year it was much easier to get money for a full page, which was run in each of the three papers a few days before Mothers' day. With a possible exception of one grower and one retailer, every florist was more than pleased to pay his quota for the advertisement, and the effort undoubtedly helped to make this Mothers' day the best in history.

Various Notes.

E. A. Lambourne, who for many years has been one of Salt Lake City's leading florists, enjoyed the best Mothers' day business ever. Mr. Lambourne always carries a large supply of excellent stock, and, although he placed larger orders for Mothers' day than ever before, he found it necessary to send rush orders to the growers for stock to supply the demand May 14.

May 14, when the writer called on the Huddart Floral Co. at 1 p. m., he found these people with everything still in high gear. As soon as they had cleaned up the orders for Mothers' day, some good customer presented them with a $150 funeral order. It is needless to say that they enjoyed this, as they had only been without sleep for forty-eight hours.

The telegraph business this year was just like a flood—orders coming and going every minute—and it would be safe to wager that the wires were kept just as hot May 12 and 13 receiving and sending telegraph orders as they were the day President Harding was elected.

There is a considerable demand at the present time for flowering plants for late setting. Pansies are still being sold in large quantities, though the demand is not so large as it was. Mountain daisies, carnation plants, mums, etc., are being sold for garden purposes. Hydrangea plants of excellent quality are in the market and are selling well. There is also some demand for potted rose bushes in bloom. There is still a demand for seed, although it is not so

DES MOINES, IA.
Des Moines residents have been given two rare treats in the last few weeks. Sunday, April 30, the Des Moines Garden Club held a daffodil show at the home of Ex-Senator Addison M. Parker, on West Thirty-seventh street. The spacious grounds are beautifully laid out and the soil conditions evidently are just right for these spring flowers. Many varieties were represented and one of the choice spots was a planting of Narcissus Leedsii Mrs. Langtry, which has been naturalized. Mr. Parker told us it had grown there most successfully for three years.
Sunday, May 14, the Garden Club held a tulip show on the adjoining grounds of Mrs. Henrietta Pfeifer and Mrs. Meyer Rosenfield, of West Thirty-seventh street. Thousands of Darwin tulips of every shade greeted the visitors, besides some varieties of cottage and breeder tulips.
On both occasions the solariums were filled with cut blooms carefully labeled, so that those interested could tell just what varieties or colors they liked best. Artistically arranged groups of spring flowers also added to the beauty and enjoyment. The Garden Club is to be congratulated on the success of these two shows.

The Floral Arts Club held its regular meeting Tuesday evening, May 9. F. E. Wetherall talked on the Keosauqua way, a diagonal artery passing through our city to relieve congested traffic. Also, he touched on the proposed boulevard system, a dream of the future.

The Market.

The week following Mothers' day began with a scarcity of stock of all kinds, but the shortage disappeared and the end of the week the market was considerably flooded, especially with carnations and snapdragons. Roses, in the white and Ward varieties, were plentiful, while the Premier and Columbia cleaned up well. Easter lilies arrived towards the end of the week and, although some were a little soft, they cleaned up well. Sweet peas are still arriving, but the quality is not good and most of the stock either finds its way to the fakers or is dumped. Plumosis is arriving in good quantities, but so much of it is of poor quality that it sheds as soon as it is unpacked, thus becoming unsalable. A few stocks are still arriving and calendulas are of good quality. Outdoor valley has put

Various Notes.

Stephen Green, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was a recent visitor. George Bates, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., has been away on a week's fishing trip.

Mr. Raebel, of Canton, O., was a visitor last week, as was also Louis P. Endres, of New Philadelphia, O.

TORONTO, ONT.

Mothers' Day.

Mothers' day trade was good and reports coming from different florists show that good trade was general. The quantity of flowers handled was probably far ahead of the amount handled last year and the money value was about the same.

There were many beautiful windows. Flowers were plentiful, except, perhaps, carnations. The abundance of flowers made it easy to make a showing, both in windows and stores. Carnations sold at less this year than last and in most cases the prices were the same as for the week previous.

A feature of Mothers' day trade was the number of telegrams handled, both incoming and outgoing. The Canadian National Telegraph Co. had cards printed and put in prominent places, folders were put in all telegrams delivered during the week, and a splendid service was given. The folders included those supplied by the F. T. D. members and others printed by the company itself. This, no doubt, contributed to the large quantity of telegraph orders sent out from Toronto.

Various Notes.

A Canadian horticultural council was formed at Ottawa May 17, which included representatives from all the vegetable, fruit and flower industries. The idea is to improve conditions in these industries. The council will also deal with plant origination, plant registration, production, grading, packing, transportation, storage and marketing. Among the officers are W. E. Groves, president of the Canadian Gardeners' and Florists' Association, and W. T. Macoun, Dominion horticulturist, Ottawa.

Professor Tomlinson, of the Royal Agricultural College, Guelph, Ont., gave a lecture on landscape gardening before the Gardeners' and Florists' Association, at its regular meeting, May 15. It was decided to hold the annual picnic at Eversley, the farm of Lady Eaton. The invitation was extended through P. L. Whyteok.

The jubilee convention of the Canadian Gardeners' and Florists' Association will be held at Montreal August 8 to 10. From present indications, there will be a big attendance from all over Canada and a fair representation from the United States.

There have been many large weddings lately and a demand for wedding flowers and decorations. The closing exercises at the colleges have made a big demand for bouquets, the custom of giving bouquets to the lady graduates calling for large and beautiful bouquets, baskets, etc. The flower stores near the universities report big demands in this regard, as well as the downtown florists. The Market.

Conditions in the market last week were indeed an improvement over those of the previous week. Peonies were reaching the market in good quantities and the quality of the flowers was good.
Spanish irises made their appearance in quantity for the first time last week.
Irises of other varieties have been on the market for some time. Carnations have about run their race. Easter lilies are fine. Callas were small and some pretty soft stock was handled. Del-phiniums were plentiful and the quality of the stock was fine. Sweet peas were only fair, and there was only a limited supply of marguerites, myosotis, pansies and stocks. Mignonette is about over with. Snapdragons were scarce and the quality of the flowers was poor.

The Market.

Clear and somewhat warmer weather and the aftermath of Mothers' day caused a crumble in prices last week, which reached its climax near the close of the week. White flowers cleaned up moderately well, while prices were low in nearly all cases. The high prices asked for carnations May 13, no doubt, had not a little to do with the sharp drop in values last week. Certainly a great deal of profiteering talk has been heard, and the general statement that "florists are a bunch of holdups," heard a good deal, is regrettable and bound to retard legitimate business. To charge extortionate prices for real flowers is the surest method of forcing increased buying of tin, iron and porcelain ware, together with other artificial flowers and foliage in spray or wreath forms. May 23 saw some improvement in conditions and this is due more to decreased supplies than anything else.

Roses were moved with difficulty last week and values have been discouragingly low. A heavy crop will be available for Memorial day. Short and medium stems will be mostly wanted and bright colors will, of course, have the call. A nice crop of Hadley, Scott Key, Columbia, Pilgrim and Premier is available. Carnations, May 13, cleaned out at $12 to $15 per hundred. A week later many were sold at $2, and were hard to move at that price. Quality is deteriorating rapidly and many flowers have a sleepy look when brought in. Memorial day prices are as yet problematical, but will possibly reach $8 to $12. Sweet peas continue overplentiful, and there are still too many gladioli for the meager call; most of them will now be held for Memorial day. The small-flowered or nanus varieties from California bulbs are of inferior quality, but the large sorts are selling as low as 8 cents each. Snapdragons are fewer in number, but there will be a veritable avalanche of them later in the week; for bouquet work they should clean up quite well.

Callas and Easter lilies have been selling at an average of $1 per dozen, but will advance a little later in the week. Gypsophila elegans, the graceful and popular annual, is a first-class seller. Fair numbers of hardy del-phiniums are seen and move quite well. There is plenty of white and purple lilac, mainly of the commonest varieties, which lies around and wilts; it promises to be on the wane for Memorial day. Darwin and cottage tulips are practically the only bulbous flowers seen, and the person who can hold them for Memorial day will receive good prices for them. Plenty of nice pansies still come in. Much finer valley is coming from outdoors than from under glass and is selling at half the price of the forced article.

There are small lots of white bouvardia and of gardenias, but their quality varies so much that some flowers may wholesale at 50 cents a dozen and others at $40 per hundred. A good supply of orchid flowers is still coming in, among which Laelia purpurata, Cattleya Mossiae and C. gigas and oncidiums are prominent. Some fine Miltonia vexillaria is also seen. Plant trade is wonderfully brisk; bedding plants in particular are in great demand and promise to sell better than ever before. Calceolarias, hydrangeas, heliotropes, gloxinias and roses are all in good demand also.

Dealers in metal ware and other artificial novelties are working harder than ever. Most of the flower stores carry these "weird, metallic sympathies," while dry goods stores, meat markets, street fakers and hardware stores are stocked to repletion with them. A heavy shower of rain and one or two hot, sunny days make these artificial designs distressful objects.

Club Meeting.

Although May is a busy month, there was a fine attendance at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, May 16. Four new members were elected. The death of Max P. Haendler was reported and James Wheeler, T. D. Hatfield and John G. Duguid were appointed a committee on resolutions. It was unanimously voted to hold the usual ladies' night in June and J. Harris, in charge of the entertainment end, said he would have a Swedish glee club of thirty voices, a violinist from the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other special entertainers that night. It was also voted to have the usual picnic in July, arrangements for both the ladies' night and picnic being left to the executive committee.

Exhibits were fewer than usual. Thomas W. Little had some excellent plants of Calceolaria Stewartii. James Donald showed new Meriam Beam carnations, Gladiolus Peach Blossom and The Bride, Malmaison carnations and Primula japonica. Leonard C. Seagrove had two handsome plates of Marshall strawberries. He said that he took runners in July, fruited the plants in 6-inch pots and never fed his plants, which carried an average of fourteen fruits per pot.

There were numerous queries in the question box. One question relative to the sharp advances in flower prices for Mothers' day and Memorial day caused some discussion. J. Harris, of Penn's, said that his firm made only slight advances in retail prices of carnations and suggested the use of other flowers when carnations were sold out early, May 13. He did not believe in profiteering charges.

W. N. Judd named Ioensis Beechtelii, Arnoldiana, floribunda and Sieboldii calocarpa as splendid ornamental crab apples and Charles X, Philemon, Ludwig Spaeth, Princess Alexandra, Mme. Casimir Perier, Congo, Volean and Mme. Bassompierre as fine lilacs. Dust spraying for apples and vegetables caused some discussion.

The speaker of the evening was H. F. Thompson, professor of market gardening at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, and also in charge of the Lexington experimental market garden field station. Mr. Thompson, who is an able speaker, told of the work being done at Lexington and discussed many market garden problems. He favored more practical training for college students and said the aim of all agricultural and horticultural students should be to get real, practical, as well as scientific, ideas.

Vegetables must play a bigger part as our country grows, said he, as vegetables contain the necessary vitamins and more of them can be produced per acre than any other crop. He went on to say that at the Lexington field station special studies were being made of eggplant disease, which it had been found persisted in the soil for eight years, and that carrot, cucumber and other vegetable diseases were also being earnestly studied; also such pests as red spider, the squash borer, etc., as well as breeding cucumbers for high production. He said that in studying asparagus yields, all the stalks from 1,000 selected Martha Washington plants had been carefully weighed and graded, and specially fine plants selected and removed, to see if production would prove inherent.

The seed problem was a most important one, said he, and the quality of seed was of the greatest importance. Tests on carrots showed one strain would give all malformed and unsalable roots and others an average of 500 to 800 bushels of excellent roots per acre. With tomatoes, seed selection also made an enormous difference, said Mr. Thompson, and he opined that fifty per cent of all troubles started in seed beds. Standardization of type and improvement in quality were as much desired by seedsmen as growers, but seedsmen could not always trace the seed to its source. Dr. W. W. Tracy said that the war had dealt the European seed industry a blow from which it would take thirty years to recover. Thousands of acres of seeds were now grown in the west and of some staples like onions, tons of seeds two or three years old were now held in stock, said

Do not confuse Red Wing pots with those made in brick yards from common brick clay.

Suitable clay is the first essential in producing satisfactory flower pots; next in importance is efficient help and modern equipment. We operate two of the largest stoneware potteries in America, and Red Wing wares have been recognized as the standard of quality for over forty years. Our flower pots are made of specially blended clays which produce a pot of unusual strength, required porosity, and exceptional growing qualities.

We carry a large stock and specialize on bulk carload shipments from factory. Ask for price list and discounts.

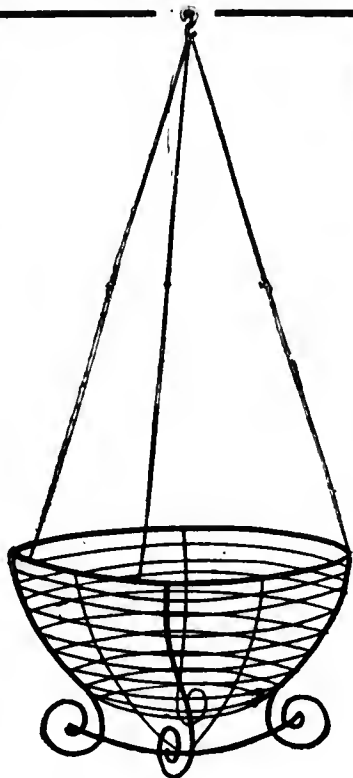

Flower pots are shipped from factory only, but to better serve the Eastern and Southern trade our Chicago warehouse—the Union Stoneware Co., 400 West Kinzie St., Chicago, Ills.—carries a stock of both cut flower jars and jardinieres. Ask them for prices.

Hubam clover. Many commercial vegetable growers never used any commercial fertilizer at all. He advocated the plowing in of green crops, like clover and rye, when about twelve inches high, to get the maximum amount of nitrogen and quickest decomposition. Acid phosphate he commended as valuable to spread on manure heaps at the rate of fifty pounds per load of manure, to help retain the ammonia. The lecturer answered numerous questions and was tendered an enthusiastic vote of thanks. He invited the club to join in the field day at the Lexington station in August, which was heartily accepted.

The Wholesale Flower Markets.

Talks of consolidation and a new wholesale flower market have been much discussed in Boston wholesale flower circles of late and it is refreshing to note that all elements are gradually coming together here. There was a meeting preceded by a dinner at Young's hotel, May 21, where stockholders of the Boston Flower Exchange and Boston Coöperative Flower Market to the number of seventy-five came together and discussed plans for consolidation and the securing of a new central wholesale flower market.

William C. Stickel, chairman of the directors of the Flower Exchange, presided and spoke of the object of the meeting. He introduced William H. Elliott, chairman of the joint committee on sites for a new wholesale market. He gave a résumé of over thirty possible sites and blanks were issued to the stockholders of seven of the most desirable and accessible; prices on these, including land and building, varied from $250,000 to $510,000. Members were asked to mark their first, second and third choice of the seven sites, which they proceeded to do and the committee will consider the wishes expressed in making a final choice.

Slips were also issued to the stockholders, asking how much they were prepared to subscribe towards the new enterprise. Thomas Roland urged them to be liberal, as this was a strictly high-grade and safe investment. Fifty blanks were signed and returned, showing an average subscription of about $1,000. No further business of importance was transacted, but other meetings will be held soon. The meeting in question was called on short notice, and many important growers were not present. There is a general feeling that there will be no trouble in financing the

Various Notes.

The annual rhododendron and iris show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be held June 3 and 4. William H. Judd, of the Arnold Arboretum, will lecture each day at 3 p. m. on hardy rhododendrons. The annual peony exhibition will come June 17 and 18.

Manrice August, who operates flower stores at the Boston terminal stations, was operated upon for gallstones, May 17, and is convalescing satisfactorily.

Thomas Pegler, of Lewiston, Me., formerly a much esteemed salesman here, was in town last week and looks as happy and jovial as ever. His friends, who are legion, were sincerely glad to see him.

Memorial day promises to set a new high record here, always provided that no hot wave comes along to upset expectations. The demand for cut flowers, in spite of the tens of thousands of metallic, wax and other artificial "tokens of sympathy," will be greater than ever, and there was never such a big demand for bedding plants in advance of the holiday as this year. There are good crops of double feverfew, stocks, snapdragons, gladioli, gyp-

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

From a dull week previous to Mothers' day, the market was transformed into a busy place for that day and everything at all suitable sold freely. As usual, there were not nearly enough carnations to go around, in spite of the higher prices asked. A number of good outdoor roses helped out with the greenhouse crop, but even at this all were taken up readily. The rear guard of tulips sold well and Spanish irises, gladioli and other bulbous stock cleaned up early. Orchids were scarce, but there was an abundance of good valley, sweet peas and baby roses. There is still a scarcity of good, long-stemmed flowers for basket work. Baby gladioli made the market in fair quantities for the annual, but more could have been sold had they been obtainable. A great improvement in greens as to quality was noted.

Various Notes.

The Dostal-Wolters Flower Shop has been doing considerable business in decorations of late. A recent social function at the Los Angeles Country Club called for a great deal of fine stock and a regularly fitted up church effect for a wedding. Besides the regular customers of this well known firm, Hill street has become quite a busy downtown street, with an immense transient trade, and the fine window displays always maintained here are great aids to business.

L. Gage paid a visit to Los Angeles from his new place at Carlsbad, San Diego county. Mr. Gage is greatly pleased with the way things are going and is planning to set out an additional three acres in bulbs next season. Several Los Angeles county growers have bought land near Mr. Gage, including Harry Bailey, of Montebello, who has secured six acres, and Kramer Bros., of Ontario, San Bernardino county, who have secured five acres and an option on ten more. Mr. Bailey does not intend planting his land this year, but will remain at the Montebello ranch.

George J. Hall & Co. have started a retail branch in their store on Fifth street. This store will be run entirely under the supervision of E. J. Reynolds, well known as a florist practically all over the United States, especially in Denver, Colo., and Madison, N. J. He does particularly fine work and doubtless the new department will be a success.

R. A. Casad, of Huntington Beach, reports an excellent increase in his bulbs of Iris tingitana, although during the present season these bulbs did not flower as freely as usual.

P. Priamos has been on the sick list and not at the market the last few days.

Frank Lichtenberg, just back from Murrietta Springs in time for the Mothers' day business, said that they sent out more orders for this day than for Easter. Mr. Lichtenberg is sticking to business, though still far from well.

Seen at the market just after Mothers' day, Howard Gates, of Anaheim, and L. Morris, of Santa Ana, both said they had a remarkably good business for Mothers' day, selling out all the stock they could obtain.

H. Morgan says that the Mothers' day business at his store on Western avenue was away beyond expectations. One item was over 1,000 roses and another a large consignment of gardenias, so he evidently got his customers in line for something else besides carnations.

P. Wilson and his brother are both well satisfied with their first Mothers' day business at the new First street store.

On his way home from the F. T. D. meeting at Detroit, A. F. Borden was in a wreck on the Sunset Limited at Lobo, Tex., the train running into a string of freight cars that were running wild. About sixty-five persons were more or less injured and Mr. Borden was cut about the head, though not otherwise injured. He is cheerful about it. Incidentally he said that he had called on the E. C. Amling Co., Chicago, while in the Windy City. All are busy at store of the Redondo Floral Co.

P. Hahn, of Hollywood, keeps careful tab on his business and says that for Mothers' day this year his sales were just eighty-five per cent above last year.

Louis Dubin was back at Wolfskill's & Morris Goldenson in time for the Mothers' day business, which was big.

A large amount of funeral work and an extra good Mothers' day kept everyone on the jump at the Broadway Florist's. Both Dan Stathatos and H. Freeman, the buyer, said it was the best in the history of the firm.

rist, and all of the staff were kept busy during the recent rush, a large amount of high-class funeral work coming, in addition to the Mothers' day trade.

Herbert Bateman, Inc., cleaned up everything for Mothers' day, and Mr. Bateman said that the number of telegraph orders was in advance of expectations.

As usual at Wright's, big preparations were made for the annual Mothers' day celebration and, according to Manager Harry Friend, they were none too big. Everybody worked.

Miss Mary Rohr has joined the staff of the Athletic Club Florist.

Both night and day forces were kept at it full tilt at the Alexandria Florist's at Mothers' day and a fine clean-up is the report from Manager George Eischen.

After the Mothers' day rush the whole staff of the E. C. Amling Co. got busy again on Memorial day wreaths, bouquets and other "everlasting" devices. E. C. Amling, Harold Amling and P. Huss are all busy with building operations at Sawtelle.

Large numbers of magnolia wreaths, statice wreaths and bouquets are being shipped by W. Armacost & Co., a large staff being kept busy making them up. The Mothers' day shipping was good.

J. Dieterich left for the east en route to Europe May 14.

S. Murata & Co. report an exceptionally good Mothers' day shipping.

Some unique funeral work was turned out by S. Purdie & Co., last week, in addition to their Mothers' day business.

Fred H. Howard, president of Howard & Smith, was in San Francisco last week attending the executive meeting of the California Association of Nurserymen. At the Montebello nursery a large staff is busy catching up on shipping and mail orders, while George Chandler is authority for the fact that the Mothers' day business at the retail store was more than twice as large as that of previous years, the telegraph business being particularly good.

Manager John Gordon, of Darling's Flower Shop, said, "Good," when asked about the Mothers' day business.

Some beautiful peonies are coming in and there are sufficient quantities of gillyflowers, pansies, ranunculi and snapdragons, while irises of many varieties are plentiful. Early poppies of many ornamental varieties are in and the first Shasta daisies are beginning to appear. Delphiniums are popular and are not yet being cut in sufficient quantities to meet the demand. gardenias, but orchids are somewhat scarce. Callas are plentiful, but Easter lilies are almost over, as are tulips. The crop of strawflowers is much in demand, especially on account of Memorial day. This crop has been late this year, owing to the cold winter and spring.

Various Notes.

Weather conditions knocked the bottom out of the high prices of the Mothers' day market. Three days before May 14 saw an increase in the prices of cut flowers, especially white chrysanthemums. Then came a spell of hot weather and the market was flooded with stock. This brought prices down and the carnations, which had been selling at a premium, became almost a drug on the market. The Mothers' day business was the largest ever transacted in San Francisco, but, owing to the flood of unexpected stock, brought forward by the hot weather, prices went down Saturday, May 13, and on Mothers' day. On Sunday, May 14, carnations were no more expensive than they had been before the Mothers' day boom began.

Frank Thatcher, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., said: "Some of the San Francisco florists say that the Mothers' day trade was better than their Christmas business. We don't quite say that, but we had a wonderful run of orders."

"The warm weather made all the flowers pop out, but the demand got away with the large amount of stock," declared J. A. Axell, adding that May 14 was the biggest Mothers' day trade ever seen in this city.

"We were cleaned up on Mothers' day. The demand was so big that we only had enough to go around," said Mrs. Darbee. "Telegraph orders were more numerous than ever, and there wasn't an incorrect address. We were able to make all deliveries."

Podesta & Baldocchi, F. C. Jaeger, Brown & Kennedy, the Suzanne Floral Co., Shellgrain & Ritter, the California Floral Co., the Misses Hannon, the Charles C. Navlet Co., Joseph's, the Terminal Florist and all the other establishments of the city, almost without exception, were enthusiastic regarding the amount of business transacted at Mothers' day.

Notice of the voluntary petition in bankruptcy filed by C. Kooyman, as the C. Kooyman Co., Alameda, Cal., appears under the head of "Business Embarrassments" on a forward page.

Speaking of orchids, Victor Ferrari, "orchid king" of this vicinity, said: "The Mossiae are almost finished and the Gaskelliana and gigas are just beginning to bloom, so that orchids are a little scarce at present."

The E. W. McLellan Co. had just enough stock to meet the heavy Mothers' day demand, according to G. W. McLellan, of that firm. "We sold out stock as it came along and the heat brought it along fast," he said. Fine Halley gladioli are seen here.

K. Okamura, of Oakland, Cal., who has been established in the nursery business near Redwood City, Cal., for the last six years, is having new greenhouses built for the cultivation of rose crops.

S. Enomoto, of Enomoto & Co., says that Mothers' day business was the best ever. He is leaving for Santa Cruz to look over stocks and freseia prospects.

Y. Noda, of the Growers' Floral Co., is a strong Mothers' day enthusiast. This firm is finding a heavy out-of-town demand for its carnations and roses.

Domoto Bros. are cutting a lot of fine white irises, as well as gillyflowers and gypsophila. They expect to have plenty of the latter for Memorial day, as well as a good crop of Shasta daisies.

Flower & Supply Co., has been making investigations and predicts that stock will be scarce in some lines and plentiful in others for Memorial day. "The uncertain weather we have been having makes it hard to foretell what will be in the market," said Mr. Inoue. "The heat has already brought in some of the stock that was being pinched back for Memorial day. We have some growers with large and unusually early crops of statice, helichrysum and aconitum, and we are shipping these in preference to cut flowers, as there is less risk of their spoiling."

Shellgrain & Ritter have been busy with funeral work, in addition to the demand for Mothers' day.

Pellicano, Rossi & Co. are using some exceptionally fine delphiniums and ornamental poppies in their many baskets and other orders.

Podesta & Baldocchi were found busy with elaborate table decorations for a luncheon given by E. D. Porter, of Berkeley; among these was seen the first scabiosa of the season. The firm also had twenty-four bon voyage baskets for the sailing that afternoon of the Matsonia for Honolulu. A. G. and Mrs. Podesta have just sent out cards announcing the arrival of their first son, Amadel Jack Podesta, and the young couple are receiving many congratulations.

B. Joseph published an attractive Mothers' day advertisement, with a copy of Whistler's "Mother" in the rotogravure section of a daily newspaper. It brought unusual returns, according to B. Joseph and his staff.

L. Picetti, of the Charles C. Navlet Co., recalled with satisfaction that his house had plenty of everything for Mothers' day, even carnations. "The celebrating of this day is getting bigger and bigger every year," he declared.

The Suzanne Floral Co. is reaping most satisfactory returns from a large electric sign which it has recently had installed. People see it from afar and are made aware of the store's exist-

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The Mothers' day business was fully up to expectations. There was a large call for carnations in all colors. There was a good deal of shipping done by wholesalers and retailers, and, no doubt, some of the country florists suffered by not having enough stock to take care of the demand. Telegraph orders were heavy and were well taken care of. Darwin tulips of good quality were sold as a substitute for carnations and brought $1.50 per dozen. Snapdragons brought $2 and $3 per dozen. Sweet peas sold at 75 cents per bunch. Roses were plentiful and sold well. Pot plants of good quality brought a good price, hydrangeas taking the lead. Many florists reported a general increase in their Mothers' day business this year, as compared with that of last year.

Various Notes.

Walter Garbett, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, and J. Hoard, of the Hilmer V. Swenson Co., Chicago, were trade visitors here last week.

Earl Aldrich, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, has returned from a business trip to Puget sound cities.

Raymond L. Meyheim, president of the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., is vacationing in Oregon at the present time, but followed his business instinct at least on one occasion by visiting two or more growing establishments.

W. Garside, manager of the retail flower store of Clarke Bros., showed up one morning with a new flyver, which he purchased recently.

Fred M. Young is receiving many inquiries from out of town for Memorial day flowers, and he is able to take care of this business in good shape.

W. J. Kerrison, who conducted a flower store in the Sweetland candy store, retired from business May 15.

The Wilson-Crout-Gehr Co. has put on some extra help lately to take care of its bedding plant business. This firm is doing a large shipping business at present.

The Market.

An excellent Mothers' day business was the order in the Seattle market, sales passing the expectations of the dealers themselves. A good share of this is attributed to the advertising done coöperatively through the local association's publicity committee, in which the fact was driven home that there would be no raise in prices for Mothers' day.

As had been expected, there was a shortage of carnations for this holiday, but good results were secured with roses and the bright-colored tulips instead. This proved a real boon to the trade, as a heavy cut of tulips is arriving. Growing weather has been materially improved since the holiday and the cutting on all flowers is due to increase. Lower prices have been generally announced on tulips to keep the supply moving; so far, this has been quite effective.

The supply of snapdragons is increasing rapidly, and the pink shades are especially effective. Roses are in more liberal supply. The showing made by Columbia has been satisfactory.

Potted offerings proved good local sellers for Mothers' day with one class of buyers, probably because of the element of economy, and several shops have announced that next season they will feature potted stock even more.

Various Notes.

The demand for bedding stock has held up all along, and growers say that more stock has been disposed of this season than last. A part of this can be traced to the "City Beautiful" movement, since most of the larger buildings are causing window boxes to be put in, and residence section associations are urging the planting of bright flowers along the curbsings.

Some attractive novelty baskets have been shown by the Hollywood Gardens, and the use of gladioli and snapdragons

CHARLES DICKINSON, retired seedsman, now devoted to aviation, will be 64 years of age May 28.

PETER HOLLENBACH, Chicago, will celebrate his seventy-second birthday anniversary May 26.

A GOOD attendance of middle western seedsmen is looked for at the annual meeting of the Iowa Seed Dealers' Association, at the Hotel Savery, Des Moines, June 7.

REPORT of the voluntary petition in bankruptcy filed by C. Kooyman, as the C. Kooyman Co., Alameda, Cal., appears under the heading, "Business Embarrassments," on a forward page.

FIRE of unknown origin did $105,000 damage to the stock and warehouse of the Spokane Seed Co., Spokane, Wash., recently, $50,000 of this being chargeable to seeds and fertilizers lost. It was fully covered by insurance.

T. SAKATA & Co., of Yokohama, Japan, have opened an American office at 20 East Jackson boulevard, Chicago, in charge of Robert C. Stubbins, who has had many years of experience in the seed business, as sales manager for the A. J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, and more recently with the Everette R. Peacock Co., Chicago. Stocks will be kept on hand in Chicago for immediate dispatch and Mr. Stubbins will make at least one contracting trip to call on leading houses each year.

THE mail order business of the Henry Field Seed Co., Shenandoah, Ia., this year was the best in the history of the firm. The figures up to May 1 showed a gain of over thirty-two per cent over last year in the number of orders. The rush came early, and on the last Monday in February 6,153 orders were received, while the first Monday in May showed the number of orders for the day to be 3,476. These figures refer only to the mail order business and do not include the wholesale and counter trade of the firm.

THE Holland-American Bulb Co., Beltingham, Wash., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $60,000, and in keeping with the "tulip town" slogan, the firm's organizers plan to make this the bulb center of the Pacific coast, as well as a real factor in the United States markets. The officers of the firm are as follows: President, Rutger Vallentgoed; vice-president, Frank W. Bixby; secretary, Wesley Brooks; treasurer, Charles A. Conlee. The trustees are Hugh Eldridge, Rutger Vallentgoed, Frank Bixby, Herbert S. Nightengale, Wesley Brooks and Charles Conlee.

The convention of the Southern Seedsmen's Association will open next Monday, May 29, at the St. Charles hotel, New Orleans, continuing until Wednesday. Joseph Steckler, president of the association, and L. B. Reuter, of the membership committee, have been working hard preparing inducements for their fellow seedsmen to visit New Orleans.

The program will open at 10 o'clock Monday morning with an address of welcome by the mayor of New Orleans, to whom D. Y. Mayo, of Knoxville, Tenn., will respond. After an address by the president of the New Orleans Association of Commerce, Harold W. Newman, the association's activities will begin with the address of President Steckler, followed by the report of the secretary-treasurer, F. S. Love.

Tuesday morning will be devoted to several addresses on interesting subjects, and Wednesday morning there will be an executive session, in which the general association business will be discussed, ending with the election of officers.

The afternoons will be devoted to pleasure. Monday will be held a boat ride on the Mississippi. Tuesday the guests will be taken to the Southern Yacht Club for dinner, returning for a short afternoon business session. Tuesday evening a dinner will be held at the Louisiana restaurant. The complete program of the meeting was printed in The Review for May 11.

NORTHRUP-KING BUILDING SOLD.

Minneapolis newspapers have announced the sale of the Northrup, King & Co. building, on Bridge square, to the Northwestern Drug Co.

This building was erected especially for Northrup, King & Co. in 1896 and has been continuously occupied by them up to four years ago, when the entire business, with the exception of the retail store, was moved to the new 9-acre plant in northeast Minneapolis.

The firm has conducted a retail store in the old building, or in the same block, for nearly forty years; so when Minneapolis people think of seed they think of the corner seed store on Bridge square. Arrangements have been made whereby the same store will be leased for some years, so that it will still be identified with the retail seed business.

The new owners are a rapidly growing wholesale drug corporation, having about 500 retail druggists as stockholders throughout the northwest.

Roswell, N. M.—H. C. Gettys has sold his interests in the Alameda Greenhouses to C. H. Glover and W. A. Allson and has purchased the Clovis Floral Co., at Clovis, N. M. Mr. Gettys intends to build a modern range at this place.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE death of H. H. Meeker, of Crown Point, Ind., is reported in the obituary columns of this issue.

FRED H. HOWARD, president of Howard & Smith, Los Angeles, Cal., was in San Francisco last week attending the executive meeting of the California Association of Nurserymen.

SEVENTY-NINE varieties of apples from twenty states were reported offered in the Chicago market during the 1920-21 season. The principal varieties are limited to about a dozen. New York, Michigan and Washington are the states shipping most heavily to the Chicago market.

OWING to the early season, it has been found necessary to advance the date of the exhibition and annual meeting, at New York, of the American Iris Society to Saturday, May 27. The blooms are to be staged Friday, May 26, in the Museum building at the New York botanical gardens in Bronx park.

GARDEN editors on newspapers in Illinois and other central states speak of the "Plan to Plant Another Tree" clip sheet sent out by J. A. Young, secretary of the Illinois State Nurserymen's Association, Aurora, as one of the most valuable sources of material they have. The material presented is all practical, covers a variety of trees, shrubs and flowers and is most timely in its presentation.

THE Illinois Forestry Association was formed a few days ago, with the object of educating the people of the state in forestry matters. It will make an effort to further the slogan, "Plan to Plant Another Tree." There are reported to be about six million acres of land in Illinois available for forestation. Apparently there is much room for the work of the association. One of the most active promoters of the organization, from whom further information about it can be obtained, is D. L. Goodwillie, Lumbermen's Exchange, Chicago.

"At the end of the season," says N. I. W. Krick, sales manager for the Weller Nurseries Co., Holland, Mich., "we find ourselves with practically no surplus of anything. Gladiolus bulbs are entirely sold out. Reports we are getting from friends in the business indicate that the nursery season has been a successful one. Last week we had a few days of rain, which was needed and put us in fine shape for sowing and further planting. We increased our plantings considerably over last year's, both in perennials and gladioli. The climatic and soil conditions here have proven to be unexcelled for hardy plants and bulbous plants."

MISSOURI fruit prospects are the best since 1914. All fruit trees, except a few varieties of apples, set heavy bloom and a bumper crop is expected. Local hail storms in Vernon, Morgan and Cole did some damage, while pears and peaches were hurt at scattered points by frosts in April. Ben Davis apples indicate a third of a crop in McDonald. Strawberries are reported never to have been better in the commercial section upon a large acreage. Present condition of apples is ninety per cent; peaches, ninety-one per cent; cherries and plums, ninety-one per cent, and strawberries, ninety-one per cent. Fertilization of apples has been poor.

ROCHESTER ROSE CLUB ELECTS.

At a meeting of the Rochester Rose Society in the auditorium of the Municipal Museum building at Exposition park, May 12, the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, John Dunbar; first vice-president, Fred Barry; second vice-president, Mrs. S. P. Moore; secretary, Paul C. Seel; treasurer, H. G. Dewey. A discussion was held concerning the plans for the proposed rose show to be given by the society, but nothing definite was decided.

FRUIT NOT DAMAGED.

The damage to eastern fruit crops by frosts this spring has not been so great as it was at first thought, according to Orlando Harrison, of the Harrison Nurseries, Berlin, Md. Senator Harrison said that the fruit of Delaware and the eastern shore of Maryland had been only slightly damaged by the recent cold spell. At Easton, Md., early and late apples and peaches will yield 100 per cent. At Hurlock, where the firm has 300 acres in fruit, the yield will be ninety per cent; at Seaford, Del., where there are 225 acres in fruit, the yield of early and winter apples will be seventy-five per cent; at Berlin, Md., where there are 1,000 acres in peach and apple trees, a yield of ninety per cent is expected in peaches, 100 per cent in early apples and seventy-five per cent in winter apples. From the Berlin orchards Mr. Harrison is expecting 300 earloads of peaches alone. There are 40,000 apple trees here and 60,000 peach trees. The strawberry crop at Berlin is estimated at one-third normal. Strawberries in some sections of Kent county suffered damage to some extent, but a large late crop is looked for. Grapes, while slightly harmed, have not been seriously affected.

the best trees for street planting. It is probable that oaks have not been more widely planted because of the prevalent belief that they are slow growers, and because in the north they are rather difficult to transplant. A white oak, however, which is one of the slow-growing varieties, will reach the same height as a sugar maple in the same period of time, and maples have been used much more widely than oaks for street ornamentation, despite many unsatisfactory characteristics.

GROWERS OF HARDY PLANTS

Shrubs, Bulbs and Seeds

MENTOR, OHIO

Maples are considered less desirable than has been generally supposed. Except the Lombardy poplar, most varieties of poplar are not recommended.

The bulletin, which is available upon application to the United States Department of Agriculture, contains a regional map of the United States and indicates which trees flourish best under the climatic conditions of each region.

Before ornamental tree planting for town or city streets is undertaken, a number of important points must be given attention. Trees native to one part of the United States may not thrive in another region. Some trees are objectionable because their roots penetrate defective sewers, while others grow their roots so near the surface that they have a tendency to heave or crack sidewalks.

Only vigorous trees that will withstand the dust and smoke of a city should be planted to ornament the streets. The root system should be hardy, not easily affected by unusual soil conditions, by restricted feeding areas, or by root pruning in case street improvements are made. The shape of the top of the tree when full-grown should be suited to the width of the street. The foliage should not be too dense and should be of a pleasing texture and color. The resistance of the tree to fungi, insect pests and tree diseases is an important consideration. Trees that bear showy flowers, fruits or nuts are usually undesirable for street planting.

Palms do not make good shade trees, although they are effective in formal planting. Only in the most southern parts of the country and in western California should evergreen trees be considered for street planting. Magnolias, live oaks and a few other broad-leaved evergreens may be used in these regions. Where there is lack of sunshine in winter it is desirable to admit all the light possible by using only deciduous trees. The bulletin gives a table showing the differences in fall coloring and the date of dropping of all foliage. Narrow streets, it is pointed out, should be planted with tall, slender trees like the Lombardy poplar or small trees. Broad streets may be planted with spreading trees. As a rule, native trees that have been tried out successfully in other towns of the same general locality should be given the preference.

PRIMULAS

As Cut Flowers

By using our December-sown stock, you can have the Primula obconica commence blooming in September, and in full bloom by November, which the later sown stock will not do, as they are not old enough. A half dozen more flowers per plant, used as cut flowers, just adds that much more profit and still leaves a salable plant and they are a cut flower that lasts.

This illustration shows a Bridal Bouquet

Get your plants now from December-sown stock, grow them on in pots or, better, plant them out; the results will surprise you, they will average just double as much.

The Strain that Leads

or on sandy lands near the coast the red oak and the red or scarlet maple are suitable as far south as Charleston, S. C., while the sweet gum and the live oak are equally good from Norfolk southward and along the Gulf of Mexico. The red oak, sweet gum, red maple and eastern live oak are all grown successfully along the Pacific ocean, while the California live oak can be used from San Francisco southward. The trees that endure the most alkali appear to be the bladder nut tree, London plane, peppermint gum and its variety Eucalyptus amygdalina angustifolia, and the Washingtonia and other hardy fan palms. The red oak and red maple are worth testing for alkali conditions.

In the heart of a city, where the greatest difficulty is experienced in getting trees to grow, the ailanthus will probably thrive when nearly all other kinds fail. The sycamore and the London plane are also good. The Carolina poplar will frequently grow in such places, and its use may sometimes be warranted.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.—A large, well illustrated folder, inscribed conspicuously with the call, "Memorial Day! Are You Ready?" and containing a comprehensive list of wreaths, prepared plants, vases and other decorative supplies, many of which will be especially in demand for May 30.

Sadie A. Thomas, Pasadena, Cal.—Twelfth annual catalogue of chrysanthemums; an illustrated, well printed, pocket-form booklet; sixteen pages, in a tasteful, light brown, marbled, gold-lettered cover. "We list one of the largest collections in the United States, thoroughly up-to-date," says the introduction.

Harry L. Squires, Good Ground, N. Y.—Illustrated catalogue of berry plants, grape vines, vegetable plants, mushroom spawn, bulbs and hardy flowering plants, roses and ornamental shrubs; thirty-two pages and colored cover. The prices are not quoted in the main body of the catalogue, but in a condensed list at the end.

Steele's Pansy Gardens, Portland, Ore.—A well printed wholesale list of Mastodon pansies, the strain originated and developed at the Steele establishment. The stock of seeds comprises separate varieties of distinct color and form, as well as various mixtures. Directions are given in regard to the preparation of the ground for the germination of seeds and for the resetting of plants.

C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis.—"How Do You Invest Your Money?" an illustrated catalogue of bulbs, rambler roses, French hydrangeas, valley pips, sweet pea and cyclamen seeds; thirty-six pages, well printed on enameled paper and bound in a tasteful black and white cover. The query about investing money may seem to be a peculiar title for a catalogue, but its significance is shown in the first sentence of the introduction. "Every time you purchase stock that is to bring you returns you are making an investment," as well as in such catch phrases as these: "Importing Bulbs vs. American Jobber" and "Patronize an American House in America."

SEATTLE NOTES.

main store into the workroom and also in the front window, the whole making a picture that has elicited much comment.

The demand for bedding stock at the store of the Art Floral Co. has shown no sign of any let-up and the same holds true for R. T. Boyce, who is also located near the market entrance.

The Seattle Fern & Moss Co. notes a continuation of the shipping business which will surpass last year's total by a good margin, and also a pleasing increase in the number of customers.

Melby's Flower Shop is still featuring some fine red and salmon geraniums for replanting, with good results; the weather has brought out more people who can be reached by a doorway display.

Rosaia Bros. are getting an increased cut of roses, and with this stock recently developed a most attractive window of Ophelia, Columbia and Premier. There has been some increase in social decorative work of late.

The Rainier Floral Co. has been one of the heaviest sellers of bedding stock on the local market this year.

Felix Rosaia has been using the front of his store to display various plants and bushes for replanting; these items have proved popular sellers.

The Orpheum Floral Co. enjoyed an exceptional business, starting early in the week of the holiday, and reports a heavier outgoing telegraph business than at any other holiday of the present season.

The Pinehurst Floral Co. has enjoyed a better transient business with the return of really good summer weather, and special window displays of flowers that would attract women passing by have been profitable.

The Bon Marche Flower Shop did a fine Mothers' day business, this being one of the heaviest sales holidays since this shop has been established.

Kenney's made a fine clean-up of stock for Mothers' day, and Will Desmond had a good-sized extra crew on hand for this event. H. M.

Columbus, Pa.—H. A. Gergensmeyer has opened a flower shop at 212 Locust street. He will handle cut flowers and potted plants and will furnish designs for funerals.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

HEATING FIVE HOUSES.

We have sent you a plan of the greenhouses which we are going to build and should like to have you suggest a plan for the heating arrangements. There will be five houses, each 18x90 feet. There is a slope to the north of about two and one-half feet. The boiler room will be located at the lower side of the houses. Our plan is to make four benches in each house. The side benches will be two and one-half feet wide and the two inside benches will be four feet wide, with two 18-inch walks between them and the side benches and a 2-foot walk between the center benches.

It is our plan to use three 2-inch flows and eight 2-inch returns. One flow will run on each side of the gutter plate and one through the center. The center flow will have four 2-inch returns, two under each middle bench. Each side flow will have two 2-inch returns. We want to run two main flows and two main returns along the center walk. How large should we have the main flow and return? The return will be level with the top of the boiler. The two side houses, which join the boiler room, will be heated separately from the boiler.

We have an American Radiator Co. sectional steam boiler, No. S.22-7, with a 24x42-inch grate. The boiler also has three 4-inch flows and six 4-inch returns. We should like to be able to carry 60 degrees in zero weather and use natural gas. The side walls of the houses will have four feet of double boards, with paper between, and two feet of glass. The ridge will be eleven feet high. Will this boiler be large enough to take care of the heating problem?
B. G.—W. Va.

The sketch shows the boiler room to be located in the middle of the north house and exactly north of the center of each of the other houses. From the boiler room a 3-foot walk runs across the middle of each house. For convenience the hot water mains should run in this walk, but it will not work out well. It would be preferable to run the houses north and south, with the boiler room at the north end.

With houses piped as proposed, there would be no difficulty in keeping up a temperature of 60 degrees, when it is 10 below zero outside, except in the south house, which has two feet of exposed glass. An additional return would be required for 60 degrees in this house.

For 50 degrees it will only be necessary to run a 2½-inch flow pipe on each of the gutter plates and connect each flow pipe with a coil of three 2-inch returns. This would mean two 2 1/2-inch flows and six 2-inch returns in each house, instead of three flows and eight returns as planned.

This arrangement would furnish about 2,300 square feet of radiation, and it would be advisable to use a heater rated at 3,500 square feet. We do not know the rating of the A. R. Co. boiler S.22-7, but presume it will not be above 3,000 square feet of hot water radiation.

This is considerably less than would be desirable for the economical operation of the plant, and is even less than the actual amount of radiation that will be installed if the plan of using three 2½-inch flows and eight 2-inch returns is followed.

On the contrary, experience shows that for economy of labor and fuel, a heater with a rating of from fifty to 100 per cent larger than the required radiation is desirable if soft coal is to be used as fuel.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Conditions in the local market last week were bad, and the growers and wholesalers were in accord in declaring that they had witnessed the worst glut of this year. Carnations were offered at from $10 to $15 per thousand and met with no takers. The wholesalers could not get rid of them under any conditions.

Large quantities of roses are coming into Washington from out of town, but as they arrive partly open, it is not usually possible to find customers for them. Good long-stemmed stock sold in large quantities during the week when a customer could be found at from $40 to $60 per thousand. The general run of good roses, sold in smaller quantities, were held at from $4 to $15 per hundred.

Peonies helped to flood the market, but a great many of them were sold to retailers wishing to put them in cold storage for Memorial day business. They were offered at from $20 to $40 per thousand. The best of the locally grown stock, however, ran as high as $8 and $10 per hundred.

Gladioli are becoming more plentiful, as a great many are shipped in from the south. The shipped-in stock sold last week at as low as $30 per thousand, while the best of the locally grown stock brought as high as $15 per hundred and the ordinary stock $10 and $12.

Some good delphiniums are to be had, always popular flowers in Washington.

Just now they are priced at from 75 cents to $1.50 per dozen.

American Beauty roses are moving quite slowly, and the best could be had last week at $25 per hundred. A great many of the growers are bringing in Easter lilies at this time, and while the stock is quite good, they do not move well. The price was $12 and $15 per hundred.

There was a glut of sweet peas early in the week, but owing to dark weather the latter part of the week it was impossible to find a sufficient quantity of good stock to fill the demand. The best stock is selling at about $10 per thousand. There are many flowers such as sweet william, weigela, golden privet, pansies and Japanese iris on the market, but they are not selling.

Various Notes.

Fred G. Heintz, of Terre Haute, Ind., son of the late John G. Heintz, stopped in Washington on his way home from a visit to New York city.

Harry Payne, the F street florist, is on the sick list.

William F. Gude, president of Gude Bros. Co., announces that work is under way to put the two stores at 1210 and 1212 F street, adjoining the present establishment, in shape for the removal of the business thereto. A Kroeschell ice machine is to be installed and Buchbinder Bros., of Chicago, have been given a contract to do the interior work and install the iceboxes. It is the intention of the firm to throw these two stores into one, and to make that possible it is necessary to install beams down the center and remove the pillars that would otherwise obstruct the view of the interior. The modern improvements will make the store stand out as one of the leading establishments of the country in point of outfitting. The property belongs to the company, having been purchased a couple of years ago in anticipation of the expiration of the lease on the present quarters. Mr. Gude, in making this announcement, states also that special facilities will be provided to expedite telegraph business, both incoming and outgoing, particularly for rush periods, such as Easter and Christmas. He expects to be better able to operate the business of the concern in the new quarters, because it will be more up-to-date.

BOSTON NOTES.

feel confident that a number of changes will be forthcoming before long, in spite of the fact that some nurserymen, citrus growers and two orchid firms support the quarantine. Orchid specialists are amused at the claims that orchid seedlings, mainly cattleyas, can be flowered in three and a half years. The writer has flowered one or two hybrids in that time, usually not of the best quality, but an average of eight years is necessary to flower the average cattleya hybrids, and the question is, if the quarantine is retained unmodified as regards orchids, who will support orchid seedling raisers for the next six or eight years until their seedlings bloom?

W. N. Craig spoke before the Parents' and Teachers' Association of Wakefield on "Gardening for Pleasure and Profit," May 23.

At the ladies' night of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, June 20, there will be the finest entertainment ever given on such an occasion. J. Harris, of Penn's, knows how to secure an aggregation of talent and a rousing attendance is certain. The Swedish glee club, of thirty voices, should prove especially good.

Carbone's deserve commendation for the splendid stand they have taken in advertising that they will hereafter refuse to carry or sell any mountain laurel, ground pine or mayflowers. Who will be the next up-to-date firm to come in line?

It is most regrettable to note the increasing tendency to discourage the sending of flowers to funerals. In one issue of last week's Boston Transcript, two-thirds of the whole number of obituaries contained the too common "Kindly omit flowers," or, "Friends are earnestly requested not to send flowers." In an issue of the Boston Herald, May 18, all but four of the death notices contained the same lines. Of course, many flowers are sent in spite of these notices, but what is the reason for the increased use of such notices and what can be done to discourage their use among the well-to-do classes? "Say It with Flowers" and "Kindly omit flowers" in the same column jar, to say the least.

The R. & J. Farquhar Co. reports an exceptionally large sale of trees and shrubs this season. Rhododendrons, of which the company grew an extensive stock from seed, have sold extremely well. Of these about 60,000 are grown

AJAX BLACK GLAZING CEMENT

A PRACTICAL glazing material made for application in a practical manner. No clumsy, slow-working tools necessary—simply a putty bulber or two and a filling gun to load them—furnished free to users.

Ajax Black Glazing Cement has been used throughout the country for several years with excellent results.

NOT AFFECTED BY EXTREME HEAT OR COLD

Our product is a cement-like composition of Asbestos Fibres and heavy, semi-drying hydro-carbon oils. Its exceptionally long life is due to the fact that it never thoroughly hardens like old-fashioned white putty. The outside surface (which is exposed to the oxygen of the air) forms a resilient, tough skin, below which the material remains soft and plastic. Because of this we guarantee that the coldest weather will not cause it to become brittle or pull away. On the other hand our product is warranted not to sag or run in extremely hot weather, due to its being interlaced with the Asbestos Fibres.

As Ajax Black Glazing Cement never thoroughly hardens, glass glazed with it can be shifted when desired without the loss of breakage that so often results when hard-drying white putties are used.

Easily applied with a bulber. No clumsy tools necessary.

LOW COST

Compared with the old-fashioned White Lead putties, Ajax Black Glazing Cement not only lasts years longer, but is a great deal lower in initial cost.

One gallon is sufficient to glaze 500 lineal feet of sash.

M. S. CHAPIN & COMPANY

924 Belmont Ave.

Chicago

FREE OFFER

To facilitate the application of our products we furnish the following apparatus free of cost:

With each Barrel

2 Bulbers
1 Gun for filling bulbers

With each Half-Barrel

1 Bulber
1 Gun for filling
bulber

While primarily made to stop water leaks, so thoroughly does Ajax Black Glazing Cement hermetically seal up the sash, that it will soon pay for itself in the saving of heat that is otherwise lost through air voids. This fact has been demonstrated time and again, and we can prove it.

at the West Barnstable nursery. At present herbaceous plants and bedding stock are in strong demand. More than half the big stock of geraniums is already sold.

The A. Leuthy Co. states that, from present indications, local supplies of bedding plants, in which the firm specializes, will prove quite inadequate. Already the firm is practically cleaned out of some lines.

Frank Edgar has an extra fine lot of Memorial day plants. He has bought a large quantity of Kurume azaleas and sees a great future in them.

Local growers of carnations have planted out practically all their stock in the last few days and recent rains have given the young plants a fine start. Laddie is being planted more than ever, at the expense of Pink Delight.

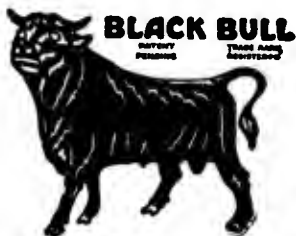

Duncan Finlayson is enjoying a month's vacation, serving as a jurymen in the Suffolk County Superior court, Pemberton square. W. N. C.

WORCESTER, MASS.

The trade in general is well employed, business is good and expectations for Memorial day are fine. Calls for nursery stock are greater by far than those of previous years. The weather has at last become more congenial for outdoor stock. Perennials are assuming a more healthy appearance. Several of the florists in this city refused to sell more than one dozen carnations to a customer during the call for Mothers' day.

The Worcester Horticultural Society held a successful show May 18. The weather was bad, but the exhibits, which consisted of groups, table displays and cut flowers, were of good quality. Premium winners in the various exhibits were Lange Bros., Iristhorpe; Mrs. White, of Holden, and others. A large pansy exhibit was especially fine. E. A.

RAIN WHEN YOU WANT IT

The portable lines are all equipped with the Famous Silver Stream Nozzles, which are self-cleaning—a patented, exclusive Skinner System feature.

What Then Is Thorough Watering?

My Dad, I'm glad to say, was a farmer.

A regular farmer, not a collar and cuff fellow who lived in town and rode out to the farm.

He always used to say that "most summer rains just washed the face of nature and packed the soil; when what growing things needed was a gentle rain, that was an honest-to-God sod-soaker, that got right down to the roots and staid there for a good spell."

Now you and I might set forth all kinds of theories on watering, from now till the cows come home, and at the end we would get right back to Dad's way of looking at it.

It's exactly the way we looked at it when designing the Skinner System of watering.

We designed a sod-soaking waterer and soil loosener; not just a surface wetter and packer.

To you it may look like just a pipe with holes bored and nozzles stuck in.

But it's taken a score of years of the hardest kind of hard work and costly experimenting to get it where it is.

And now it is where it is, it is a thorough watering system that does exactly what we say it will.

Which in turn is exactly what you want done.

It's all made up ready for prompt shipment.

200 foot portable sectional line costs only $79.75 complete.

WHEN YOU THINK OF GLAZING THINK OF
Puttium

THE NAME "McCALLUM" GUARANTEES ITS QUALITY

What is PUTTIUM?

PUTTIUM is the result of ceaseless research, exhaustive study and tests to determine the correct formula for a high-grade glazing material. It is a glazing cement that positively gives satisfaction, and is so guaranteed.

Why PUTTIUM gives Satisfaction

You will find NO TAR in PUTTIUM. Its basic ingredients are the purest Mexican Asphalt combined with just the proper proportions of Gilsonite and high-quality Canadian Asbestos. The caliber of the materials used together with the scientific mixing in proper proportions gives PUTTIUM the permanent elasticity so absolutely essential. It expands and contracts with extremes of weather. It will not run in summer or freeze in winter. It will not crack, peel or break. It is absolutely water-tight and air-tight.

Gray PUTTIUM

We have met the demand for a gray glazing cement by eliminating the Asphalt base of the Black Puttium and using instead a specially treated combination of non-volatile oils, heat-resisting gums and high-grade imported pigments. Combined with the right proportion of Asbestos Fiber, this produces a glazing cement that is unexcelled for all kinds of glazing work and is especially recommended for the bedding of glass.

Who makes PUTTIUM?

This is vitally important! The McCallum Company has always guaranteed its products. Its name has stood for integrity and fair dealing. Knowing exactly the requirements of the trade it has served for many years, the McCallum Company offers PUTTIUM to its customers firm in the belief that PUTTIUM successfully solves the glazing problem. It could not afford to stake its reputation on a fly-by-night proposition. PUTTIUM is just another link in the chain of McCallum Service to the trade. Insure yourself against deception and inferior products—ask for PUTTIUM—take no other.

How it comes

Puttium in Black or Gray is sold in steel drums and cans of various capacities. A gallon will glaze from 300 to 350 running feet of sash bar. Order according to your requirements. With a half barrel or more we furnish without charge the Malco One-Arm Glazing Gun. With it you can glaze with ease as far as the arm can reach. It produces a steady, uniform flow that is always under control.

NEWPORT, R. I.

There is every prospect of a gay summer season here this year, and the present indications are that there will be the largest number of summer residents here that there has been in a number of years. Already many of the estates, some of which have been closed for several seasons, are being put in condition. This means a greater demand for flowers than for the last few summers and preparations are being made to meet the demand.

In spite of the apparently backward spring, many small bushes are in full bloom, well in advance of Memorial day. In some years the lilaes have not bloomed in time for this holiday, but this year in many instances they have commenced to go by and will be entirely gone by May 30.

William Allan, gardener for Mrs. A. Hamilton Rice, is quite ill at his home on Coggeshall avenue.

The Newport County Fair Association celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary at Mayer hall, Middletown, May 17, with a supper and dance.

George Gibson, who recently removed to Portsmouth from Glen Cove, L. I., has taken a position at Sandy Point Farm, of the Superior court.

John J. Burke, John M. Lyneh and Florence C. Sullivan have been summoned as petit jurors for the June term of the superior court.

The prospects for a good fruit crop this season are said to be first-class over this entire section.

S. W. Coggeshall, 201 Thames street, reports an unusually heavy demand for flower and vegetable seed this spring.
W. H. M.

Petoskey, Mich.—“I am pleased to say I have had a wonderful trade,” says C. M. Grossman, of Evergreen Farm; “have had to turn down a great many orders and am returning checks every day; just have to stop or I shall have nothing left to plant. Am making arrangements to expand for the coming season.”

Jackson, Miss.—The Capitol Floral Co., of which Lindsey Cabaniss is manager, now operates three stores, the main one in the Texas building in this city, one at Vicksburg, Miss., which has been running long enough to demonstrate its success, and the newer store at Meridian, Miss. Business increases each year.

Safe and dependable for every use under glass or in the field.

SEEDLING CAMELLIAS.

I have about 250 Camellia japonica. Will you tell me what percentage is likely to give good flowers? What treatment do they require to make them bloom? Mine were sown last September, as soon as the seed ripened. They are now in 2-inch pots, mostly filled with roots.

M. W. R.—Ga.

If you will plant your seedling camellias out in a coldframe in a suitable compost, they will make much more satisfactory growth than if they are kept in pots. A good compost would consist of well rotted soil, to which is added a liberal dressing of leaf mold and sharp sand. Mix this well, plant your seedlings in it and, during the heat of the day, use lath screens over them. Remove these screens on dull days and during rainy spells. Each afternoon decrease the duration of shading, as the summer wanes. Dig and pot the plants before the frost arrives. The plants will be benefited by frequent, light sprayings. Azaleas of the indica and Kurume types will thrive well, similarly treated.

Probably a good many of your seedlings will carry single flowers, but these are popular with many people. It is not easy to predict what proportion will produce fine double flowers; suffice it, however, to say that camellias are increasing in favor a great deal in the northern states and you will have no trouble in selling any plants you can grow, either single or double. Since quarantine 37 went into force, none has come in from Europe, and most of our camellias came from there previously? I think you might well go into the growing of seedling camellias on a large scale, as they are an increasingly scarce article in the great market centers of the north.

T. D. S.—Pa.

If flowers are wanted in the fall or early winter, seed should be sown in June or July, according to the section of the country. They grow well in either light or heavy soil, prepared with about one-fifth well rotted manure. If plants are to remain over one crop, light feeding may be done. Apply dressing as a mulch or in liquid form and see that the soil is kept moist. Healthy plants will use considerable quantities of water, as their root systems are heavy. A common error is to give too little space to plants set in benches. Plenty of growing room results in strong plants, and a strong plant will not only give more and better blooms, but will have greater power to resist disease. The plants should be set from fourteen to eighteen inches apart. Plants suffer on bright or windy days from wilting, if they are not kept watered, but water may be withheld in cloudy or rainy weather, thus avoiding excessive moisture in the houses. Rust, like many contagious human diseases, thrives best in congested areas. Air, sunlight and watchful care are the best means available for prevention of this troublesome fungus. Another preventive measure is to keep the foliage covered with powdered sulphur. Apply the powdered sulphur with bellows, or by any other convenient method, at every stage of growth from seedlings to the blooming plants. Do not apply it after the blooms appear. Plants should be fumigated regularly to control green fly. If tobacco stems are used for fumigating, be careful not to scorch the leaves.

DISEASED LILIUM CANDIDUM.

We have mailed you some Liliun candidum which are badly affected with a disease which we are unable to diagnose. The person who owned these bulbs has always had the best of success with lilies until this spring, when about 100 of the plants became affected in the manner indicated by the plants mailed to you. Can you advise us what the disease is and how to combat it?

R. G.—Ill.

The diseased foliage on L. candidum outdoors is quite common. One year the plants may be perfectly clean and the next year they may be badly affected with the disease. The foliage usually starts to go about the time the buds show on the stalks, but occasionally it is earlier. Certain climatic conditions are favorable for the beginning and the spread of this disease. To counteract it and make certain that the plants will be clean, it is absolutely necessary to spray with Bordeaux mixture, or some other good fungicide, from the time the plants start to grow in the spring until buds show color, spraying once a week. Lime, I fear, will not be of any value in checking the disease.

Helena, Mont.—By means of colored slides shown in the two motion picture theaters and of a most attractive folder in two colors, the State Nursery & Seed Co. developed large sales for Mothers' day.

Kane, Pa.—The Kane Greenhouses sold everything available for Mothers' day, the result of judicious advertising and a loyal clientele. Mr. Magnuson has built a reputation in this town on quality first and service to equal it. His sales give him confidence such a policy is the best.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Baum's Home of Flowers used a half page in the Saturday Journal and Tribune to announce an unlimited supply of flowers for Mothers' day, featuring short-stemmed carnations for boutonnieres at 10 cents and roses at 25 cents. Resultant business was excellent.

Roundup, Mont.—A half-page advertisement in the Roundup Record May 12, distinctive because of its realistic illustration of mother, seated next an oil lamp on the table and asleep over the stockings she is darning, made Mothers' day an occasion of record-breaking sales for the Roundup Floral Co.

Kimberly, Wis.—An advertisement placed in the Appleton Post-Crescent by the local American Legion post urging the observance of Mothers' day by means of flowers was regarded by William Geenan as the best publicity the day could have had. Sales for the holiday made a record with him.

Akron, O.—Hammerschmidt & Clark have discontinued their retail store, at 12 West Market street. The lease of the firm has expired and the building which the firm occupied will be torn down to widen the street. All of the store fixtures of the firm are being moved to its greenhouses at Medina. The members of this firm report a good business for Mothers' day.
